A COMPANION OF THE PARTY OF THE PREFACE

Svāmī Dayānanda's supreme effort in life was to give back to the world the Vedas, the ancient treasure-house of Divine Knowledge. He had taken a long and deep immersion into the perennial stream which quenched his thirst and filled his soul with indescribable solace. He had wandered long and far and wide in dismay before he visioned the light, the light of true and virgin Dharma, as revealed in the Vedas. He was a parivrājaka (a homeless preacher-prince), and the whole humanity was his congregation. He declared that the Vedas were for the lowliest of the low and for the highest of the high. They were the fountain-head from which flowed the nectar of eternal virtue and true knowledge in a never-dying stream to slake the thirst of all the children—the babes and the grown-ups of the Divine Mother. To this fountain-head of peace and purity he invited the misguided mankind and asked them to quench their thirst. This was his mission and for this he lived and died.

As a transparent and pure stream flowing from the silver-white snows gets adulterated in its downward march with muddy streamlets and dirty drains which pollute its purity, so had this eternal stream of Divine Lore become polluted with streamlets of diverse human errors. Dayānanda saw this and saw even much more. There had been commentators and interpreters who had grossly misinterpreted the Veda. It was, therefore, his mission to interpret the Veda in a proper and genuine manner.

Vedic scholarship in India, in the true sense of the term, appears to have ceased with the great work of Yāska — the Nirukta. In fact, among the ancient Vedic commentaries, only the Brāhmaṇas and the Nirukta have come down to us. That there were other works is amply proved by the fact that Yāska mentions several of them. The commentaries of Sāyaṇa, Skanda, Venkaṭa, Mahīdhara, etc., are of recent times. All of them belong to a time later than Yāska's. According to Dayānanda these commentaries were gross misinterpretations. He based his commentary on the Brāhmaṇas and the Nirukta and rejected all other commentaries. His interpretations are based mainly on the etymological method.

All this explains the importance of Dayananda and his great work, the Rgvedādi-Bhāṣya-Bhūmikā, which I am presenting to the English-knowing people in the garb of English. I am sure the modern Vedic scholar in India as well as in other countries will be benefited greatly by this work.

The present work has been undertaken with a twofold object: first, to assist the critical scholars as well as the laymen in their studies of the Vedas, particularly its theme and method of interpretation; and secondly, to furnish them with the technical, historical and other cognate matters, relevant to their critical and comparative study.

The introductory part embodies information of general character. It also contains discussions on the problems which hitherto have remained in some respects untouched and untraced by the scholars. Some of the topics which involve endless controversies in the modern Vedic scholarship have also been critically examined so as to show the merits and demerits of Dayānanda's method of interpretation of the Veda.

So far the Vedas were read and understood in India and in occident as they were interpreted by Sāyaṇa and others or by occidental scholars (i.e., partly in accordance with the so-called traditional method of interpretation offered by Europeans). But the true Indian point of view remained unknown hitherto in India as well as abroad. A sincere effort in this direction has been made here for the first time.

It may be stated here that a chapter on the life and teachings of Svāmī Dayānanda, based on all available biographies written by various scholars, including Gopal Rao Hari, the contemporary author of Digvijayārka, Lekh Ram, Devendra Nath Mukerjee, Bawa Chhajju Singh, Lala Lajpat Rai and others, has been appended at the end (pp. 462-88) for the curious readers. It has been kept brief but I could not resist the temptation of giving the accounts of events (and also adding new facts) as given by Lala Laipat Rai, the devout disciple of Svāmī Dayānanda and the great martyr of India's liberation. I have also reproduced, in original (pp. 476-79), the article which was published in the Christian Intelligencer in 1870, detailing the whole account of the śāstrārtha (disputation) held in Varanasi in November, 1869 between all the panditas of Kāśī on one side and Dayananda alone on the other,. The writer of this article was a Christian missionary who himself was present there. This valuable piece of evidence is still preserved in the library of Church Missionary Society in London.

The second part is the English translation of the Rgvedādi-Bhāṣya-Bhūmikā from the original Sanskrit which Dayānanda wrote before writing the commentary on the four Vedas. This work is much more voluminous than Sāyaṇa's introduction to the Rg-bhāṣya. It covers 400 closely printed pages and contains exhaustive discussions on topics which could not be even imagined by Sāyaṇa.

Dayānanda's Rgvedādi-Bhāṣya-Bhūmikā is a unique work in the field of Vedic scholarship. Almost all Vedic works and other scriptural and philosophical treatises in Sanskrit have been quoted in this work. It contains more than one thousand citations from all spheres of Sanskrit literature, including three hundred verses from the Vedas.

It was not an easy job to translate such a technical work into English. I may add here that Dayānanda has interpreted many verses and citations from the Vedic literature in his own way, quite differently from the generally accepted conceptions and interpretations, and has drawn radically different conclusions. I have remained faithful to him and have tried to convey to the reader what our author aimed at. I am conscious that my translation is only an humble attempt and is open to criticism at many places, but all the same, it is a very sincere effort to clearly convey the idea of the original to the reader. I have added exhaustive critical and comparative notes on controversial points. Thus it is not merely a faithful translation but a complete bhāṣya on the Rgvedādi-Bhāṣya-Bhūmikā. I venture to say that I have made efforts to explain the things and not merely to 'explain them away'.

In the end it is my pleasant duty to thank all scholars from whose works I have frequently quoted. I am sincerely thankful to my supervisor, Dr. Vishva Bandhu, Honorary Director of the Vishveshvarananda Vedic Research Institute, Hoshiarpur (Punjab) for his encouragement and suggestions.

INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER I

IMPORTANCE OF THE WORK

1. BACKGROUND OF THE NEW BHASYA ON THE VEDAS

Rsi Dayānanda called upon his countrymen "to go back to the Vedas" for eradicating all evils and ills of their society. It was his long meditated and well-founded conception that the cause of degradation and slavery of Indian nation was the ignorance of true Vedic teaching and the spread of the Paurānika culture and thoughts instead. Unless his countrymen again resorted and adhered to and followed the Vedic path, no progress was possible in social, political, economic, spiritual and religious spheres. Salvation lay only in adoption, acceptance and faithfully following the dynamic and radical ways of life as propounded in the Vedas.

But according to him the real and true significance and correct concept of the Vedas could not continue to remain in vogue after the great Mahābhārata war. True Vedic scholars and real interpreters of the Vedas, e.g., Yāska. etc., left the world, by and by, giving place to the confused and self-centred new type of priestly class who reserved the right of the Vedas to themselves only. Countless and conflicting religious cults, professing Vedic origin (without rightly studying the Vedas), appeared in our society. They began to kill and sacrifice cow, horse and even human beings in the Yajñas, e.g., Gomedha, Aśvamedha, Naramedha, and others. They forgot where all types of Himsā is forbidden. Drinking of wine, meat-eating (including beef) and illicit sexual intercourse, without sparing even sisters and mothers, in the so called "Bhairavī Cakra", were regarded as the ways of attainment of salvation by Vāma-Margins. Vedic stanzas were wrongly interpreted by them and others in support of their ill-conceived and selfish conceptions. Mahīdhara, Uvvaṭa and Sāyaṇa wrote commentaries on the Vedas under the influence of mystic cults of Tantras, Purāṇas and Vāma-Marga scriptures. This caused the birth of the Cārvāka sect, Buddhism and Jainism who rejected Vedic path (as known to them) and bitterly condemned it. Thus the long forgotten tradition of correct Vedic interpretation could not reach Sāyaṇa and others, and they interpreted the Vedas in the way opposed to the Brāhmaṇas and the Nirukta. In this way, the glory and dignity of the Vedic culture and its sublime principles were lost. Oriental and Occidental Vedic scholars were led astray and they could not find out the real concept and true significance of the Vedas.

2. DAYANANDA'S GREAT CONTRIBUTION

Dayananda laboured hard to churn out the nectar from the fathomless ocean of the Vedas. He dived deep and explored precious gems of Vedic secrets. He studied the Vedas intensively and perceived the light in deep meditations. He then assessed the value of Vedic import and light and wanted to ward off the eclipse of wrong interpretations from the Vedic Sun. In order to achieve this end, it was unavoidable for him to write a fresh and correct commentary on all the Vedas to frustrate and foil all blemishes of current commentaries which have grossly ill-interpreted the Vedas. He clearly says:—

येनाधुनिकमार्थ्यः ये टीकाभिः वेद-दूषकाः । दोषाः सर्वे विनश्येषुः अन्ययार्थ-विवर्णनाः ॥ सत्यार्थश्च प्रकाश्येत वेदानां यः सनातनः ॥ (Rgvedādi-Bhā sya-Bhūmika)

He, therefore, thought to compose a commentary on the Vedas on the lines of ancient Rsis and Munis. He adds:—

But the time and circumstances were not favourable. It was an age when the Vedic texts were not easily available. Vedic scholars were rare. Study of the Vedas was not in vogue. Kāśī, the home of Sanskrit learning, was bereft of a real Vedic Pandita. Large number of Vedic recensions (Śakhas) and the Brahmanas had long disappeared. Even the actual Vedas were hardly to be found out in India. No state protection could be expected from the foreign British rule who wanted to propagate their own religion and culture in India. The royal patronage available even to Sayana and Hari Svamin was a thing of the remote past. Vedic Panditas, who were easily available as help to Sayana and Skanda-Svamin, had gone into oblivion. In such a tiring atmosphere Rsi Dayananda, because of his deep learning, penance and dedication, could muster a few faithful followers on whose scanty financial assistance he embarked on this most important and lavishly costly project of producing Veda-Bhaşyas. For this highly dynamic and deeply patriotic adventure, he had to sacrifice his all, including his hard-earned Divine Bliss of meditation. He himself confirms it in his correspondence. He writes:-

Curses of caste system, idolatry, untouchability, all types of superstitions and slaughtering of animals in the sacrifices, and even the human sacrifices (Nara-medha), were the results of wrong Vedic interpretations and thus the Hindus had to pay heavily for all these short-comings. Rsi Dayananda's scientific interpretations on the Vedas inspired hope and courage in the nation and people began to feel proud of their rich heritage and lofty principles preached in the Vedas. India will remain indebted to this great sage for leading her to her glorious past.

3. IMPORTANCE OF THE RGVEDADI-BHASYA-BHUMIKA

We have already described the importance of this work in our Preface and would discuss this matter later at the proper place. It would suffice here to say that this work in our opinion occupies the uppermost place in all his works, because this book embodies detailed discussions on all the fundamental principles on which his Vedic commentary is based. If they are correct, authentic, logical and credible, and also if they are supported by valid and cognate evidences, the whole of his commentary on the Vedas is acceptable. But if these are not valid and are not credible, then not only his entire Veda-Bhāsya is inadmissible but the whole structure of his entire mission and work would also be deemed baseless and will crumble down like a house of cards. Hence, this work is regarded supreme among all his works. This work is not an Introduction to the Commentary on the Rgveda only but it is related to all the four Vedas on which he intended to write Bhasyas. It is clearly indicated by the title of the work itself and is expressively confirmed by our author in the Bhasya on the Yajurveda-

> भ्रोर सब विषय भूमिका में प्रकट कर दिया। वहां देख लेना। क्योंकि उक्त भूमिका चारों वेदों की है। (p.8)

"For all these topics the reader may refer to the said Bhūmikā because it is an introduction to all the four Vedas."

The fundamental and essentially primary important position of this great work is further indicated by the fact that Rsi Dayānanda forbade the sale of his dynamic commentary on the Vedas to persons who wanted to purchase it alone without having first purchased this book. He, however, allowed the sale of this "Bhūmikā" without the actual Veda-Bhāsya. It is clearly stated in the following advertisement published on the third and fourth pages of the title cover of the Rgveda, and the Yajurveda Bhasyas, respectively—

"जो कोई भूमिका के बिना वेद हो केवल लिया चाहे सो नहीं मिल सकते। किन्तु भूमिका ४) देने से पृथक् मिल सकतो है।"

4. PLACE AND DATE OF STARTING IT

Our author commenced writing this Bhūmikā during his stay in Ayodhyā. Devendra Nath mentions this fact in his Biography of Svāmī Dayānanda (Hindi) in the following words—

माद्रपद १४ सं० १९३३ वि० श्रयीत् १८ अगस्त सन् १८७६ को स्वामी जी श्रयोध्या पहुँच कर सरयू बाग में चौधरी गुरु चरण लाल के मन्दिर में उतरे। अयोध्या में भाद्र शुक्ला प्रतिपदा सं० १९३३ विक्रम अर्थात् २० अगस्त १८७६ ई० को ऋग्वेदादि माध्य भूमिका का लिखना प्रारम्भ हुआ।

5. THE WRITING OF BHASYA

Commencement

Maharsi Dayānanda started writing his regular and running commentary on the Vedas, preceded by the Rgvedā di-Bhāsya-Bhūmikā, from the first day of the lunar fortnight of Bhādrapada, 1933 of Vikrama era (20th August, 1876), and he mentions this date in the introductory verses of this work in the following words—

कालरामाङ्कचन्द्रेऽब्दे (1933) भाडमासे सिते दले । प्रतिपद्यादित्यवारे भाष्यारम्भ: कृतो मया ॥

"I commenced writing this great commentary on Sunday, the first day of the bright half of the lunar month of Bhadrapada in the year 1933 (Vikram era)."

First Rough Draft

Approximately it took three months to finish the first rough draft of this work. But there is no clear or specific internal evidence in support of this theory. Yudhisthira Mīmāmsaka finds a reference to this effect in the following two advertisements, read together, dated bright half of Mārgaśīrṣa 15, Samvat 1933, issued by the author indicating the progress of his Veda Bhāṣya—

- (क) संवत् १९३३ वि० मार्गशोर्ष शुक्ला पूर्णमासी (१ दिसम्बर १६०६) पर्यन्त दश हजार श्लोकों का प्रमाण भाष्य बन गया है और कम से कम ४० श्लोक श्रौर श्रिधिक से ग्रिधिक १०० श्लोक पर्यन्त प्रतिदिन भाष्य को रचते हैं।
- (ख) सो मूमिका के श्लोक न्यून से न्यून संस्कृत और श्रार्य माषा के मिला के आठ हजार हुए हैं। (Patra-Vyavahara, pp. 40, 46)

It can be easily concluded from this statement that the author finished the first draft of his manuscript about the end of the first week of Margasirsa, i.e. he took nearly 3 months to finish his first draft of this work.

The book was revised and enlarged at least six times before a final press copy of the same was prepared, as is evident from the six different copies of manuscripts preserved in the office of the Paropakāriṇī Sabhā in Ajmer. The final version appears to bave come into existence on Saturday, the sixth day of the dark fortnight of Phalguṇa in 1933. This fact is corroborated from the following internal evidence from this book.

From this statement it can be presumed that the work of finalising the press copy of the treatise was undertaken in the last week of Magha or in the beginning of Phalguna in 1933 (V. E.).

Date of Publication

It is not certain when the work of printing of this treatise was started. The work was published not in one single volume at first but in 16 numbers (issues) out of which the first issue was printed at Lajras Press, Kāśī, and the year of publication is mentioned on its title page as 1934 (V. E.). It also bears the following notification on its title page—

विहित हो कि सं० १९३४ वैशाख महीने में देश पंजाब के लुधियाना वा समृतसर में स्वामी हयानन्द सरस्वती जी निवास करेंगे।

It clearly indicates that the printing of this issue commenced in Phalguna, 1933 and the first volume came out in Caitra, 1934.

The last one volume of this treatise containing the 15th and 16th numbers was printed at the Nirnaya Sāgara Press, Bombay in Vaiśākha, 1935 (V. E_i). Thus 13 months were spent in the printing of this work.

6. THE MANUSCRIPTS OF BHASYA-BHUMIKA

There are six manuscripts of the Rgvedadi - Bhāṣya - Bhūmikā, preserved in the office of the Paropakāriṇī Sabhā, Ajmer, which governs the Vedic Yantrālaya there. The press copy of the manuscript is not traceable now. It is presumed that the same might have been lost in the Lajras Press, Kāśī where the first edition of the work was mostly printed. We write below a brief description of the six available manuscripts—

Manuscript No. 1

It is complete and it contains Sanskrit text only. The paging is regular till the end. Eight pages dealing with grammatical rules are appended and after the 87th page four pages are added. Thus total pages are 147 (135+4+8=147). Lines: 32 lines per page and about 24 letters per line. Paper: Thin, blue in colour and ruled. Last eight pages are on thick hand-made paper. Scribe: The writing shows three different hands. Pp. 1 to 60, pp. 61 to 63 and p. 64 to the last page are in different hands. Corrections: The author made corrections in it in black and red inks here and there. 'Hartal' is also used at many places.

Manuscript No. 2

It also contains Sanskrit text only. It is also complete. Pages: 140. Lines: 30 or 32 on each page. Letters: About 24 letters per line. Paper: Superior, glazed, ruled, and blue upto page 31; thereafter, thick, glazed, white and indigenous. Scribe: Handwriting indicates 2 hands. Corrections.: In red ink and black pencil (and sometimes black ink) used by the author himself here and there for corrections.

Manuscript No. 3

Incomplete manuscript upto "Veda-Nityatva" only. It contains both Sanskrit and Hindi versions. Pages: 51. Lines: Approximately 16 per page. Letters: About 36 per line. Paper: Hand-made, thick and white. Corrections: Only in the hand of the writer. 'Hartal' is also used sometimes.

Manuscript No. 4

- (A) This manuscript has two portions. It is complete but the matter contained in pages 377 to 399 of the printed text is missing. It is only upto the topic on "Ganita Vidya" and contains both Sanskrit and Hindi versions. Pages: 10 pages added after 147. Total 190 (180+10=190). Lines: About 16 per page. Letters: About 36 per line. Paper: Hand-made. Corrections: In red and black ink by the author himself.
- (B) The second portion commences after the above stated topic. It has Hindi version only. Pages: 138 (Page 4 has wrongly been repeated). Lines: 26 per page. Letters: About 26 per line. Paper: Blue. Scribe: It is written in more than two hands. Corrections: Made by the author in black ink.

Manuscript No. 5

It has also two portions "A" and "B".

- (A) Pages: 1 to 209. Lines: About ten per page. Letters: About 42 per line. Paper: White, thick, hand-made. Scribe: Written in many hands. Corrections: By the author himself.
- (B) Pages: 112 to 322. Lines: About 26 per page. Letters: About 42 per line. Paper: Blue and ruled. Scribe: Many hands. Corrections: Done by the author himself in a large number of cases.

Manuscript No. 6

Complete from beginning to end. Pages: 410. Lines: About 27 per page. Letters: About 24 per line. Paper: Blue and thick. Scribe: Written in many hands. Corrections: Corrected by the author himself in a large number of cases, but it has scribes' corrections also.

It may be noted here that none of the six manuscripts is a press copy, which might have been lost either in Lajras Press or Nirnaya Sagara Press where the first edition of the book was printed in parts. Thus, there were seven manuscripts in all, including the final press copy of this book.

7. THE PRINTED EDITIONS OF BHASYA

There are four publishers of this great work, namely (1) The Vedic Yantrālaya, Ajmer of the Paropakāriņī Sabhā founded by Svāmī Dayānanda himself; (2) M/s. Govind Ram Hasa Nand, Delhi; (3) The Ārya Sāhitya Mandal, Ajmer; and (4) Shri Ram Lal Kapur Trust, Amritsar. Each of them brought out a number of editions. I shall examine them very briefly as under:

I. Edition of Vedlc Yantralaya of Paropakarina Sabha

(a) The Lajras Press, and (b) The Nirṇaya-Sāgara Press: The first edition of the work was not published by any of the above-cited agencies. It was not published in one single volume, but in 16 partial issues, out of which the first 14 numbers were got printed by the author himself at Lajras Press, Kāśī, and the 15th and the 16th at the Nirṇaya Sāgara Press, Bombay. The title page of the first number of the book is dated as 1934 (V. E.) and also bears the following notification at the bottom of the page indicating the plausible date of publication:

''विदित हो कि सं० १९३४ वैशाख महीने में देश पञ्जाब लुधियाना वा ग्रमृतसर में स्वामी दयानन्द सरस्वती जी निवास करेंगे ॥''

It is clear from this that the work of printing of this issue was probably started in Phalguna, 1933 and the first issue was out in Caitra, 1934. The last volume containing both the 15th and the 16th numbers was printed in Niranya Sagara Press, Bombay in Vaiśakha, 1935 (V. E.). Thus it took 13 months approximately in the printing process.

(c) Vedic Yantrālaya Editions: The press of the Vedic Yantrālaya came into existence much later. Subsequent nine editions were printed at the Vedic Yantrālaya, Ajmer in single volumes containing Sanskrit and Hindi versions. This press also brought out another edition which contained Sanskrit version only. During the intervening period of the 5th and the 6th editions a Śatābdī edition was also brought out. Thus the Vedic Yantrālaya published eleven editions in all upto A.D. 1967.

II. Edition of Govind Ram Hasa Nand

This was edited by Shri Sukha Deva Vidyavacaspati of Gurukul Kangri and has improved upon the text.

III. Edition of the Arya Sahitya Mandal, Ajmer

It is only a faithful reprint of the Vedic Yantralaya edition and need not be examined separately here.

IV. Edition of Shri Ram Lal Kapur Trust

It was published in A.D. 1967 or 2024 (V.E.). This is the best of all the editions so far available.

Brief Comments

The Vedic Yantralaya Editions: The first edition brought out in 16 numbers contained some grammatical or linguistic errors which were corrected by the author himself in the corrigendum appended The second edition (Vedic Yantralaya) had the corrected version in accordance with the corrigendum of the first edition. In this edition we find improved and modified Sanskrit text to some extent at some places. All subsequent editions upto the fifth edition continued to be based on the second edition. Unfortunately the Satabdi Samskarana was again based on the erroneous text of the first edition and the corrigendum added to it remained neglected. Thus all the mistakes and errors of the first edition again crept into the body of the book. sixth and the seventh edition are identical with the Satabdi edition. eighth edition is the result of the editorial skill of the editor, Shri Mahendra Shastri. He created separate paragraphs for different topics and added references of some of the cited authorities. edition, edited by Shri Dharam Chand Kothari, contains revised and corrected text and is free from mistakes shown in the said corrigendum of the first edition. He also added new references and put them in the brackets. His footnotes are useful, though some of them are non-essential and a few indicate his grammatical immaturity. For instance, in his footnote on न पराजयात in the chapter on "Raja Dharma" he suggested a correction as न पराजयाता in place of न पराजयाते. But according to Yudhisthira Mīmāmsaka it is wrong, as पराजयाते is a grammatically correct form in let (लेट) tense which is used only in the Vedas.

Govind Ram Hasa Nand Edition: It is edited by Pandita Sukhdeva Vidyavacaspati of Gurukul Kangri. It is a commendable attempt at introducing new improvements, e.g. creation of separate paragraphs, separation of questions and answers, notes on difficult passages and improvement in Hindi version. In spite of all this, errors in Sanskrit text continued to exist as before.

Ram Lal Kapur Trust Edition: The Secretary, Ram Lal Kapur Trust, Amritsar [published a scholarly edition of this great work in A.D. 1967 which was edited by a known Vedic scholar, Shri Yudhişthira Mīmāmsaka. He took sufficient pains to make this publication faultless and authentic. He kept in view all the earlier editions and also collated original manuscripts and incorporated the missing or lost pieces of the text. His footnotes are praiseworthy and indicate his deep observation and mature thinking. This edition has many useful appendices indicating the editor's deep knowledge and mature critical faculty. This is the best of all available editions. But a critical edition is still desired.

8. COMMENTS ON HINDI VERSION

The Hindi translation given in all editions of this work is not correct and faithful to the original Sanskrit text. Rsi Dayananda wrote this work in Sanskrit only and the work of translation into Hindi was entrusted to Panditas engaged by him. The Hindi version fails to convey the real spirit and the sense of the original Sanskrit text. Sometimes it runs counter to it. At some other places it is against the accepted concept of the Vedic theology preached by the author. It has a large number of hopeless omissions and commissions. I give below one instance:

Sanskrit Text

एवमेकादश रुद्रा द्वादशादित्या मनः षष्ठानि ज्ञानेन्द्रियाणि वायुरन्तरिक्षं द्यौर्मन्त्राश्चेति । शरीररिहता: । तथा स्तनियत्नुविधियज्ञौ सशरीराशरीरे देवते स्तः ।।

Hindi Version

श्रीर ग्यारह रुद्र, बारह श्रावित्य, मन, श्रन्तरिक्ष, वायु, हो श्रीर मन्त्र ये मूर्त्तिरहित देव हैं तथा पांच ज्ञानेन्द्रियां, बिजुली श्रीर विधियज्ञ ये सब मूर्त्तिमान् श्रमृत्तिमान् दोनों हैं ॥

In the original Sanskrit text, five organs of sense are called as non-corporal Devas, while in Hindi they are said to be corporal as well as non-corporal. The futile clarification made in the footnote on the above Hindi version is not acceptable as it is against the original Sanskrit text.

CHAPTER II

DAYANANDA'S FAITH IN THE VEDAS

REVIVAL OF THE VEDIC RELIGION

Dayananda's chief aim was the revival of the Vedic religion and the reform of the abuse that had crept into Hindu society, and not the establishment of a new creed which would mean the uprooting of the venerable faith that had grown with growth of the Hindu nation. In the words of Professor Max Müller:

"He considered the Vedas not only as divinely inspired, but as pre-historic or pre-human."

To him every thing contained in the Vedas was perfect truth. In this matter he was in full agreement with the ancient theologians of India all of whom, without any exception, looked upon the Vedas as divine or super-human. To him a Church that ignored that basic principle of Faith was unthinkable—much more a Church that should be Aryan or Hindu in its origin and conception. His object was to revive the Vedic faith and the Vedic worship. He took his stand on the Vedas. These holy writings were his great weapon against the stronghold of latter-day corrupt Hinduism. Whatever was found in them was to him beyond the reach of controversy, and in this position he had the unanimous support of all that was sacred to the Hindu. Every branch of the sacred literature of the Hindus, from the very earliest times down to the most modern compositions of the different forms of Hindu faith, agreed on that point, and unhesitatingly accepted the authority of the Vedas as final and conclusive. We shall quote later all the relevant authorities to elucidate this point at length. In fact, in the whole range of Indian thought and Indian culture, the only dissenting voice on the point is that of the Buddhists, the Jainas and the Carvakas (i.e. atheists). Even the Brahmo Samaj had begun with faith in the revealed character and divine origin of the Vedas, Max Müller, in his Biographical Essays, says:

"Ram Mohan Roy also and his followers held for a time to the revealed character of the Vedas, and in all their early controversies with Christian Missionaries, they maintained that there was no argument in favour of the divine inspiration of the Bible, which did not apply with the same or even greater force to the Vedas."

(p. 168)

Speaking of Ram Mohan Roy, he further says:

"He never became a Mohammedan, he never became a Christian, but he remained to the end a Brahmana—a believer in the Vedas and in the One God, Who, as he maintained, had been revealed in the Veda."

(p. 33)

Thus the Vedas were the sheet-anchor of his propaganda and his scheme of reform. In the words of Max Müller, the idea had taken "such complete possession of his mind that no argument could ever touch it." It was impossible to shake him from that position, and this the leaders of Brahmo Samaj soon found out. So, the attempt to win him over to that Samaj had failed as early as 1869.

Thus we see that the Great Reformer did not attempt to bring about a new faith in the world. He attempted at the revival of the Vedic religion. It was certainly not his desire to impose his own faith on all who would join the Arya Samaj. He wanted them to follow the unanimous opinion of the great Arya sages, divines and scholars, who had made all that was glorious and sublime in the Hindu thought and Hindu culture; he himself was no more than an humble follower of his illustrious predecessors. Let me elucidate this point by citing below his own words which appear at the end of his great work called the Satyartha Prakāśa:

"My conception of God and all other objects in the Universe is founded on the teachings of the Vedas and other true Sastras, and is in conformity with beliefs of all the sages, from Brahma down to Jaimini. I offer a statement of these beliefs for the acceptance of all good men. That alone I hold to be acceptable which is worthy of being believed in by all men in all ages. I do not entertain the least idea of founding a new religion or sect."

He further adds :

"The four Vedas, the repository of knowledge and Religious Truth, are the word of God. They comprise what is known as the Sarihitās—Mantra portion only. They are absolutely free from error, and the supreme and independent authority in all things. They require no other book to bear witness to their divine origin. Even as the sun or a lamp is, by its own light, an absolute and independent manifestor of its existence—yea, it reveals existence of things other than itself—even so are the Vedas."

CHAPTER III

A CRITICAL STUDY OF THE VEDAS

THEIR IMPORTANCE

A prominent place in the history of world literature is due to the Vedas not only as the oldest Indian, but also the oldest Indo-European literary monument. This is the case too when we find that throughout 3000 years at least, millions of Hindus have looked upon the words of the Vedas as the word of God and that the Vedas have inspired them with feeling and thought. As the Vedas are the fountain-head of the Indian thought and culture, it is impossible for a man to understand and appreciate the cultural and spiritual life of India, without having deep insight into the Vedic literature.

Even the Buddhistic faith, whose birth place is India, would remain improperly understood for one who is a stranger to the Vedic lore. The teaching of Buddha is in the same relation to the Vedas as the New Testament is to the Old Testament. No one can understand India without knowing the Vedas.

IMPORTANCE FOR THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD

The study of the Rgveda is essential not only for complete understanding of the Indian culture and thought as well as the history of India, whether ancient or modern, it is essential also for the elucidation of the history of the world. To quote Professor Max Müller:

"In the history of the world, the Veda fills a gap which no literary work in any other language could fill. As long as man continues to take an interest in the history of his race and as long as we collect in libraries and museums the relics of former ages, the first place in the long row of books will belong for ever to the Rgveda."

(Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 65)

He further remarks:

"I maintain that to every body who cares for himself, for his ancestors, for his history, for his intellectual development, a study of the Vedic literature is indispensable."

Mons. Leon Delbos says:

"There is no monument of Greece or Rome more precious than the Rgveda."

Regarding the antiquity of the Veda, Sir W.W. Hunter remarks:

"The age of this hymnal (Rgveda) is unknown."

VEDA AND PHILOLOGY

Above all, the study of the Vedas is most important from the point of view of philology or the science of language. The study of language, as distinguished from the mere acquisition of language, is a growth of the last century, though it must be admitted that researches into the genealogies and affinities of words have exercised the ingenuity of numberless generations of acute and inquiring minds. Still nothing deserving the name of science was the result of these older investigations in the domain of languages. Those were merely hasty generalisations, baseless hypotheses, and inconclusive deductions. As in the case with every science in its early stage, the science of language, too, was attended with difficulties, namely, paucity of observed facts, and faulty standpoint. Whitney has rightly said:

"National self-sufficiency and inherited prepossession long helped to narrow the limits imposed by unfavourable circumstances upon the extent of linguistic knowledge, restraining that liberality of inquiry which is indispensable to the growth of a science."

(Language and Its Study, p. 2)

Thus in ancient times, every one thought his own dialect to be the oldest one with which to start and compare other dialects. Until very recently Latin and Greek were supposed to be the oldest and the most primitive known languages from which every European language was derived. But the restless and penetrating investigation which characterised the last century changed the whole aspect of the study, and linguists busied themselves with the study of the special relatiouship of the principal languages of Europe with one another and with the languages of South-Western Asia, which led to the postulation of the Indo-European family of languages.

Whitney further remarks-

"No single circumstance more powerfully aided the onward movement than the introduction to Western scholars, of Sanskrit, the ancient and sacred dialect of India. Its exceeding age, its remarkable conservation of primitive material and form, its unequalled transparency of structure give it an indisputable right to the first place among the tongues of the Indo-European family. Upon their comparison, already fully begun, it cast a new and welcome light, displaying clearly their hitherto obscure relations, recetifying their doubtful etymologies, illustrating the laws of research which must be followed in their study and in that of all other languages." (Ibid., p. 4)

Let me quote one more authority on the subject. Sayce, in his work The Science of Language, says:

"What has been termed the discovery of Sanskrit by Western scholars put an end to all the fanciful playing with words and created the Science of Language." (Vol. I, p. 38)

STUDY OF THE VEDAS IN FOREIGN UNIVERSITIES

From all this we can easily see what an important part the ancient Vedic Sanskrit has played in the domain of the science of language. The study of the Vedic literature has created, in reality, the philology. What I want to say here is that the Vedic Sanskrit is much older than the later Sanskrit which precedes Latin and Greek, and that it represents a state of civilisation, nowhere else represented. It provides us with many links, which are otherwise obscure. It is a matter of national pride for us that the Rgveda and other allied Vedic literature form a special and important subject of study at most of the important universities of Europe and America; an unparalleled activity in the domain of Vedic study is manifested every where; single words are studied critically and their history traced through all available works; indexes and glossaries are multiplied and exhaustive commentaries produced.

CHAPTER IV

WHAT IS THE VEDA?

DERIVATION OF THE WORD

The word 'Veda' means "knowledge', then "the knowledge par excellence." Sāyaṇa and others have derived the word Veda from the root Vid (विद्) 'to know' with suffix Ac or Ghañ, i.e., knowledge, sacred knowledge, holy learning. Dayānanda derives it from the following four roots:

- (a) Vid: to know (Adadi, Set, Parasmaipada)-Vetti.
- (b) Vid: to exist or to be (Divadi, Anit)—Vidyate.
- (c) Vid: to discriminate (Rudhādi, Anit)-Vinte.
- (d) Vidl: to obtain or acquire (Tudādi, Set)-Vindati or Vindate.

But to this list another fifth root can be added. The Dhātu-pāṭha reads Vid in the sense of Cetana, Ākhyana, and Nivāsa, (Curādi, Seṭ)—Vedayati or Vedayate. It means 'to make known, communicate, inform, apprise, tell or teach'. For instance, we have the following verse:

वेदार्थं स्वानवेदयत् ।

(S. K.)

Thus the Vedas are so called as all men or women know all true sciences in or through them, or as all true sciences exist in them, or as men become learned by studying them.¹

The following explanation of the word Veda, which is given by orthodox people is also based upon these derivations:

(1) विद्यन्ते ज्ञायन्ते तम्यन्ते वा एमि: धर्मादिपुरुषार्था इति वेदा: ।

(Br. Pratišakhya)

1. Cf. वेति सर्वाणि शास्त्राणि गर्वस्तस्य न विद्यते । वित्त धर्मं सदा सिद्धः तेषु पूजां च विन्दिति ॥ १ ॥ सत्तायां विद्यते ज्ञाने वेति विन्ते विचारणे । विन्दिति विन्दते प्राप्तौ श्यनुलुक्शनम्शेष्टिवदं कमात् ॥ २ ॥

This stanza also describes different Vikaranas,

- (2) इष्टप्राप्त्यनिष्टपरिहारयोरलौकिकमुपायं यो वेदयति स वेद:।
- (3) प्रत्यक्षेणानुमित्या वा यस्तूपायो न बुध्यते । एतं विदन्ति वेदेन तस्मात् वेदस्य वेदता ।।

The word Veda or its root Vid has commonly been found in almost all languages of the Indo-European family. For instance, Latin has the word Vidco; A. S. Witan; Goth. Vait; and English Wit. The undermentioned English words have also their origin in the root Vid:

"wit, wise, wisdom, witch, wizard, provide, vision, idea, visage, visor, revise, supervise, evidence, invidious, review, survey, view, device, visit, etc."

THE VEDA-THE WORD OF GOD

The Vedas are four in number: the Rgveda, the Yajurveda, the Samaveda and the Atharvayeda. The Aryas consider them to be the word of God. All Hindus are unanimous in regarding the Vedas as Godrevealed. According to them God revealed His knowledge to mankind in the beginning of creation, in order to guide man in all matters, religious as well as secular, during his sojourn on earth. This position is quite understandable. God could not have, it is argued, waited for giving His dispensation to mankind several thousands of years after the appearance of man on this earth. Thus the claims made by the Jews, the Christians and the Muslims, that the Bible and the Quran were the words of God. cannot be sustained. Leaving aside other reasons, one main ground for the rejection of this claim is that the earlier societies could not have been deprived of the benefit of Divine Guidance at the beginning of the creation of mankind. Hence the revelation of the Vedas (Divine Knowledge) in the very beginning is quite reasonable. The reasonableness and the desirability of Divine Guidance have successfully and logically been established by Dayananda in all his works. The interested reader is advised to read them with profit.

The authors of almost all the ancient Sanskrit works, available in more than 1000 texts even now, pay the highest homage to the Vedas. These religious and secular works in their turn have won the admiration of many Sanskrit scholars of the West. The authors of these works maintain the divine origin of the four Vedas.

Two kinds of evidence, internal and external, can be adduced to prove or disprove the proposition whether the Vedas are revealed.

INTERNAL EVIDENCE

Internal evidence, again, can be of two kinds: one referring to the claims preferred by the books themselves, the validity or the futility of their claims to be judged by the consistency or the inconsistency of what is urged; and the other, the quality of the stuff preserved. As regards the first, we have seen already that the Vedas do lay claims to the position of a revealed work and profess to have directly proceeded from divine source.

There are, according to the European scholars, traces in the Vedas of a belief, and data for the propounding of the theory, that all the Vedas did not come into existence at one and the same time, but even if there were such traces, they could not shake the position of the Vedas as revealed books. There are, so far as we can say, no contradictory statements in the Vedas, which must discredit even a secular book in the eyes of the critics. The following citations from the Vedas themselves clearly establish that the Vedas do profess the claim—

 तस्माव् यकात् सर्वेद्वतः ऋषः सामानि जिक्तरे । छन्वा¹⁹सि जिक्करे तस्माव् यजुस्तस्मादजायत ॥

[From that adorable God, the Rg-, the Sama-, the Chandas-(i.e. the Atharva) and the Yajurveda were produced.]

(RV. X.90.13), (YV. XXXI.7)

यस्मादृचो ग्रपातक्षन् यजुर्यस्मादपाकषन् ।
 सामानि यस्य लोमान्ययर्गाङ्गिरसो मुखम् ।
 स्कम्मं तं ब्र्ह्हिं कतमः स्विट्देवः सः ।।

[Who is that Great Being who revealed the Rgveda, the Yajurveda, the Samaveda and the Atharvaveda? He is the Supreme Spirit who has created the universe and sustains it.] (AV X.7.20)

Similarly we get the following verse which clearly supports this proposition—

3. कालावृष: सममयन् यजु: कालावजायत । कालेऽयमङ्गिरो देवोऽथर्वा चाधि तिष्ठत: ॥ (AV. XIX.54.5)

Citations can be multiplied from the Vedas themselves.

As regards the quality of the teachings of the Vedas, we can simply say that the Vedas, inculcating the worship of one Holy, Just and Merciful God, laying down a strict code of morality, and being scrupulously free from absurd theories and outrageous speculations, are the revelation of God, His word, His cherished message to His children below.

If revelation, in the sense in which it is taken by all believers in revelation, were a possibility, the Vedas will undoubtedly stand supreme and undisputably claim that high position. For God is just and perfect, and revelation is the one, the chief form in which He shows His mercy and love for mankind, it must have been given in the beginning and God should not have had any reason to alter His former decree or stand in need of a second, third and fourth revelation to perfect His first message, i.e. revelation. A faith in revelation compels one, by a logical necessity, to accept the Vedas as the real revelation, for the Vedas are the oldest books claiming to be the word of God. It must be a strange sort of love and mercy which should have kept mankind, in their infancy, without a guide, philosopher, and friend, when they required it most, and should have kept them waiting for thousands of years till some instructions were sent down to guide them in this strange land where they had fallen down from paradise.

Seers are not Authors :

The idea suggested by some critics that the Seers whose names appear in the Vedas, alongwith the metres &c., were the authors of the Vedas, will be critically examined later on at the proper place. It would suffice here to state that they were 'seers', not 'composers' of the stanzas. They simply saw or realised the sense of the Mantras. The following stanza clearly states this—

यज्ञेन वाचः पववीयमायन्

तामन्विविदेन् ऋषिषु प्रविष्टाम् ।

तामामृत्या व्यवयुः पुरत्ना

तां सप्तरेमा अभि सं नदन्ते ।।

[The wise discovered it (i.e, speech) placed in the (hearts of) the Seers.] (RV. X.71.3)

Here the last clause Tam Sapia Rebha Abhi-Samnavante deserves particular notice and it has been explained by H.H. Wilson as: "The previous words refer to the diffusion of learning; those who have studied the Vedas have afterwards taught it to the others."

Again the phrase Rsisu Pravistam in this verse clearly establishes the fact that the 'speech', i.e. the Divine Speech, entered the hearts of the Seers (in the beginning of creation). This means the Seers (who are not composers) are the Divinely inspired people. For this reason they were called 'seers' and not the authors.

Yāska explains the word Rsi as Rsih Daršanāt.

There are many more verses in the Vedas which, in no uncertain terms, declare the Vedas to have proceeded from God.

EXTERNAL EVIDENCE

The external evidence that the followers of the Vedas adduce in favour of their view is not of an historical nature, such as has been given by the defenders of the Bible, in their attempt to prove the Bible to be the word of God. Nor is it based upon the historical evidence of the other kind, such as given in favour of the Quran, for which a divine source is claimed on the ground that its apparent and ostensible author was quite unlettered and did not know B from a battle door, and consequently, the Quran, full of lofty teachings and couched in sublime language, could not but have proceeded from a divine source. No such evidence is possible for the Vedas and we think it better for the Vedas that they do not depend upon such evidence for the maintenance of their authority.

The external evidence which can be given in favour of the exalted position of the Vedas is of persons whose sincerity and scholarship the world has admitted, and whose flight of imagination the enlightened races of the world are struggling to follow. Considered from strictly logical point of view, the evidence of these men may not be conclusive and may not convince the logical sceptic. But the whole body of ancient writers of the sacred and secular literature of the Hindus, declaring with one voice the superhuman origin of the Vedas and bowing like one man before their authority, is a fact which possesses special significance for a Hindu.

It will require a whole volume to quote, in full, the evidence, the Seers of yore bore in favour of the Vedas. The following few representative citations from the massive Sanskrit literature will clearly bear powerful testimony to the undisputed authority of the Vedas and pay due homage to their divine sanctity—

The Śatapatha Beahmana says:

1. एवं वा घरेऽस्य महतो भूतस्य निःश्वसितमेतद् यद् ऋग्वेदो यजुर्वेदः साम-वेवोऽथवाङ्किरसः। [O Maitreyi! the Rgveda, the Yojurveda, the Samaveda and the Atharvaveda are (like) the breath of that Supreme Being.]
(SB. XIV.5.4.10)

2. ग्राने: ऋग्वेदो वायोर्यजुर्वेद: सूर्यात् सामवेद:।

[The RV. from Agni, the YV. from Vayu and the SV. from Surya were produced.] (SB. XI.5.8.3)

Similarly the Aitareya Brāhmana says:

ऋग्वेद एवाग्नेरजायत यजुर्वेदो वायो: सामवेद आदित्यात् । (AB. XXV.7)

The author of the Nirukta says:

1. पुरुषविद्यानित्यत्वात् कर्मसम्पत्तिर्मन्त्रो वेदे ।

[The human knowledge is non-eternal. Hence the Mantras containing accomplishment of the actions are found in the Vedas.] (N. I.2)

2. नियतवाचोयुक्तयो नियतानुपूर्व्या भवन्ति । (N. I.16)

Pāṇini and Patañjali, the two great grammarians of India, also hold the view that the Vedas are not of human origin, while the Śākhās, e.g. Kathaka, &c., have human authorship. The difference between the man-made and the God-revealed works is expressed by the following two aphorisms:

1. कृते ग्रन्थे। (P. IV.3.113)

2. तेन प्रोक्तम् । (P. IV.3.101)

Patanjali in his commentary of the above-quoted second aphorism says:

या त्वसौ वर्णानुपूर्वी साऽनित्या। तव् भेदाच्चैतत् भवित काठकं कालापकं मोदं पैप्पलादकमिति। (P. IV.3.101)

[The particular arrangement of words in (the man-made works e.g.) Kāṭhaka, &c., is non-eternal while the same is eternal in the Vedas which are the words of God.] (P. IV.3.101)

Again he says:

स्वरो नियत ग्राम्नायेऽस्य वामशब्दस्य। वर्णानुपूर्वी खल्वाम्नाये नियतस्य वामशब्दस्य। [The Svaras (accents) and the particular arrangement of words in the Vedas are eternal, i.e. they are God-revealed.] (MB. V.2.53)

The Taitt iri ya Brahmana says:

1. प्रजापति: सोमराजानममृजत । तं त्रयो वेदा ग्रन्वमृज्यन्त ।

[Prajāpati created king Soma and afterwards the triple Vedas were created.] (TB. III.10)

2. नावेदविन्मनुते तं बृहन्तम् ।

[He who does not know the Vedas, does not know Him who is Great.] (TB. XII.9)

The Chandogya Upanişad asserts what has been said by the Satapatha:

1. तासौ तप्यमानानां रसान् प्रावृह्त् । ग्रन्ने: ऋचो वायो; यजू[®]षि सामान्यावित्यात् ।

[From them, so heated (i.e. inspired), He drew forth their essence, from Agni, Rcas; from Vāyu, Yajus, and from Āditya, Sāma.]

2. The same sense has been conveyed by the Satapatha:

तेम्यस्तप्तेभ्यः व्रयो वेदा ग्रजायन्त ।

[From these three (Seers) being heated (i.e. inspired by God) the three Vedas were produced.]

The Brhada anyaka Upanişad states:

1. स तया वाचा तेनात्मना इदं सर्वमशुजत । यदिदं किञ्च ऋचो यज् ¹⁹िष सामानि छन्दांसि ॥

[By that speech and that soul, He created all this, the Rg., the Yajur, the Samans and the Chandas (Atharvans).]

2. ग्रस्य महतो भूतस्य निःश्वसितमेतत् यद् ऋग्वेवः।

[These RV. (etc.) are the breathings of the Mighty Lord.]

The Smrtis (i.e. Law Books) also echo the same sentiment:

ग्रिग्निवायुरिविभ्यस्तु व्रयं ब्रह्म सनातनम् ।
 दुरोह यज्ञिसद्वचयं ऋग्यजुःसामसक्षणम् ।।

[The triple Veda, RV., YV. and SV., is eternal and the Lord revealed it through Agni, Vayu and Ravi (i.e. the Seers).]

(MS. 1.23)

Manu again says:

पितृदेवमनुष्याणां वेदः चक्षुः सनातनम् ।
 प्रशस्यं चाप्रमेयं च वेदशास्त्रमिति स्थितिः ॥

[The Veda is the eternal eye of the mankind and it is Aśakya (beyond human creation) and Aprameya (i.e. not easy to be understood).] (Manu XII.95)

3. वेदोऽखिलो धर्ममूलं स्मृतिशीले च तद्विदाम् । ग्राचारश्चैव मूतानामात्मनस्तुष्टिरेव च ।। यः करिचब् कस्यचिद् धर्मः मनुना परिकीत्तितः । सः सर्वोऽमिहितो वेदे सर्वज्ञानमयो हि सः ।। सर्वं तु समवेक्ष्यैतत् निखलं ज्ञानचक्षुषा । श्रुतिप्रामाण्यतो विद्वान् स्वधर्मे निवशेत वे ।।

[Dharma rests on the whole Veda; Manu states that all Dharma which has been propounded by him is contained in the Veda, the whole of which is true knowledge. A man should determine his Dharma by the authority of the Veda.]

- 4. चातुर्वर्ण्यं त्रयो लोकाः चत्वारश्चाधमाः पृयक् । भूतं भन्यं भविष्यं च सर्वं वेदात् प्रसिद्धचित ।। (XII.97)
- 5. सेनापत्यं च राज्यं च दण्डनेतृत्वमेव च । सर्वलोकाधिपत्यं च वेदशास्त्रविदर्हति ॥ (XII.150)

The poet philosopher Vyāsa repeats this idea in the Śāntiparva of his Mahabhārata:

श्रनादिनिधना नित्या वागुत्सृष्टा स्वयम्भुवा । श्रावौ वेदमयी दिव्या यतः सर्वाः प्रवृत्तयः ॥

[The Self-born God revealed the Divine Speech in the form of the Veda which has no beginning and end and is hence eternal.] (232,34)

The authors of the Darsanas, rigorous logicians as they were; humbly acknowledged the infallibility of the Vedas.

Kaṇāda, the author of the Vaiseṣika system of Philosophy, says:

तद्वनात् आम्नायस्य प्रामाण्यम् ।

[The Vedas being His words are authoritative.]

In this aphorism the word Tat (i.e. that) refers to God. It is clearly stated by all commentators. For instance, Sankara Miśra writes on this word:

तद्वचनात्-तेनेश्वेरेण प्रणयनात् ; ग्राम्नायस्य-वेदस्य, प्रामाण्यम् ॥ (I. 1.3)

Udayana also corroborates it in his Kiranavali Prakaśa:

तेनेश्वरेण वचनात् प्रणयनात् ग्राम्नायस्य प्रामाण्यम् ॥

In the same way Gautama, the author of the Nyaya System of Philosophy, recognises the Vedas to be authoritative in the following aphorisms:

- 1. मन्त्रायुर्वेदप्रामाण्यवच्च तत्प्रामाण्यमाप्तप्रामाण्यात् ।
- 2. अतिप्रामाण्याच्च ।

Vātsyāyana, the commentator of the above book, explains this aphorism:

य एवाप्ता वेदार्थानां द्रष्टार: प्रवक्तारश्च त एवायुर्वेदप्रभृतीनाम् ॥ (NB. 11,1.67)

Kapila, the author of Sankhya system of Philosophy, admits the Vedas to be the word of God:

1. अपौरुषेयत्वं तत्कर्त्तुः पुरुषस्याभावात् ।

[The Vedas are not human creation. No man is their author.] (V. 46)

2. निजशक्त्यभिव्यक्तेः स्वतः प्रामाण्यम् ।

[The Vedas are authoritative by themselves as they have been revealed by His own power.] (V. 51)

The same notion has been repeated in the Mīmāmsā Bhāşya by Kumārila:

कर्तुः स्मरणाभावात् श्रपौरुषेया वेदा इति ।

(Tantra Vartika)

The Mīmāmsā confirms this view:

वेदस्य च धर्मे प्रामाण्यम्।

[The Veda is authority in the matter of Dharma.]

Patañjali's view in the Yoga Darsana is:

स पूर्वेषामि गुरुः कालेनानवच्छेदात्।

[Verily he is the teacher of the ancients as He is not bound by time.]

Vacaspati Miśra corroborates this view:

तथा चाम्युदयनि:श्रेयसोपदेशपरोऽपि वेदराशि: ईश्वरप्रणीत:।

Vyāsa, the author of the Vedānta, openly declares:

शास्त्रयोमित्वात् ।

[The Supreme Being is the origin of the Vedas.]

(I. 1.3)

The great Śankara comments upon it :

न हीदृशस्य शास्त्रस्य ऋग्वेदादिलक्षणस्य सर्वज्ञगुणान्वितस्य सर्वज्ञादन्यतः सम्भवोऽस्ति । (VB. I.1.3)

ध्रतएव नित्यत्वम् ।

[Hence the Veda is eternal,]

(VD. I.3.29)

The following aphorisms from the Mimāmsā fully discuss this topic and decide finally that the Vedas are superhuman:

नित्यस्त स्याद्वरांनस्य परार्यत्वात् । (I. 1.18)

वेदाँश्चैके सन्तिकर्षं पुरुषाख्या । (I. 1.27)

उक्तन्तु शब्बपूर्वत्वम् । (1.1.29)

आख्या प्रवचनात् । (I. 1.30)

Kumārila sums up his comments upon the last noted aphorism as:

सर्वो हि यथैव गुरुणाधीतं तथैवाधिजिगांसते । न पुनः स्वातन्त्रयेण कश्चिविप प्रथमोऽध्येता वेदानामस्ति, यः कर्त्ता स्यात् । तस्मात् कर्त्तृं स्मरणामावात् श्रपौरुषेया वेदा इति माव: । एवं च पूर्वमेव वेदापौरुषेयत्वस्य सिद्धत्वात् तिह्वषये पुनः प्रयत्नो न करणीय: ।

In the Bhāşya of Śānkhyāyana Śrauta Sūira we find:

कथं वेदस्य प्रामाण्यम् ? अपौरुषेयत्वात् ।

The Puranas are generally discarded as full of absurdities but to us they do not seem to form an exception to the rule: there is the soul of good in every thing. They are at this day the source of inspiration to thousands of Hindus who have never read or heard a line from the Vedas. The evidence of the Puranas, therefore, is not without its value in admitting and proclaiming the divine origin of the Vedas, more so, because the Puranas are believed to be responsible for having displaced the Vedas.

The Visnu Purana says:

गायतं च ऋचश्चेव बृहत्साम रथन्तरम् । ग्राग्निडटोमश्च यज्ञानां निर्ममे प्रथमात् मुखात् ।

[From His Eastern mouth Brahmā¹ formed the Gāyatra, the Rcas, Trivṛtsāma, Rathantara &c., and Yajur &c., from His Southern mouth and so on.]

^{1.} Brahmā here means God to whom all the four directions are known and visible. Hence He is called four-faced or multi-faced (RV. X.81.3). The Creator as pervader of the Universe is known as Hiranyagarbha, Paramesthin or Brahma as He encompasses the whole material world. His four faces metaphorically represent His Omnipresence and Omniscience.

It is also popularly understood that Brahma sprang up from the navel of Vişnu and Vişnu is regarded to be reclining under waters with his consort Lakşmi. The Puranas took this metaphor and personification (Contd.)

The Bhagavata Purana observes:

कदाचिद् ध्यायत: स्रष्टुः वेदाः आशंस् चतुर्मुखात् ।

[Once, the Vedas sprang from the four-faced Creator, as he meditated.]

Similarly, Skanda Svāmī, Durga, Bhartrhari, Udayana, Vācaspati, Vijnana Bhikşu and all other scholars share this view.

Our aim to present and quote all the representative authors of Sanskrit literature is to show to the reader that the Veda commanded the highest position in the world literature because of its being the world of God.

THE GREATNESS OF THE VEDA

If what has been said above is not strong and sufficient enough to satisfy a non-believer, regarding the essentiality and possibility of revelation and also the revealed character of the Vedas, it must have at least made it amply evident that the Vedas occupy the highest position in the sacred literature of the Hindus and have for thousands of years past been their infallible guide in all the matters, religious as well as secular. We finish this topic by again citing a few lines from the law books:

- 1. वेदो वृक्षः तस्य मुलं प्रणवः । (बौधायन धर्मसूत्र)
- 2. वेद एव द्विजातीनां निःश्वेयसकरः पर: । (याजवल्क्य)
- 3. सेनापत्यं च राज्यं च बण्डनेतृत्वमेव च । सर्वलोकाधिपत्यं च वेदशास्त्रविवहंति ॥ (मनु०)
- 4. नास्ति वेदात परं शास्त्रं नास्ति मातुः समी गुरुः। (अत्रि) too far in the domain of religion, but a peep into the Vedas will clearly show that it is nothing but a partial statement of the theory of creation mentioned in the Vedas. "Viṣṇu resting under the water with Lakṣmī' simply means the All-pervading Lord with His all-powerful dignity, controlling the entire matter in fluid condition. "Brahmā sprang forth from the navel" only indicates that Viṣṇu came to be called Hiraṇyagarbha.

It will now appear that the theory of Brahma's authorship of the Vedas does not clash with the views of other sages, including Dayananda, as it simply implies the divine authorship of the Veda.

It would be unwise for us to finish the topic without mentioning here the school of thought of the non-orthodox scholars.

Here, however, in the beginning it must be stated that when we call the four Vedas four books, we must not understand the statement literally. If a book means a work written by one man, implying unity of time and ideas, well, the Vedas are far from being books. They are rather compilations, composed of several books which can be individually distinguished from each other. The form in which the Samhita of the Rgveda has come down to us clearly shows that the different hymns were composed long before they were brought together and systematically arranged. That the different portions of the Samhita represent chronologically different stages, follows from various indications of language, vocabulary, style, grammar, metre and lastly ideas. As in the Hebrew book of Psalms, so also here, songs which had been composed at widely separated periods of times were united at some time in a collection, and ascribed to (some) famous personages of prehistoric times, preferably to the earliest ancestors of those families in which the songs in question were handed down. The names of the singers or Seers (i.e. prophets) who, as the Indians say, 'visioned these hymns' are mentioned, partly in the Brāhmaņas, partly in separate lists of authors (i.e. Anukramaņīs) connected with the Vedanga literature.

Thus we see that the above discussed view of the orthodox people, which has a long and continuous stream of tradition behind it, is not shared by the European scholarship. The tradition has its own beauty and charm while the modern thought weighs every thing in its own way.

CHAPTER V

THE DIVISION OF THE VEDAS

INTERNAL EVIDENCE

Dayananda, like all other ancient scholars, says that the Vedas are four in number: the Rgveda, the Yajurveda, the Samaveda and the Atharvaveda. According to him this four-fold division is eternal and not man-made. Jñana, Karma, Upasana, and Vijñana are the distinct subjects of these four Vedas respectively. The following are the etymological explanations of the titles of the Vedas:

- 1. ऋचिन्त-स्तुवन्ति, पदार्थानां गुणकर्मस्वमावान् ग्रनया सा ऋक् ।
- 2. यजन्ति येन (मनुष्या ईश्वरं धार्मिकान् विदुषश्व) पूजयन्ति, शिल्पविज्ञानसंगति-करणं च कूर्वन्ति तत् यजुः ।
- 3. स्यति कर्माण इति साम।
- 4. र्थात: चरितकर्मा तत्त्रितिषेधः । (N. XI.18) and also चर्संशये (चुरादि) संशयराहित्यं सम्पाद्यते येन सोऽथवंवेद: ।

We have given these explanations to include the four main types of subject-matter given by Dayananda pertaining to each Veda:

Vijñāna (i.e. realisation of knowledge), Karma (i.e. action), Upasanā (i.e. communion with God) and Jñāna (i.e. absolute knowledge).

That is to say, the Rgveda deals with Vijñana, the Yajurveda with religious activities, the Samaveda with worship and the Atharvaveda with all types of specific sciences.

Many scholars like Durga, Bhatta Bhaskara and Mahidhara are of the opinion that originally there was one Veda—undivided—which was produced by Brahma in the beginning. Later on in the Dvapara (Silver) age the same one Veda was split into four parts by the great sage Vyasa. It is strange to note that for this they have not adduced any authority.

This assertion is wholly wrong as we have already cited some verses from the Vedas themselves which enumerated separately four Vedas:

- 1. तस्मात् यज्ञात् सर्वहृतः ऋचः सामानि जिज्ञरे ।
 छन्दा¹⁹सि जिज्ञरे तस्मात् यजुस्तस्मादजायत ।। (RV. X.90.9)
 (YV. XXXI.7)
- 2. यस्मादृचो भ्रपातक्षन् यजुर्यस्मादपाकषन् । सामानि यस्य तोमान्यथर्वाङ्गिरसो मुखम् ॥ (AV. X.7.20)

Similarly in Atharvaveda (IV.35.6 and XIX.9.12) we come across the word Vedal: in plural number which clearly implies that the Vedas were four in number even in the beginning. The above-cited verses clearly mention the four names of the Vedas separately.

EXTERNAL EVIDENCE

Again the following quotations expressly mention the Vedas separately:

- 1. एष वा भ्ररे भ्रस्य महतो भूतस्य निःश्वसितमेतव् यद् ऋग्वेदो यजुर्वेदः साम-वेदोथवाङ्गिरसः ॥ (SB. XIV.5.4.10)
- 2. Also in Gopatha (I. 3.1) the names of the four Vedas occur alongwith the phrase Sarvan ca Vedan (i.e. all the Vedas).
- 3. यदेनमृश्भि: शंसन्ति यर्जुभि: यजन्ति सामभि: स्तुवन्ति । (N. XIII.7)
- 4. ऋग्मि: शंसन्ति यजुपि: यजन्ति सामिष: स्तुवन्ति श्रथवंभि: जपन्ति । (Kāṭhaka Sam. XXX.7)
- 5. तत्रापरा ऋग्वेदो यजुर्वेदः सामवेदोऽथर्ववेदः शिक्षा कल्पो व्याकरणं निरुक्तं छन्दो ज्योतिषम् । (MU. I.I.5)
- 6. The above-cited verses from Manu I.23, and others.
- 7. चत्वारो वेदाः साङ्गाः सरहस्या ····· एकशतमध्वर्युशाखाः सहस्रवत्मौ सामवेदः एकविशतिधा वाहवृचं नवधायर्वणो वेदः । (Mahābhāṣya)
- 8. नानुग्वेदविनीतस्य नायजुर्वेदधारिण: । नासामवेदविदुष: शक्यमेवं प्रभाषितुम् ॥ (Rāmāyaṇa 1V.3.28)

When we find that all these works, which are sufficiently earlier than Vyāsa, declare openly the existence of four Vedas separately and also when the Vedas themselves proclaim that the Vedas are four in number, the contention of Durga and Mahīdhara that the original one Veda was divided into four by Vyāsa cannot be accepted. It is also evident from this statement of Durga and Mahīdhara that they were quite ignorant of a popular conception about the Veda. This ignorance is the cause of their wrong intrepretation of the Vedas.

There are a few European scholars who maintain that the number of the Vedas is limited to three only. The original cause of this illusion, however, lies with the Hindus themselves, though they are not to blame, if others will not or cannot rightly understand them.

The mistake has evidently been caused by a misunderstanding of Manu and other seers of yore:

ग्रिग्निवायुरिवम्यस्तु व्रयं ग्रह्म सनातनम् । दुदोह यज्ञसिद्धचर्यं ऋग्यजुःसामलक्षणम् ॥

[From Agni, Vayu and Ravi (Sun) He drew forth for the accomplishment of sacrifice, the eternal triple Veda distinguished as Rk, Yajuś, and Sāman. (Muir)] (M. I.23)

2. त्रयो वा विद्या ऋचो यजूंषि सामानि। (SB. IV.6.7.1)

3. स एतां बर्यो विद्यामभ्यतपत् । (CHU)

We have, by numerous citations, already proved beyond doubt that the Vedas were four in the beginning also. But the European scholars could not rightly understand the word Tray? (triple) in these quotations. Manu, as well as other authorities, do not mean to limit the number of the Vedas to three, but simply speak of the three-fold science embodied in them. For instance, the SB (IV.6.7.1) cited above in part (1) and also the Chāndogya Upaniṣad in part (3) above clearly mention that the names Rk, Yajur and Sāma here mean three sciences and not the names of the Vedas. The Mīmāmsā again confirms this interpretation in the following:

तेषामृग् यतार्थवशेन पाद-व्यवस्था ।	(II.1.65)
गीतिषु सामाख्या ।	(II.1.66)

शेषे यजु: शब्द: । (II.1.67)

Thus this triple division is based on the three sciences dealt with in the four Vedas. Not to speak of all the Hindu scholars supporting this view, it is strongly confirmed by Prof. H. Kern, who says:

"When the Hindus speak of the three Vedas, they mean that there is a triple Veda consisting (1) of recited verses (Rich),

Thus it is consequently nothing but short-sightedness to limit the number of the Vedic collections to three. The Atharvaveda is as much a Veda as any of the other three. Its subject-matter is identical with and considerably similar to the Rgveda. We have cited the above internal and external evidence to show that the Atharvaveda equally and rightly claims the same position as the other three Vedas.

CHAPTER VI

DEFINITION OF THE VEDAS

SAYANA'S FAULTY VIEW

The great commentator of the Vedas—Sāyaṇa—who lived and wrote at a time when the sun of the Vedic traditions had long set, defines the Veda as मन्त्रज्ञाह्मणात्मक: शब्दराशिवंद:, and then he adds that निर्देशि लक्षणम्, i.e., the definition of the Veda as the sum of Mantras and Brāhmaṇas is a faultless one. Then he refers to the Yajña Partbhaṣā of Apastamba, where the "name of the Veda is given to the Mantras and Brāhmaṇas." But this definition of the Veda given by Sāyaṇa is ridiculous as he could not discriminate between the Mantra portion and the Brāhmaṇa portion. This fact he himself has admitted.

Sāyaṇa's definition is based on the following statement of Kātyāyana:

मन्त्रबाह्मणयोः वेदनामधेयम् ।

DAYANANDA'S VIEW

But Dayānanda was the first among the modern scholars to explode this view and to demonstrate that the Samhitās only formed the Vedas and they alone were to be regarded as eternal, and infallible, as Vedas in fact. The Brāhmaṇas and Upaniṣads themselves profess to be mere parasites of the Vedas and devote themselves respectively to the elucidation of the ritualistic and the philosophical portions of the Vedas. No Samhitā, on the other hand, professes to hang upon any other Samhitā as its parasite and devote itself to explain any portion of the others. Hence, Dayānanda says:

न ब्राह्मणानां वेदसंज्ञा भवितुमहीत । कुतः ? पुराणेतिहाससंज्ञकत्वात् वेदव्याख्यानात् ऋषिभिरुवतःवात् श्रनीश्वरोक्तत्वात् कात्यायनिमन्नै: ऋषिभिः वेदसंज्ञाया भ्रस्वीकृतत्वात् मनुष्यबुद्धिरचितत्वाच्चेति ।

[The Brāhmaṇas do not deserve to be called by the name of the Veda because they have been given the names of the Purāṇa and Itihāsa; they are elucidations of the Vedas and are not the words of God but merely the works of the seers and the products of human intellect; also because all sages other than Kāṭyāyana have refused to call them by the name of Veda.]

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SAMHITAS AND BRAHMANAS

This is quite true that there are no stories in the Vedas. The Brahmanas do contain narratives of human beings, while the Vedas are free from stories and tales:

1. देवासुरा: संयत्ता श्रासन् ।

2. सदेव सौम्य इदमग्र धासीत् । (CHU)

It must be pointed out here that some scholars have tried to deduce some historical detail from the Samhitas but no story, beginning with "There was etc." and "There lived once, etc.", such as are of common occurrence in the Brahmanas and Upanisads, has been found in the Vedas (Samhitas) even by the Europeans, who always smell out history in every nook and corner of a literature.

Tradition plays a great part in clearing up matters such as we are now discussing and all the evidence derived from this source is in favour of the view that the Samhitas only form the Vedas proper. Patañjali, the great grammarian, always quotes from the Samhitas to illustrate the special rules applicable to Vedic Sanskrit without quoting a single line or phrase from the Upaniṣads or Brāhmaṇas; his non-Vedic illustrations include passages from both the Brāhmaṇas and the Upaniṣads:

केषां शब्दानाम् । लौकिकानां वैदिकानाम् च । तत्र लौकिकास्तावत् गौरश्वः पुरुषो हस्तो शकुनिर्मृगो ब्राह्मण इति । वैदिकाः खल्विप । शन्नोदेवीरिमब्टये । इषेत्वीर्जेत्वा । ब्रिग्निमोडे पुरोहितम् । ब्रग्न श्रायाहि वीतये । इति । (MB)

Moreover, the Brāhmanas are the explanatory books on the Vedas. Here the Vedic stanzas are repeated and explained later on. Hence the Brāhmanas are the glosses on the Vedas. How can commentary be given the same position as the original one! For instance, while explaining the Yajurveda verse tryāyuşam, etc. (III.62), the Satapatha says:

- भ्रत व चक्षु: जमदिग्न: ऋषि: । यदनेन जगत् पश्यिति, म्रथो मनुते । तस्मात् चक्षु: जमदिग्न: ऋषि: । (SB. VIII.1) कश्यपो व कूर्म: । प्राणो व कूर्म: । (SB. VII.5)
- 2. इषेत्वोर्जेत्वा इति । वृष्टचै तदाह । यदाह इषेत्वोर्जेति । यो वृष्टात् प्रवीग् रसो जायते तस्मै तदाह, सविता वै देवानां प्रसविता । सवित्-प्रस्ता: । (SB. I.7)

Here we clearly find that the Vedic stanzas are being explained. Thus the Brahmanas are merely a commentary on the Veda.

The very title of these books, i.e. Brāhmaṇa, indicates that these works are not the Vedas. Brahma means here Veda and their explanatory books are called Brāhmaṇas. The following instances may again prove it:

- (a) The first verse of the Yajurveda is explained in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (I.7.1).
- (b) The Rgveda verse (I.24.3) has been explained in the Aitareya Brāhmana (I.16).
- (c) The first verse of the Sāmaveda is explained in Tāndya Brāhmana (XI.2.3).

Moreover, the four Vedas are the revealed books; they are words of God; but the Brāhmaṇas are human creation and were composed by sages.

As the Brahmanas are man-made works, they contain criticism of other similar works. Sometimes they contain statements contradictory to each other. It clearly shows that they cannot be given the title of the Veda.

The accent plays essential part in the language of the Vedas while the same is lacking in the Brāhmanas.

The author of the Mahābhāṣya clearly declares that the Brāhmaṇa works were composed by the Brāhmaṇa seers who understood the four Vedas for the elucidation of the original text:

चतुर्वेदिवद्भिः ब्राह्मणैः महिणिभिः ब्राह्मणैः प्रोक्तानि यानि वेदव्याख्यानानि तानि ब्राह्मणानि । (V.I.1) Kātyāyana, on whose authority Sāyana includes the Brāhmanas in the Vedas, clearly distinguishes between the two in the following verse:

In these quotations Kātyāyana himself creates distinction between the Veda and the Brāhmaṇa which he calls as Bhāṣya.

The evidence of Yaska, the author of the Nirukta, goes to establish the fact that the Brāhmaṇas are beyond the scope of the word Veda. He always quotes from the Vedas as nigama and the Brāhmaṇas are quoted separately as 'Brāhmaṇa':

Yāska often disregards or shows a bit of contempt to Brāhmaņas, but he has reverence for the Vedas always:

He again quotes self-contradictory statement from the Brahmanas, to which no stress or importance is to be attached. He says:

The following quotation from Yaska states in clear terms that only the Mantras were revealed, and the tradition of oral transmission refers only to them:

According to him, the Brahmanas repeat what has already been ordained by the Mantras for the fuller explanation:

The Brāhmaņas are, therefore, uditānuvāda (i.e. repetition of what has already been ordained) and cannot claim the position of the original Veda,

Jaimini, the author of Mīmārinsā, confirms this view by saying:

तच्चोदकेषु मन्त्रारय्या।	(XXXII)
शेषे बाह्मणशब्द: ।	(3.1.2)
श्रनाम्नातेष श्रमन्त्रत्वम ।	(3 1 3)

In Gopatha Brāhmaṇa itself the Brāhmaṇas are separately stated from the Vedas:

इमे सर्वेवेदाः सन्नाह्मणाः ।

Pānini, the great grammarian, has treated the Vedas and the Brāhmanas as different from each other in the following aphorisms:

द्वितीया ब्राह्मणे ।	(P. 11.3.60)
चतुर्थ्ययें बहुलं छन्दिस ।	(P. II.3.62)
पुराणप्रोक्तेषु ब्राह्मणकल्पेषु ।	(P. IV.3.105)

The last aphorism quoted above shows that the Brāhmaṇas and Kalpas which are the works of the ancient sages, Brahmā, etc., are Vedic glosses only. And for this reason they have been given the names of Purāṇa (and Itihāsa). If in these aphorisms the intention had been to call the Chandas and the Brāhmaṇas by the name Veda, the use of the word chandas in the above-mentioned aphorism would be meaningless, because the term Brāhmaṇa (which in that case would include the term chandas) had been already used in the first aphorism cited above. Thus it is clear that Pāṇini does not give the name of the Veda to Brāhmaṇas.

Moreover, the Brāhmaṇas and Upanisads are full of quotations from the Samhitās, the latter, though quoting from one another, do not quote a single line from the former.

In the light of this overwhelming evidence nothing but overadultation and misdirected sense of reverence can lead one to place any other work on the same level as the Vedas. If the Vedas are looked upon as the revelation, it is a positive insult to them to give to any human book, however sublime and excellent, the same reverence as to them.

And none of the ancient masters has gone so far off, except Kātyāyana, whose position must be accounted for by his excessive reverence for all that facilitated the study of the Vedas.

CHAPTER VII

VEDAS INTERPRETED: A CRITICAL SURVEY

नावेदविन्मनुते तं वृहन्तम् । (TB. III.12.9)

[He, who does not know the Vedas, does not know him, who is great.]

Before we proceed to appreciate and form an estimate of the value of Dayananda's interpretation of the Vedas, it would be quite logical to furnish an account of all efforts, made so far right from the Vedic period down to the age of Dayananda in the sphere of understanding the Vedic texts. It will give us an opportunity to comprehend and critically examine the various types of interpretations offered by different translators at different times and under different circumstances.

INSPIRED SAGES

In the beginning, there were inspired sages who understood the Vedas, without being explained to them by any teacher or preceptor. They understood the purport of the Mantras without anybody's help, as the Vedas were revealed to them. We have already dealt, at greater length, this topic. Thus, there was no need of any gloss or exegesis during this period for them. Well-deserved homage is paid by Mr. R. T. H. Griffith to the Brahmins who committed the Vedas to memory and thus preserved them in their pristine purity.

Mr. Griffith says:

"These four Vedas are considered to be of divine origin and to have existed from all eternity. The Rsis, or the great poets to whom the hymns are ascribed, were merely inspired seers who saw or received them by sight and directly from the Supreme Creator. In accordance with this belief these sacred books have been preserved and handed with the most reverential care from generation to generation."

(Translation of the Rgveda, Introduction)

From this it is clear that in the beginning there was no necessity of any gloss and exegesis for the understanding of the Vedas. The seers understood them by insight. This fact has been clearly brought forth in his work, Nirukta, by Yāska in unambiguous terms:

साक्षात्कृतधर्माण ऋषयो बमूबु: । तेऽवरेम्यो असाक्षात्कृतधर्मभ्य उपदेशेन मन्त्रान् सम्प्रादु: । उपदेशाय ग्लायन्तोऽवरे बिल्मग्रहणायेमं ग्रन्थं समाम्नासिषु: वेदं च वेदाङ्गानि च । (N. I.20)

Here it is definitely stated that Dharma (the Vedas) revealed itself to the seers. They handed it down by oral tradition (upadeśa) to their descendants to whom Dharma (the Veda) did not manifest itself. The others who declined (in understanding the Veda) by oral transmission compiled this book (the Nighantu) and the other Vedangas for fuller understanding.

From this evidence we know that in the Samhita-period, the purport of the Vedas was not obscure or difficult for the people to comprehend because the Vedas were revealed to them or taught to them (the younger generation) by those who knew them by insight. It is also a reason that the Vedic terminology was popularly known at that time. The spoken language at that time was not much distinct from the Vedic tongue.

During the course of time, gradually the later generations began to decline in intellect. I feel at this stage the internal comparative method was followed by them, where the words or context were not very clear. For instance, the word 'Aditi' has been used to denote a number of meanings in the Vedas. The confusion in such cases was natural. But if we refer rightly to Vedic text, we can easily come across such verses where various significances of this word are hinted upon:

श्रवितियौरिदितरन्तिरक्षमिदितिर्माता स पिता स पुत्रः । विश्वेदेव। अदिति: पञ्चजना श्रदितिर्जातमदितिर्जनित्वम् ॥

(RV, I.6.16.5)

Here we get the various meanings of the word 'Aditi'.

It is beyond doubt that the Vedas themselves explain many controversial points. Does the worshipper invoke God or various elements of nature? To this query, the Veda replies:

तदेवाग्निस्तदादित्यस्तद् वायुस्तवु चन्द्रमाः। तदेव शुक्रं तद् ब्रह्म ता श्रापः स प्रजापतिः॥

[Even He is Agni, He is Āditya, He is Vāyu, He is Candramas; He is Śukra, He is Brahma, He is Āpa, He is Prajāpati.] (YV. XXX.1)

इन्द्रं मित्रं वरुणमग्निमाहुरथो दिन्यः स सुपर्णोगरुत्मान्। एकं सिंद्रप्रा बहुधा वदन्त्योंग्न यमं मातरिश्वानमाहुः॥

[I hey call Him Indra, Mitra, Varuna, Agni and He is beautifully-winged Garutmān (Sun). He is One. Sages call Him by many names, viz. Agni, Yama, Mātariśvān.]

Such verses are really internal interpretations of the Vedic texts and should be taken even now as the key to the interpretation of all apparently polytheistic expressions in the Vedas.

It served really as a keynote for interpreting the Vedas for Dayānanda, according to whom there is only one Supreme Being described in the Vedas and Agni, Indra, etc., are merely His different names expressing different qualities of the Supreme Lord.

PADA TEXTS

The creation of the Pada texts had twofold purpose first the preservation of the sanctity of Vedic text, and secondly to make the Vedic text clear and lucid by expounding the compounds, or by showing the position of accent on individual words and by inserting avagraha in the joint words. Prof. A. A. Macdonell maintains that the ancient sages adopted steps for preserving the Vedic texts with the faithfulness unique in history. Briefly stated, those steps were: (1) analysis of the whole text into words called Pada-pātha; (2) Krama-pātha, i.e. reading every word twice, connected with both the preceding word and the word that follows; (3) the woven text or Jaṭā-pāṭha stating each of the combinations three times, the second time in reverse order; and (4) the climax of this precaution was reached in what was called Ghana-pātha in which the order of words is ab, ba, abe, eba, abe; be, cb, bed, etc.

All these varieties of texts were learnt by heart and thus they preserved the sacred texts and helped to a great extent in understanding the exact significance of the text. The advantage of the Pada text in the sphere of the better understanding of the Vedic text has been accepted by Yāska in the following quotation:

अवसायपद्वते रुद्र मृळ । इति । अवतेर्गत्यर्थस्यासौ नामकरणः । तस्मान्नावगृहणन्ति । अवसायाश्वान् । इति । स्यतिरुपमृषो विमोचने । तस्मादवगृहणन्ति ॥ (N. 1.17)

Explaining the last sentence here Durga adds— इति पदकारा इति शेष: ।

These authors of the Pada texts were quite familiar with all etymological principles and grammatical formations; because a layman who is a stranger to grammatical principles (even in the absence of grammatical works) cannot expound the compounds and disjoin words. It was the first attempt towards the understanding of the Veda Mantras. The authors of the Pada texts did not feel any necessity of writing a regular and running commentary on the Vedas. This fact shows that people at that time were not very much far off from the sages to whom Dharma manifested itsef (sakṣat-kṛt-dharmāṇaḥ).

THE SAKHAS (RECENSIONS)

It is quite well known that the 1,127 recensions of the Vedas are the Vedic exegesis. These recensions explain away the obscure words of the Vedas by substituting simpler words in different recensions differently. For instance, सिचिवं सखायम् । (RV. X.71.6) has been modified as सिखिवं सखायम् in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka (I. 3). भ्रातृत्यस्य वधाय (YV. I.18) has been simplified in the Kāṇva recension as द्वियत्ते वधाय (I. 6.2.3). This shows that recensions contain simplified texts of the original Veda.

Instances can be multiplied. But it is certain that the recersions are helpful only to a little extent. The study of various recensions of the Vedic texts involves very hard labour, resulting in scanty utility. But the explanatory aspect of these recensions has been admitted by Venkaţa Mādhava in the Rgbhāṣya Anukramaṇī:

ग्रध्यवस्यन्ति मन्त्रार्थान् एवं मन्त्रान्तरैरपि। शाखास्वन्यासु पठितैः विस्पष्टार्थैः मनीषिणः॥ (P. 77)

THE BRAHMANA WORKS

The word Brāhmaṇa means first a single explanation given by a priest or a doctor of the science of Sacrifice upon any point of the ritual; secondly it means a collection of such utterances and discussions in book form. If we go over to the Brāhmaṇas and bring together all those passages which contain explanations of Samhitā texts or derivations of words, we shall have before us a large mass of material, which will prove to be an important contribution to the Vedic interpretation. Even to critical European scholars, such explanatory references found in the Brāhmaṇas have proved of much use to determine the meanings of words which are otherwise ambiguous or unintelligible.

The fact deserves notice that wherever we come across explanations of words and the Vedic verses, we find them invariably based on etymological meanings. Sometimes, no doubt, narratives of human beings and other legends are quoted here and there, but they are very few. Thousands of Vedic words have been critically examined and etymologically explained.

We must learn one thing from the explanations of the Vedic words given in the Brāhmaņas that the Vedic words possess general sense and are not conventional or $r\bar{u}dhis$. This topic we shall deal at a proper place later on. Here it is sufficient to state that all the Vedic words according to the Brāhmaņas denote general sense and not particular, i.e., they indicate only derivative significance. For instance, while explaining the following stanza from the Yajurveda:

ह्यायुषं जमदग्ने: कश्यपस्य ह्यायुषम् । (III. 62)

the Satapatha says:

चक्षुवँजमदिग्नः ऋषि: । यदनेन जगत् पश्यति । स्रथो मनुते । तस्माच्चक्षः जमदिग्नः । (SB. VIII.1)

कश्यपो व कूर्म: । प्राणो व कूर्म: । (SB. VII.5)

Again the first verse of the Yajurveda হুণ ক্ৰীৰ্জ etc., has been explained as :

इषे त्वोर्जेति — बृष्टचै तदाह । यदाह इषे त्वेति ग्रर्जे त्वेति । यो वृष्टादूर्ग्रसो जायते तस्मै तदाह । सविता वै देवानां प्रसिवता । सिवत्-प्रसूताः । (SB. I.7)

Sometimes Brahmanas explain obscure words by offering simpler synonyms:

बहा वै बाह्यण: । क्षत्रं राजन्य: । (SB. XIII.1)

राष्ट्रं वा श्रश्वमेघ: । (SB.)

Similarly Vedic metaphors have also been explained frequently:

प्रजापितः वै स्वां दुिहतरमभ्यध्यायत्, दिविमित्यन्य ब्राहुः । उषसमित्यन्ये । तामृश्यो मूत्वा रोहितां भूतामभ्यत् । तस्य यद् रेतसः प्रथममुददीष्यत् तदसावादित्यो-ऽभवत् । (AB. III.33.34)

प्रजापतिः व सुपर्णो गरुत्मानेष सविता ।

(SB. X.2)

Yaska, the author of the Nirukta, frequently quotes passages from the Brahmanas in support of his own etymological explanations of the Vedic words.

Here we must understand that the Brahmana works are not regular commentaries on the Vedas. The main theme of these voluminous books is the Sacrifice $(yaj\tilde{n}a)$ from which all discussions start and on which every thing hinges.

PRATIŚAKHYAS AND ANUKRAMANIS

The Prātiśākhya works are also an attempt in the same direction, though they relate more to the text and orthography than to the regular interpretation. Works like the Sarvānukramaņī of Katyāyana and the Brhaddevatā are important from the point of view of the preservation of the text only indirectly serving the purpose of Vedic interpretation.

THE NIGHANTU AND THE NIRUKTA

The first and foremost distinct attempt to interpret the Vedic texts is the Nirukta of Yaska than which no older work of the type is known today. The Nirukta is a super-commentary on the Nighantus. The Nighantus are five lists of words which are divided into three sections. The first section (the Naighantuka Kanda) consists of three lists in which Vedic words are collected under certain ideas. For instance, there are quoted 21 names for earth, etc. That is, the first section contains lists of synonyms; the second section (Naigama) contains a list of ambiguous and particularly obscure words of the Vedas; while the third section (Daivata) gives a classification of the Devatas according to three regions, i.e. the earth, the atmosphere and the heaven. Vedic exegesis probably began with the compilation of such glossaries; the composition of commentaries on those glossaries, after the style of our Nirukta, with explanations of difficult Vedic verses interwoven, was a definite step in the development of the Vedic interpretation.

Tradition erroneously ascribes the Nighantu also to Yaska. In reality, however, Yaska himself says that the Nighantu (imam grantham) was composed by the descendants of the ancient sages (avare) for the easier understanding of the transmitted texts. (N. 1.20)

It is quite certain that Yaska had many predecessors and his work, though surely very old and the oldest existing Vedic exegetic work, can nevertheless only be regarded as the last, perhaps also the most perfect production of the literature of the Vedanga Nirukta.

We must remember that although this work is very old, and also that no older work than this is extant in this sphere, yet it is far removed in age and spirit from the period of the Samhitas. This is quite evident from the fact that it makes twofold distinction while explaining the significance of words, i.e., it distinguishes between the use of words regarding their meanings prevalent in the Vedic language and in the spoken one. This shows a gap of many centuries between the period of revelation of the Vedas and that of Yaska. Thus for example in the section of nipatas (i.e. particles) he says:

इवेति भाषायां च उभयमन्वध्यायं च । स्राग्निरिवेन्द्र हवेति ॥ नेति प्रतिषेधार्थीयो भाषायाम् । उभयमन्वध्यायम् ॥

Here the distinction between the language of the Vedas and the language of daily speech in vogue at the time of Yāska is clearly hinted upon. The spoken language at that time was sufficiently different from the Vedic speech. The long elapse of time is the only justification for this.

This fact is again proved beyond doubt from the evidence of Kautsa who maintains that the Vedas do not convey or possess any meaning:

ग्रय निरर्थका मन्द्रा:।

[The Mantras have no sense.] (N. 1.15)

To support his contention he advances arguments which clearly indicate the remoteness of Yāska's period from that of the Vedas when the sages did not feel any ambiguity in the Vedic text. The following are a few arguments given by Kautsa:

- (a) 7 he statements (in the Vedas) have certain fixed words and fixed order of words.
- (b) The Brāhmaṇas endow the Mantras with forms; thus—'Spread thyself widely out' (YV. I.22); 'and so he spreads'
 (SB. I.3.6.8).

- (c) They speak what is incompatible; thus, "Protect him, plant", "axe, do not injure him," thus he speaks while striking.
- (d) Their contents are self-contradictory as "There was but one Rudra and no second", and again "There are countless, thousands of Rudras on earth". So also "Indra, thou hast been born without a foe", and again "Indra vanquished a hundred armies at once."
- (e) A person is ordained to do an act with which he is already acquainted; thus, "adress the hymn to the Fire which is being kindled". (This is said by the Adhvaryu to the Hota).
- (f) The significance of the Mantra is obscure on account of the words like amyak (RV. I.16.93), yadrśmin (RV. V.44.8), jarayani (RV. VI.12.4), kanuka (RV. VIII.66.4).

The last argument is a positive proof, establishing a fact that the tradition could not remain intact till Yaska's time. To meet these objections Yaska says:

- (a) The Mantras have a sense, for their words are the same (as those in the ordinary language).
- (b) The fixity of words and their order is also found in the case of our daily language, e.g., indragni, pitaputrau.
- (c) The Mantras being endowed with form by Brāhmanas cannot be a valid argument because the Brāhmanas repeat what has actually been already told by the Mantras.
- (d) As for the enjoining of something impracticable, it depends on the statements of the Vedas, whether an act is himsā or ahimsā.
- (e) The contents of the Mantras are not self-contradictory. Such phrases occur in ordinary language: 'this Brahmana is without a rival', 'the king has no enemy'.
 - (a) श्रर्थवन्तः शब्दसामान्यात् । (N. 1.16)
 - (b) यथो एतत् नियतवाचोयुक्तयो नियतानुपूर्व्यो मर्वान्त इति । लौकिकेष्वय्येतत् — इन्द्राग्नी, पिताश्रुताविति । (N. 1.16)
 - (c) उब्तिनुवाद: स भवति । (N. 1.16)
 - (d) यथो एतवनुषपन्नार्था भवन्ति—इत्याम्नायवचनात् अहिंसा प्रतीयते ॥ (N. 1.16)
 - (e) लौकिकेव्वप्येतत् असपत्नोऽयं बाह्यणोऽनिमत्नो राजेति ।

- (f) As for the ordaining of something with which a man is already familiar, people are likewise greeted by their names, though they already knew them.
- (g) As for the obscure significance of Vedic words, it is the fault of the post that the blind does not behold it; it is the man's fault. More knowledge is required for this purpose.

From this discussion, it is quite clear that in the days of Yaska, the sense of the Vedic hymns became obscure. One thing is also evident from Kautsa's statements that he held the Vedas in reverence and he admitted the efficacy of the Mantras. He only maintained that the Vedas have no significance.

There is again a point which invites our notice. When the Vedic glossaries in the form of Nighantus were compiled, it was not thought desirable to add a commentary to these lists of words; because people could have needed only a very little help for understanding the Vedic text. This help was provided by the Nighantu without any commentary on it. But the time rolled on till the necessity of appending scientific and exhaustive commentaries was felt. When Yaska wrote his commentary, the Nighantus were regarded a poor help in the understanding of the Vedic text.

Prof. A. A. Macdonell thinks that Yāska did not possess a continuous tradition from the time "when the Vedic hymns were composed." The gap between the poets and Yāska must have been considerable. No doubt we find it amply proved by the divergences of opinion among his predecessors as quoted by him. Thus one of these, by the name Aurnavābha, interprets the word nāsatyau as an epithet of Aśvins, as "True and False"; another Āgrāyana, as "Leaders of Truth" (satyasya pranetārau), while Yāska himself thinks it may mean "nose-born" (nāsikā prabhavau).

Yaska, moreover, mentions several different schools of interpretations, each of which explained difficulties in accordance with its own particular theory. Yaska's own interpretations, which in all cases of doubt are based on etymology, are evidently often merely conjectural, for he frequently gives several interpretations of a word. Thus he explains the epithet jata-vedas in as many as five different ways.

⁽f) यथो एतत् जानन्तं संप्रेष्यतीति जानन्तमिवादयते ।

⁽g) यथो एतत् अविस्पष्टार्था भवन्तीति नैव स्थाणोरपराद्यो यदेनमन्द्यो न पर्यात । प्रकापराद्य: स भवति । भूयोविद्य: प्रशस्यते ।। (N. I.16)

But all this is due to the fact that Yaska flourished at the time which was quite far away from the ancient seers.

Whether there was any regular tradition of the Vedic interpretations preserved throughout the period which must have elapsed between the Mantras on the one hand and the Nirukta on the other, it is very difficult to decide in the present condition of the Vedic studies. Though, Europeans may not regard Yaska as infallible, still they cannot altogether neglect the precious help they receive from him.

The position of Yaska as an interpreter of the Vedas, is very high. It is beyond doubt that he occupies a place which no other commentator can dream of. His contribution is solid and based on scientific method of interpreting the Vedas. He is unrivalled in this domain. All commentators of all times to come, including Europeans, cannot move a step further without the help of the hidden treasure of the Nirukta, which is a source of inspiration to all. Roth, the founder of Philology, is erroneous in comparing Yaska with Sayana and Mahādhara who could not properly follow and understand precisely what Yaska had said, yet who tried their best to follow into the footprints of this great scholar of the Vedic learning. Yāska's explanations are based on etymology and tradition. It is wrong to say that Yaska had no regard for traditional interpretation. He always quotes from the Brāhmaṇas to support his derivative explanations. Even Roth himself has had to admit the greatness of Yāska over all other commentators:

"He (Yaska) too is a learned interpreter, who works with materials which his predecessors had collected but he possesses an incalculable advantage, in point of time, over those compilers of detailed and continuous commentaries and belongs to quite a different period, viz., when Sanskrit was still undergoing a process of natural growth."

We are also not prepared to accept that Yaska's explanations are quite conjectural and not based on the Vedic traditions. Although there are a few cases where the derivations offered by Yaska appear to be fanciful (which, if we study them *deeply, will undoubtedly prove to be right ones), still in a large number of cases Yaska's remarks are followed by iti ha brāhmaṇam or iti vijñayate, which clearly indicates that the author possesses some basic traditions in support of which he quotes passages. All these quotations could be traced but for the non-availability of the many Brahmanas and the Śakhas. The Brahmana citations in the Nirukta have been collected and identified by Gune.¹

A cursory reading of the Nirukta reveals that the Vedic studies were very popular at that time. The Vedas were read with great interest and devotion and a number of controversies regarding their meanings were current. Sometimes we find that the scholars held views quite opposed to each other. Therefore, we find that several older interpreters of the Vedas, both classes and individuals, are frequently mentioned by Yaska. But unfortunately none of their works are available now-a-days. The following are the schools of the Vedic interpreters referred to in the Nirukta:

1. The Nairuktas

Of these, the Nairukta is the most general name, meaning thereby the old expounders of the Veda of the same type as Yaska himself. The Nairukta school takes its stand on etymological derivations. They say that all nouns are derived from the verbal roots:

नामान्याख्यातजानि शाकटायनो नैश्वतसमयश्च ।। (N. I.il)

["All nouns are derived from the roots", thus says Śākaṭāyana, and this is the view of the etymologists (the Nairuktas).]

But some grammarians (perhaps including Pāṇini) and Gārgya maintain that na sarvāṇi (N. I.11), i.e. "not all", i.e. there are some nouns, e.g. rūdhis, which are not derivative.

2. Vaiyākaranas

Yaska also mentions his difference of opinion from the Vaiya-karanas (the grammarians) in the explanation of a Vedic stanza:

चत्वारि वाक् परिमिता पदानि । (RV. 1.164.45)

According to the Nairuktas, the phrase, 'four-fold words', means 'Rg, Yajur, Sama and the worldly usage'. But "the nouns, verbs, upasargas and nipatas (prefixes and particles) are the four kinds of words" according to the Grammarians.

(N. XIII.9)

3. Ārsa

The third school is called Ārṣa. They explain the "four words" as with and the Three Great Sayings (Mahavyāhṛtis), i.e. bhuḥ, bhuvaḥ and svaḥ. (N. XIII.9)

4. The Yajñikas

According to the Yajñikas, i.e. the ritualists, the Mantras, Kalpas, Brahmanas and the daily usages are the four kinds of words referred to in the Nirukta. (XIII. 9)

In addition to the exposition of the Veda in the stricter sense, there existed also liturgical interpretations of numerous passages such as we find in the Brāhmaṇas and other various treatises, in which it was attempted to bring the letter of the received text into harmony with the existing ceremonial. Such liturgical interpretations are called by Yāska, those of the Yājñikas. These Yājñikas in addition to an instance cited above have been referred to in the following cases:

(a) In the Nirukta (V.11) a Vedic verse एक्या प्रतिष्ठा (RV. VIII. 74.4) has heen explained. According to Yājñikas here, the phrase sarānsi trinsat (i.e. thirty lakes) means trinsat ukthapatrāni (i.e. thirty uktha-patras) while according to the Nairuktas it refers to:

विशत् ग्रपरपक्षस्य ग्रहोराताः विशत् पूर्वपक्षस्य ।

(h) According to the Yajñikas, a Mantra where no Devata has been specified (anirdista-devata) belongs to a Devata of the Sacrifice or of the part of the Sacrifice. In other cases all Mantras have Prajapati as their Devata. But the Nairuktas accept nārā-sansa as Devata in such cases:

यब्देवत: स यज्ञो यज्ञांशे वा तद्देवता भवन्ति । श्रथान्यत्न यज्ञात् प्राजापत्या इति याज्ञिका: नाराशंसा इति नैक्कता: ।। (N. VII.4)

- (c) Anumati and raka are synonyms of paurnamāsī (i.e. the full-moon night), while according to the Nairuktas they are devapatnīs (N. XI.29) (i.e. consorts of Gods).
- (d) Similarly sinīvālī and kuhū are amāvasyā (i.e. the moonless night) according to the Yājnikas but the Nairuktas take them to mean devapatnīs.

 (N. XI.31.32)

(e) Gau is dharma-dhuk according to the Yājñikas but the same is "the thundering of the clouds" according to the Nairuktas.

(N. XI.41)

Similar is in the case of the word dhenu.

(N. XI.43)

5. The Atmapravadas

According to this school, the utterances of the cattle, musical instruments, animals and of the Atma (i.e. human beings) are four types of words.

(N. XIII.9)

6. The Parivrājakas

This sect is referred to by Yaska while explaining the following Vedic stanza:

बहुप्रजा निर्ऋतिमाविवेश।

(RV. I.164.32; N. II.8)

Here the Parivrājakas (the Samnyāsins) explain it as "A man with too many offsprings courts calamities" (बहुप्रजा: কুৰন্তুমাদ্বান) while the Nairuktas interpret the word nir-rtl as "the earth" and the word bahu prajāḥ as "plenty of clouds", i.e. the whole verse according to the Nairuktas refers to varşa-karma.

(N. II.1)

7. The Pūrva-Yājñikas

A school of the Pūrva-Yājñikas also existed which appears to mean the "earlier liturgists". According to them, the word vaiśvānara means the "Aditya" (i.e. the sun), while Yāska takes it in the sense of the "terrestrial fire". (N. 7.22)

The following few schools mentioned in the Nirukta more frequently are very important so far as the Vedic interpretation is concerned.

8. The Akhyana Samaya

Here the word samaya denotes the idea of a sect or tradition (N. 1.11). While determining the form or appearance of the Devatas, Yaska refers to this school in the following words:

यथा वा पुरुषविधानामेव सतां कर्मात्मान एते स्युः।

यथा यत्तो यजमानस्य । एव चाख्यानसमय: ॥

(N. VII.7)

While discussing the appearances of the Devatas, Yaska offers four views: (1) that the Devatas have human forms or they are personal (Puruşa Vidha); (2) they are impersonal (A-puruşa Vidha); (3) they are of both the types; (4) the fourth view is that which has been quoted above and according to this theory the Devatas may be personal sentient beings but they are manifested in the impersonal forms of Agni, Sūrya, etc., which are their "Karma-Ātmās", as the yajamāna is a sentient person and he is manifested in his yajña—the sphere of his activities.

In the opinion of $Y\overline{a}ska$, there is One Supreme Being and all other Devatas are His limbs only:

एकस्यात्मनो ग्रन्थे देवा: प्रत्यङ्गानि भवन्ति । (N. VII.4)

In addition to the above quotation, the word স্বাৰ্থান has been used in the Nirukta seven times in the following contexts:

(a) Yaska explaining the verse:

यो जात एव प्रथमो मनस्वान् ······स जनास इन्द्र: ।। (RV. II.12.1) writes the following words:

ऋषेः वृष्टार्थस्य प्रीतिर्भवत्याख्यानसंयुक्ता ।

[Having visualised the (real) sense (of the Mantra) the seer takes delight (in finding) an স্থান্তবান (i.e. symbolic story) associated with it.]

By this statement Yaska appears to convey that "the legends are associated with the Mantras." This is the cause of the metaphorical descriptions which we come across in the Vedas.

(b) The same sentence has been repeated in the Nirukta (X.46) under the verse:

एक: सुपर्ण: स समुद्रमा विवेश। (RV. X.14.4)

In the following places we come across the reference to স্নাভ্যান :

(c) अथर्वाण: । भूगव: ।

माध्यमिको देवगण: इति नैरुक्ता:। पितर इत्याख्यानम्।।

[The Atharvāṇas or Bhṛgus are the Devatās of aerial region according to the Nairuktas while they are pitaras according to Akhyāna.] (N. XI.19)

(d) देवशुनी इन्द्रेण प्रहिता पणिभि: श्रसुरै: समूढ ।

इत्याख्यानम् ॥ (N. XI.25)

["The witch sent by Indra had a talk with the paņis." It is an Akhyana.]

(e) In Nirukta (XII. 41), Sadhyas are celestial beings according to the Nairuktas, while they are the Devatas of the earlier ages according to Akhyana.

साध्या सुस्थानीया इति नैष्कता: । पूर्वं देवयुगिमत्याख्यानम् । (N. XII.41)

(f) While explaining a verse (RV. I.8.16.1) from the Rgreda, Yaska quotes an Akhyana:

श्राह्मयत् उवा ग्रश्निवादित्येनाभित्रस्ता । तामश्यिनौ प्रमुमुचतुः । इत्याख्यानम् ।

[Uṣā, arrested by Aditya (i.e. sun), invoked Aśvins who rescued her. It is a (metaphorical) legend.] (N. V.21)

(g) Yāska explained (in the Nirukta (XI.34)) a verse from the Rgveda (X.10.14). Here he refers to an $\bar{A}khvana$:

यमी यमं चकमे । तां प्रत्याचक्ष । इत्याख्यानम् ।

[There is an Akhyāna that Yamī (i.e. the night) requested Yama (i.e. the day) for intercourse. Yama did not accept.] (N. XI.34)

It is a (metaphorical) legend. Here Yama and Yamī are figuratively described as brother and sister. The Vedic verse denounces their marriage. According to the Nairukta (X.19) Yamī is the thundering sound of the lightning. The roar of the lightning has been figuratively described as a cry of an amorous woman. The natural phenomenon has been explained poetically and symbolically by the Akhyanist. We must remember the already quoted words of Yaska regarding these legends:

ऋषे: दृष्टार्थस्य प्रीतिर्भवत्याख्यानसंयुक्ता ।

[The seer finds pleasure in giving a tinge of tale to what he has perceived and realised.] (N. X.10)

9. The Aitihasikas

The Aitihāsikas are generally referred to while noticing differences in the conception of the Vedic Devatas. As interpreters they take the euhemeristic view, according to which the gods of mythology were generally deified mortals and their deeds the amplification in imagination of human acts. We shall discuss this topic separately later on.

10. The Naidanas

According to some scholars the mode of interpretation adopted by the Naidanas is akin to that of the Aitihasikas. By this, we may probably understand that this method of explanation referred to the origin of the words and conceptions, to occasions which were in a certain sense historical. But Durga explains this term as निवानि मित ग्रन्थ:, तिहवी नैवानाः, i.e. the Nidāna is a book; persons who know it are called the Naidānas.

But we think that the Naidana school was akin to the Nairukt; as because from the Nirukta, where the view of this school is mentioned twice, it is clear in the following contexts that they were etymologists and not Aitihasikas (i.e. historians).

(a) In the Nirukta (VI.9), the word syala has been explained as syalah asannah sannyogena iti naidanah.

Here the word has been etymologically explained by the Naidanas.

(b) The word sāma is explained by this school as ऋचा समं मेने इति नैदाना: (N. VII.12). Here too the Naidānas are quoted for their etymological explanation and nowhere else in the Nirukta these Naidānas are referred to.

Thus we can safely say that according to the Nirukta, there were ten schools of interpreters of the Veda during the time of Yaska.

In addition to these schools of thought, Yaska mentioned the following individual authorities by name in the Nirukta who were regarded as interpreters of the Vedas:

1.	Agrāyaņa	2.	Aupamanyava
3.	Aurņavābha	4.	Kraustuki
5.	Galava	6.	Carma Śiras
7.	Taitīki	8.	Śatavalakṣa
9.	Śakapūņi	10.	Son of Śākapūņi
11.	Sthaulāșthivi	12.	Kathakya
13.	Audumbarayana	14.	Gargya
15.	Gargyayani	16.	Śākalya
17.	Śakaṭayana	18.	Kautsa

IMPORTANCE OF THE AITIHASIKA SCHOOL

Yāska attaches great importance to the method of interpretation (of the Veda) adopted by the Aitihāsikas (i.e. the historians). This view has been mentioned side by side with the Nairuktas, almost in all cases. It can be legitimately presumed that the Aitihāsika method was next to the Nairuktas in importance and popularity. Yaska refers to them or quotes their view showing contrast with the Nairuktas in the following words:

- 1. इत्यैतिहासिका:-इति नैरुक्ताः ।
- 2. तत्रेतिहासमाचक्षते।
- 3. तदभिवादिनी एषा ऋग्भवति ॥

The difference between these two views is that the words, which according to the Aitihāsikas are "proper nouns" indicating some persons or things or places, are common nouns according to the Nairuktas who depend upon the general sense or quality expressed by etymological method. To illustrate this difference and to show what sort of explanations and interpretations are attempted in the Nirukta, we cite below a passage from the Nirukta (II.16) which refers to the meaning of the word vitra:

तत् को वृतः ? मेघ इति नैरुक्ताः । त्वाष्ट्रोऽसुर इत्यैतिहासिकाः । ग्रपां च ज्योतिषश्च मिश्रीमावकर्मणो वर्षकर्म जायते । तत्वोपमार्थेन युद्धवर्णा भवन्ति । ग्रहिवत्तु खलु मन्त्रवर्णा ब्राह्मणवादाश्च । विवृद्धचा शरीरस्य स्रोतांसि निवारयाञ्चकार । तस्मिन् हते प्रसस्यन्विरे ग्रापः ।

["Who was $V_{r}tra$?" "A cloud", say the Nairuktas (etymologists); "An asura, son of Tvaṣṭṛ," say the Aitihasikas (story-tellers); the fall of rain arises from the mingling of the waters and of lightning. This is figuratively depicted as a conflict. The hymns and the Brahmanas describe $v_r tra$ as a serpent: by the expansion of his body, he blocked up the streams. When he was destroyed, the waters flowed forth.]

From this statement it is quite evident that Yāska did not share the view of the Aitihāsikas. Because the Nairuktas hold that the Vedas which are revealed works and eternal do not contain stories of the mortal beings. Therefore, he gives derivation of every word, including the so-called proper nouns, e.g. Vrtra and Indra, which according to the Nairukta school are 'a cloud' and 'the thunderbolt'. The phrase in the abovequoted citation, तसोपमार्थेन युद्धवर्णा भवन्ति, clearly points out that all these tales are figurative and denote some natural or spiritual aspect.

Instances can be multiplied but paucity of space does not permit too exhaustive a treatment. The following are the other places where Yaska has referred to the interpretations of the story-tellers; of course, Yaska has his own interpretation based on etymological derivations there also;

(a)	N. II.17	Legends.
(a)	N. II.17	Ahi—the serpent.
(b)	N. II.10	Devāpi and Śantanu.
(c)	N. II.24	Viśvāmitra and the Rivers.
(d)	N. XII.10	Sarnyu.
(e)	N. I.5	Indra and Agastya.
(f)	N. X.25	Viśvakarman.

Now we give below a few principles (which Yaska enumerates) upon which the Nairuktas base their interpretation of the Vedic words:

(a) नामान्याख्यातजानि इति शाकटायनो नै हक्तसमयश्च। (N. I.12)

That is, all Vedic words are derivative or yaugika. Thus according to him no word in the Veda is $r\bar{u}dli$, i.e. conventional or proper noun. They indicate a general sense given by the etymology. Thus there is no scope for historians to smell a story here. Some scholars, taking into view a good number of explanations given by Yaska, wrongly conclude that Yaska was not sure about the meanings of words and thus he had no tradition behind. It is not just to say that Yaska who quotes Brahmanas (iti ha vijnayate) to support his view invariably had no tradition behind. The tentative explanations given by him cover the views of all schools because the Vedic words have no restricted meanings. The scope of the Veda is very vast and wide. Hence we are told in the Manusmṛti:

सेनापत्यं च राज्यं च दण्डनेतृत्वमेव च।	,
सर्वलोकाधिपत्यं च वेद-शास्त्रविदर्हति।।	(MS. XII.100)
चातुवर्ण्यं त्रयो लोका: चत्वारश्चाश्रमाः पृथक्।
भूतं भविष्यं भव्यं च सर्वं वेदात् प्रसिद्ध्यति ॥	(MS. XII.97)
सः सर्वोऽभिहितो वेदे सर्वज्ञानमयो हि स: ।	(MS. II.7)

Thus the sphere of the Vedic conception is unlimited and unrestricted. The Vedic words have general application. Hence Yaska himself says:

पारोपर्यवित्सु तु खलु वेदितृषु भूयोविद्य: प्रशस्यो भवति । (N. 1.16)

(b) Yaska further declares that if we do not adhere to the Nirukta or its theory of interpretation, no clear idea of the Veda can be rightly understood. The study of the Nirukta leads to the right interpretation of the Vedas. He says:

श्रयापीदमन्तरेण मन्त्रेष्वयंत्रत्ययो न विद्यते । (N. I.17)

(c) Yaska does not accept the existence of tales or legends in the Vedas. We have discussed this point above. The following citations deserve notice here:

तत्रोपमार्थेन युद्धवर्णा भवन्ति

(N. II.16)

"The war descriptions are merely figurative," i.e., these statements do not depict any reality. The cause of adopting such figurative method is:

ऋषे दृष्टार्थस्य प्रीतिर्भवत्याख्यानसंयुक्ता ।

(N. X.10, 46)

Skandasvāmī in his commentary on the Nirukta (II. 78) says:

एवमाख्यानरूपाणां मन्त्राणां यजमाने नित्येषु च पदार्थेषु योजना कर्त्तव्या । एष शास्त्रे सिद्धान्त:, श्रोपचारिको मन्त्रेष्ट्राख्यानसमय: । परमार्थेन नित्यपक्षः इति सिद्धम् ।

That is, the legendary method followed in the Mantras is only figurative. In reality eternity (of the Veda) is the view of the Nairuktas.

Similarly in the Niruktasamuccaya (p. 71) we are told:

श्रौपचारिकोऽयं मन्द्रेष्वाख्यानसमय: ।

Durga also remarks:

स पुनरयमितिहास: सर्वेप्रकारो हि नित्यमिवविक्षतस्वार्थः । तदर्यप्रतिपत्तृणामुप-देशपरकत्वात् । (N. X.26)

[Here the Itihasa does not express any meaning. Its aim is to teach some moral to those who accept their meaning.]

(d) Yaska does not attach too much importance to the case-endings and accents. The etymologist must give a sensible interpretation. He should aim at the meaning even at the cost of case-endings and accents. He says:

म्रर्थो नित्यः परीक्षेत ।	(N. II.1)
यथार्थं विभक्तीः सन्नमयेत् ।	(N. II.1)
कथमनुवात्तप्रकृति नाम स्यात् । दृष्टब्ययं तु भवति ।	(N. I.8)
पञ्चभ्यर्थे प्रथमा वा ।	(N. VI.1)

(e) In the Nirukta (V. 21) the word मासकृत् occurring in the Rgveda (I. 7.23.3) has been interpreted as मास + कृत् (i.e. maker of months) and also as मा-सकृत् (i.e. once me). This shows that Yaska does not adhere too much to the Pada text. His aim is to give the exact and real meaning.

- (f) Yāska does not always adhere to the theory that the linga (i.e the word occurring in the Mantra) is the Devatā. The implied sense of the word is also regarded as Devatā in a Mantra. In the Nirukta (IX.11) a ratha (the word which does not occur in the Mantra) is accepted as its Devatā because it is conveyed by the word vanaspati there.
- (g) In his commentary on the Nirukta, Skandasvāmī declares that every Mantra has triple sense—ādhyātmika, ādhidaivika and ādhiyajñika. He says:

सर्ववर्शनेषु सर्वे मन्त्रा योजनीया: । कुत: ? स्वयमेव भाष्यकारेण सर्व-मन्त्राणां तिप्रकारस्य विषयस्य प्रदर्शनाय "ग्रयं वाच: पुष्पफलमाह।" (N. 1.20)

इति यज्ञादीनां पृष्पफलत्वेन प्रतिज्ञानात ।

(N. VII.5)

(h) Tarka as a seer:

We cannot leave this topic without citing the following passage from the twelfth section of the 13th Chapter of the Nirukta, which implies antiquity of the Mantras and the necessary qualifications for interpreting them:

अयं मन्त्रार्थिचन्ताभ्यूहोऽभ्यूळहः । अपि श्रुतितोऽपि तर्कतः । न तु पृथक्त्वेन मन्त्रा निर्वक्तव्याः । प्रकरणश एव तु निर्वक्तव्याः । न ह्येषु प्रत्यक्षमस्ति — अनृषः । अतपसो वा पारोपर्यवित्सु तु खलु वेदितृषु भूयोविद्यः प्रशस्यो प्रवित । इत्युक्तं पुरस्तात् । मनुष्या वा ऋषीषूत्कामस्सु देवान् अश्रुवन् । को न ऋषिः प्रविष्यति इति । तेभ्यः एतं तर्कपृषि प्रायच्छन् । मन्त्रार्थिचन्ताभ्यूहमभ्यू छहम् । तस्मात् यदेव किञ्चानू चानोऽभ्यूहित-आर्षं तद् भवति । (N XIII 12)

[The reflective deduction of the sense of the Mantras is effected by the help of oral tradition and reasoning. The Mantras are not to be interpreted as isolated but according to their contexts, for a person, who is not a seer or a devotee, has no intuitive insight into their meaning. We have said before that among those who are versed in tradition, he who is more learned deserves specific praise. When the Rsis (seers) were ascending, men inquired of the gods, "Who shall be seer (Rsi)?" The gods gave them for a seer, (the science of) reasoning; the act of deducting by reflection the sense of the hymns. Therefore, whatever meaning any learned man deduces by reasoning possesses authority equal to Rsis.]

Roth regards the 13th Chapter of the Nirukta, where this passage occurs, as a work of some author subsequent to Yāska. But there is sufficient proof to establish that the ancients definitely admitted the necessity of Reason in the determination of religious truth of the interpretation of important or obscure scriptural texts. From this passage it is quite clear that the inductive method of interpretation was fully known to the ancients, including Yāska.

PANINI AND PATANJALI

No doubt, Yāska refers to some grammarians in his work and there had been many grammarians before Yāska, but their works could not survive. Pāṇini's great Aṣṭādhyāyī perhaps eclisped all of them. Patañjali mentions 18 aims of studying grammar; one of them is the safe preservation of the Vedas: रक्षार्थ वेदानामध्येयं व्याकरणम्. But still Pāṇini's grammar mainly deals with the classical Sanskrit, i.e. the language spoken in the higher circles of the society of his period. He also treats Vedic forms as only irregularities or where they differ from the spoken language. He also states that the "subjunctive" (let) was used in the Vedic language only.

Dayananda has quoted a few aphorisms from Panini in his Bhūmikā to show the treatment of Vedic words as given by this great sage.

Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī on occasions beyond number clearly admits all the principles of interpreting the Vedas which have been laid down by Yāska.

Yāska says, यथायं विमक्ती: सन्नमयेत्, while Pāṇini echoes the same things as बहुलं छुन्दिस सव्यथ्ययो बहुलम् . The author of the Mahabhasya (Patañjali) elucidates these aphorisms in the following verse :

सुष्तिङ्गपप्रहलिङ्गनराणां कालहलच्स्वरकर्तृयङ्गां च । व्यत्ययमिच्छति शास्त्रकृदेषां सोऽपि च सिद्ध्यति बाहुलकेन ॥

Thus we come to the maxim which Yaska gives in the Nirukta: अर्थ नित्य: परीक्षेत न संस्कारमाहियेत, i.e., the interpreter should always attach importance to the sense and he should not care for the particular grammatical formations, because the logical interpretation is the supreme aim.

THE PURVAMIMAMSA

It is one of the six systems of philosophy of ancient India. Its aim, in the words of Colebrooke, is "the interpretation of the Vedas". Soma Natha also says in his work, the Mayakhamala:

"Its purpose is to determine the sense of the Revealed Speech."

But in reality the $P\bar{u}rvam\bar{n}m\bar{o}m\bar{s}\bar{a}$ does not interpret the Vedic text in the manner of a commentary. It only lays down rules and canons for the proper application of the liturgical texts and for the ascertainment of the relative position and importance of the texts where they are mutually inconsistent. The following quotation is a fine specimen of the rules and canons which are laid down by the $M\bar{u}m\bar{u}$ is a fire the purpose:

श्रुतिलिङ्गवाक्यप्रकरणस्थानसमाख्यानां समवाये पारदीर्बल्यमर्थविष्रकर्षात् ।

[Direct mention, a mere indicatory mark, a sentence, context, order, or place of mention and etymology; when any of these circumstances referring to the same text leads to inconsistent conclusions, every following circumstance is weaker than every preceding one, and therefore must yield to it.]

PREDECESSORS OF SAYANA

There were 16 interpreters of the Vedic texts who flourished before the advent of the great commentator Sāyaṇa. From a cursory study of their works it becomes quite evident that the vital and all inclusive method of interpretation adopted by Yāska and his predecessors was long forgotten now. The predecessors of Sāyaṇa took it for granted that the whole Vedic text meant nothing but rituals. It was a wrong notion, under which these writers toiled hard and produced commentaries referring to nothing but the sacrificial process. Yāska did not cherish this false notion. His explanations are general and ādhidaivika. We never come across a single instance from the Nirukta where explanation of a particular text refers to the ritual performance. Thus we find that gradually the significance of the Vedas was made narrower and narrower.

The following 16 commentators preceded Sayana:

- 1. Skandasvāmī
- 2. Durga (in the commentary of the Nirukta)
- 3. Udgitha
- 4. Harisvami (in the Satapatha)
- 5. Uvvața (Yajurveda Bhāsya)
- 6. Vararuci (in the Niruktasamuccaya)
- 7. Bhatta Bhaskara (Taittiriya Samhita & Taittiriya Bhasya)
- 8. Venkata Madhava (Rg Bhasya)
- 9, Atmananda (Asya Vamiya Bhasya)
- 10. Ananda Tirtha (40 hymns of the Rgveda)

- II. Satrughna (in Mantra Dīpika)
- 12. Gunavişnu (Chandogya Mantra Bhasya)
- 13. Mādhava (Sāmaveda)
- 14. Bharatasvāmī (Sāmaveda)
- 15. Devapāla (in the Bhāṣya of (Laugakṣī Gṛhya)
- 16. Anandabodha (Kānva Śakha)

To this list Nara Sinh Yati is to be added (Jayanrtha Tika and Chalari Tika).

17. Sāyana (Rg., Sama, Atharva and Kanva Śakba).

1 & 2. Skandasvāmī and Durga

The earliest commentary available on the Rgveda, after Yāska, was written by Skandasvāmī, who was also the author of a commentary on the Nirukta. Durga's Bhāsya on the Nirukta is also very popular. Both these scholars can rightly claim a very high place among the interpreters of the Vedas.

The following few points, related to the method of interpreting the Vedic text, are common to both of them. These are the basic principles, which were shown by Yaska (quoted by us above) and which were gradually forgotten or neglected by the later writers of the Vedic commentaries.

(a) According to Yāska all the hymns or Mantras have triple meanings. They should and can be interpreted to denote the three types of significance, i.e., the ā lhyātmika, ādhidaivika and ādhiyājnika. Skanda and Durga, both hold this view and they clearly express this fundamental principle in unambiguous terms.

Skanda says:

सर्वदर्शनेषु च सर्वे मन्त्रा योजनीयाः। कुतः ? स्वयमेव भाष्यकारेण विप्रकारस्य विषयस्य सर्वमन्त्राणां प्रदर्शनाय ।। अर्थं वाचः पुष्पकलमाह (N. 1.25) इति यज्ञा-दीनां पुष्पकलत्वेन प्रतिज्ञानात् ।। (SK. N. VII.5; Bhāṣya III, pp. 36,37)

[All Mantras are to be interpreted according to all systems of philosophy; because the Bhāsyakāra (Yāska) himself has declared that all Mantras imply three meanings, as he has stated that sense is the flower and fruit of the (revealed) speech, i.e., the yajñas, etc., are the puṣpaphalas (of the Vedic words).]

Similarly Durga echoes the same purport in more explicit terms:

तर्ववं सित प्रतिविनियोगमस्य अन्येनार्थेन भवितव्यम् । त एते वक्तुरिमप्रायवशात् अन्यत्वमपि भजन्ते मन्ताः । न ह्येतेषु श्रर्थस्येयसावधारणमस्ति । महार्थाः ह्येते दुष्परिज्ञानाश्च । यथाश्वारोहवैशिष्टचयशात् प्रश्वः साधुः साधुतरश्च भवति, एवमेते वक्तृवैशिष्टचात् साधून् साधुतराश्चार्थान् स्रवन्ति ।

तद्भैवं सित लक्षणोद्देशमात्रमेवैतिस्मन् शास्त्रे निर्वचनमेकैकस्य क्रियते । क्वचिच्चा-घ्यात्माधियज्ञाधिवैवोपदर्शनार्थम् । तस्मादेतेषु यावन्तोऽर्था उपपद्येरन् ग्राधिदैवा-घ्यात्माधियज्ञाश्रयाः सर्व एव ते योज्याः । नात्रापराधोऽस्ति । (N. II.8)

[Interpretations of the Mantras vary corresponding to the various applications. (The sense) of the Mantras changes in accordance with the intention of the user because the power of expression (of the hymns) has never been restricted. They have unlimited implications and are hard to be fully comprehended. As a good or a better horseman makes a horse good or better, so the Mantras denote good or better senses when they are handled by a learned or a more learned interpreter.

Thus the explanations of words given in this treatise are only indicative and suggestive of other meanings. They have the adhyatmika, adhidaivika and adhiyajña applications. Therefore, whatever meaning appears to be reasonable (pertaining to any category of the above-mentioned meanings) should be accepted as right. None should find fault here.]

Again on page 211, he writes : प्रकरणमात्रमेवेदमुपदश्चितं भाष्यकारेण, i.e., "the Bhāṣyakāra (Yāska) has shown only the way (of interpretations)." Again in the Nirukta (VII. 6) Durga repeats the same theme in different words.

These two citations from Skanda and Durga make it quite clear that the system and the procedure of interpreting hymns in the abovenoted three systems, which were very common with Yāska, have come down to Skanda and Durga also. Both these scholars have clearly declared here that the Mantras are to be interpreted in three different manners. But we shall see later on that this tradition or convention of the earlier Vedic scholars could not reach Sāyaṇa, the great commentator of the Vedas who interpreted the Vedas only according to Mīmāmsaka school.

- (b) The other common point between Skanda and Durga is that they accept the principle that svara (accent) and samskara (particular grammatical formations) should not be much adhered to while explaining a word or stanza. It is only the sense which should play a predominant role here. Durga says:
 - (i) एवं व्याकरणेऽपि लक्षणप्रधाने सित अर्थवरोन लोपागमो विपरिणामश्च शब्दानां दृष्टः । किमूत निरुक्ते यदर्थप्रधानमेव ॥ (N. II.2; Tika, p. 102)

- (ii) श्रयंनित्य इत्युक्तेऽथंप्रधान इति गम्यते । श्रयंप्राधान्येन श्रनादृत्य स्वरसंस्कारौ परीक्षेत । (N. II.1; Țīkā, p. 97)
- (iii) मन्त्रार्थपरिज्ञानादेव हि श्रग्नेराध्यात्मिकाधिदैवाधियज्ञेष्ववस्थानं याथात्म्यतो दृश्यते । (N. IV.19; Ṭīkā, p. 315)

Skanda also shares this view and adds:

रूढचर्थस्य ग्रसम्भवात् कर्म-निमित्तो यथा प्रतीयेत इत्येवमर्थम् ।

[Conventional $(r\bar{u}dhi)$ meanings are impossible (in the Vedas). Hence attempt should be made to discover the derivative sense.]

(N. I.15; Ţīkā, p. 92)

The same principle has been followed by Durga in the Tīkā (pp. 276, 324). All this goes to show that in explaining the Vedas conventional method should not be followed but care should be taken to adopt the method of etymological explanation.

(c) The third point of similarity between these two scholars is that both of them accept the view of the Nirukta that the Vedas do not contain any human story or any other story. They are followers of the Nairukta school referred to already.

3. Udgītha (687)

He is also a follower of the Nirukta school and his Bhāṣya is similar to that of Skanda. He also accepts the yaugikavāda. Following the method of the etymologists, he interprets the word ऋषि as रश्मि while explaining the verse (RV. X.82.3) यता सप्तऋषीन पर एकमाह: ।

4. Harisvāmī

He was a pupil of Skanda and accepts his teacher's views. He did not write any commentary on a Samhitā but only on the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, which has come down to us only in one fragmentary manuscript. We have cited above from this MS (p. 2) a passage showing that the Śākhās are the glosses of the Vedas.

5. Uvvata

His Bhāşya on the Yajurveda is chiefly $\bar{a}dhiyaj\tilde{n}a$ but in the following places we get the "triple meanings":

YV. VII. 42, YV. X. 16, YV. XXXIII. 74.

6. Vararuci

He is the author of the Niruktasamuccaya, which is only available in quotations by Skanda. He also declares that निरुक्तप्रक्रियानुरोधेण मन्त्रा निर्वक्तप्रक्रियानुरोधेण मन्त्रा निर्वक्तप्रक्रियानुरोधेण मन्त्रा निर्वक्तष्र्याः, i.e., "the Mantras are to be explained in accordance with the Nairukta school."

7. Bhattabhaskara (11th century A.D.)

He wrote commentaries on the Taittiriya Samhitā, the Taittiriya Brāhmaṇa and the Taittiriya Āraṇyaka. His style is akin to that of Sāyaṇa. We come across some very interesting derivative meanings of some words given in the Taittiriya Samhitā:

(a)	गावो ≕गन्तार: ।	(Vol. I, p. 296)
\ /		, , ,

He accepts the principle of interchange in accent and grammatical formations, e.g., case-endings.

8. Venkata Madhava

He wrote a Bhāṣya on the Rgveda and follows the Yājīika school. His commentary is very brief. His Bhāṣya is full of informations regarding accents, etc. A comprehensive commentary by Mādhava on the Rgveda has been published from Adyar.

9. Ātmānauda (1200-1300 V. E.)

He wrote an exhaustive commentary on a hymn beginning with the verse Asya Vāmīya. He refers to Skanda and others (on p. 3) and says that they interpreted Vedas on the lines of Yājñikas but he would give the ādhyatmika interpretations only. Again on p. 60 he writes:

ग्रिधियज्ञविषयं स्कन्दादिभाष्यम् । निरुक्तमिधिदैवतविषयम् । इदन्तु माष्ट्रयमाध्यात्मिविषयम् । न च भिन्नविषयाणां विरोधः ।

[The Bhāṣyas of Skanda, etc., are adhiyajāa (i.e. contain liturgical explanations) while the sphere of the Nīrukta is adhidaivata (i.e. pertaining to physical forces). But this commentary of ours is adhyātma (i.e. refers to the self or soul).]

According to him, the word agni means agranī, i.e., Supreme Being.

10. Anandatirtha (1255-1335 V.E.)

He wrote a commentary on the first 40 hymns of the Rgveda. Jayatīrtha added a gloss to this commentary and this gloss has been again elucidated by another commentary called "Chalāri" by Narasimhapati. Here Viṣṇu is the chief God and all Mantras are addressed to him.

Anandatīrtha and Jayatīrtha accept the triple significance of the Mantras. The latter clearly writes:

निरुक्तब्याख्यानं बाह्यकर्मपरम् । उपनिषद्व्याख्यानमध्यात्मपरम् । विशेषतश्च वेदानां मगवान् ऋषिः । (p. 6)

In the Chalari Tika also we get such remarks in the similar words.

Rāghavendra Yati followed this principle in his Mantrārtha Mañjarī and remarked:

म्रान्याविदेवतापरत्वेन मध्यात्मपरत्वेन च इत्येवं म्रर्थपरतया व्याख्यानानि । (p. 2)

Here the Mantras have been explained in the above-said three ways. Again he supports his interpretation by adding the following remarks:

विष्णुः सर्ववेदप्रतिपाद्यः सर्ववेदानां विष्णवर्थत्वसिद्धेः ।

Viṣṇu (i.e. the Omnipresent and All Pervading Soul) is the main theme of all the Vedas as all the Vedas lead to the realisation of the Omnipresent Lord (Viṣṇu).

It deserves notice here that all the post-Yāska interpreters of the Vedas, including Sāyaṇa, explained the Vedas only in the liturgical sense, except Atmānanda and Ānandatīrtha to whom the entire credit of preserving the process of triple Vedic interpretation goes. Only these two scholars continued the old tradition of adhyatmika explanation, in spite of the fact that their sphere was very limited and they interpreted only a very small part of the Veda.

11. Satrughna

He is the author of the Mantrārtha-Dīpikā. He follows the method of etymological explanation and shares the view that the Vedas contain three kinds of significance in every verse. The following citation shows that the Supreme Being who is One without a second is worshipped and glorified by various names in the Vedas:

य: देवः पुरुषः परमात्माध्येयत्वेनोक्त: तस्य प्रशंसार्थं नानारूपैरुपासनं दर्शयति । "तमेतमिति" य: पुरुष: उक्तः स परमात्मेति व्याख्येयः । (p. 250)

12. Gunavisnu

He is the follower of the Mīmāmisā school and all Mantras according to him refer to some sacrificial aspect. On page 116 of his Chāndogya-mantrabhāṣya, he states: विनियोगो बहायजे, i.e., the Mantra has its application to the Brahmayajña, and it is the only instance where he has shown a little departure from the traditional application.

13. Mādhava

He wrote commentary on the Samaveda.

14. Bharatasvāmī (1350 V. E.)

He, like Mādhava, wrote commentary on the Sāmaveda. Both these commentators have the same notions about the Vedic interpretation. For instance, they explained the word atri as adana-śīla on pp. 17 and 61 respectively.

15. Devapala

He explained and interpreted a few Vedic stanzas, quoted in the commentary of Laugaksīgṛhyasūtra. On pages 27, 55, 57 and 60, he accepted the ādhyātmika and ādhidaivika significance of the Vedas. Hence he interpreted the words Indra and Āditya as Supreme Lord.

Besides the above-mentioned predecessors of Sayana, the following minor Bhasyakaras also deserve a little notice here:

- 16. Anandahodha (Kanva Śakha)
- 17. Anantācārya (Yajurmañjari)
- 18. Mudgala (Pāraskaramantrabhāşya)
- 19. Venkațesa (Taittiri ya Samhita)

From this critical examination of these Vedic commentaries, it is quite evident that the predecessors of Sāyaṇa maintained and preserved the old tradition of interpreting hymns in the 'Triple-Process'. Unfortunately this time-honoured tradition could not reach Sāyaṇa, the great interpreter of the Vedas, who gave invariably sacrificial explanations everywhere.

ACARYA SAYANA

The most important contributions to the Vedic exegesis (after Yāska) were made by the great Sāyaṇa, who wrote Bhāṣyas on all the four Vedas. His Vedārthaprakāśa is a regular commentary on the Rgveda, and has a very informative and learned introduction.

In this commentary, the author has paraphrased each and every word in the text. All grammatical peculiarities, along with etymological derivations of obscure words, are given at proper places. He has also explained the liturgical application of each and every verse. It is unfortunate that Sayana believed that the entire Vedic text is related to yajñas or rituals. He has therefore taken special pains to explain each and every verse in accordance with the ritualistic school. Even the secular hymns have been shown possessing some sacrificial applications. He openly declared that the Vedas have no other purpose than sacrifices:

म्राध्वयंवस्य यज्ञेषु प्राधान्यात् व्याकृतः पुरा । यजुर्वेदोऽय होत्रार्थमृग्वेदो व्याकरिष्यते ॥

Thus his scope of interpretation is very narrow and limited. Yāska has never restricted the Vedas to one particular view or at least to the Ādhiyājñika school. We have proved above that Skanda and Durga admitted the triple process of interpretation of the Vedas.

Sayana was the minister of Bukka Raya, the king of Vijayanagar (now in ruins) near Hampi on the Tungabhadra river. Bukka and Harihara were brothers and founded the empire of Vijayanagar about the middle of the 14th century AD. It was under their patronage that Sayana and his brother Madhava, who was regarded as Guru by the princes, did all their literary activities. Sayana's other works are:

- (a) Commentary on Aitareya Brahmana
- (b) Commentary on Aitareya Āraņyaka
- (c) Commentary on Taittiriya Sainhita

Professor Macdonell has pointed out some principles of modern criticism which according to him would have been entertained by Sāyaṇa while interpreting the Vedas. These rules of higher criticism ought to have been adopted and followed. Thus the commentary of Sāyaṇa, viewed from this standpoint, is full of defects, and this cannot be denied. But before criticising Sāyaṇa on this point, we must take into consideration the basic idea of Vedic conception held by the author. It would be unfair to criticise him without properly understanding h m. To Sāyaṇa, the Veda was a holy book—a store-house of wisdom, secular and philosophical, whose authority was not to be questioned. Every word of it was sacred and consequently it was not possible for him to apply the rules of modern criticism to it.

From the critical examination of his commentary we can safely say that no living tradition relating to Vedic interpretation has reached Sāyaṇa. In case an obscure word occurs, he is indefinite about its meanings. He would propose more than one significance without giving his preference. Sometimes he connects verb with a subject without agreement in point of person or number. He also believes in धातुनामनेकार्यत्वम्, i.e., a root has more than one meaning. This principle has been adopted by him times without number to serve his purpose. Like Yāska, he depends chiefly upon the derivative meaning. He finds no hesitation to add a word or words to make the sense complete.

He invariably quotes passages from the Sarvānukramanī, the Brhaddevatā, Brāhmanas and Āranyakas. Wherever possible he cites from the Nirukta in the words: अन निरुक्तम्

There is great self-contradiction in Sayana, regarding the Vedic legends. In his Upodghata he refuted his opponent, who criticised the Vedic text as full of human legends and stories and thus it could not be regarded as revealed and eternal, by saying that the Vedas did not contain human and other tales. The Vedic words are used to denote general sense, i.e., these words are not proper nouns but are common nouns implying common quality of a person or a thing. In support of his theory, he cited a few aphorisms from the Mimamsa, e.g., परन्तु श्रुतिसामान्य-मात्रम ; भ्राख्या प्रवचनात ; उनतन्तु शब्दपूर्वत्वम ; quoted by us already. Then he proceeds to explain the significance of the so-called historical words or proper nouns by taking their etymological derivative sense. Thus according to him, the Vedas do not contain tales or myths. But it is a strange feature that he forgets all at once this forcibly established theory, while actually he comments upon the Vedic text. contradiction is very hard to reconcile. Not only this, but he explains the so-called Vedic myths in the light of later Pauranika ideas with whose influence, of course, he is strongly imbued. Thus Paurāņika influence is sometimes too much to be found in him. Thus while explaining the occasion of certain hymns, Sayana quotes legends which are absolutely unrelated to and incongruous with the spirit of the hymns. One instance I would cite here, which will indicate that the sense of the hymns was altogether forgotten or not completely comprehended. In hymn X. 121 the last words of every verse are करमे देवाय हविषा विधेम, which literally mean: "What God should we adore with an offering?" It is a natural and simple question or a yearning of the human heart to search after that God who is the origin of this universe, the first seed and the shaper of all life and is one without a second (एक ब्रासीत्). There is a natural desire in every human heart to know that Un-knowable.

Now Sayana explains this word kasmai and the hymn in a Paurānika way. Here he remarks: 'क' शब्दानिशेषाप्रजापितदेवता, i.e., the god Prajāpati is expressed by the word ka here. As we already pointed out, every hymn, every verse, must have a reference to a sacrifice and thus must have a deity according to him. For this purpose he goes as far as to discover a deity where none exists. He, therefore, raised the most ordinary things, e.g., stones, drums, grass and axe, to the artificial rank of deities. Following this principle Sāyana here, neglecting altogether the real sense of the whole hymn and the deep yearning of the devotee or a poet for the unknown God, raises the interrogative pronoun itself to the rank of deity and admits a god ka or 'who?' In his commentary he gives the following introductory remarks to this hymn:

अत कि शब्दोऽनिर्झातस्वरूपत्वात् प्रजापतौ वर्तते । यहा सृष्ट्यथं कामयते इति कः । कमेः प्रत्रत्ययः । यहा कं सुखं ; तद्भपत्वात् क इत्युच्यते । अयवा इन्द्रेण पृष्टः प्रजापितः मदीयं महत्त्वं तुभ्यं प्रदाय ग्रहं कः कीदृशः स्यामिति । स इन्द्रः प्रत्यूचे । यदीदं ब्रवीषि अहं कः स्यामिति । तदेव त्वं भवेति । अतः कारणात् क इति प्रजापितराख्यायते ।

Thus we see here four different explanations attributed to the word ka.

The notion, that the Vedas were written simply for the sake of sacrifices and that whatever interpretation is fit for sacrifices can be assigned to these hymns, has vitiated the whole system of Vedic exeges in India.

As every thing looks yellow to a jaundiced person, so Sāyaṇa smells sacrifices in every word of the Veda. The very ordinary words which have not even the remotest sense of sacrificial acts, e.g., jana, manuşya, jantu, nara, viţ, martta, etc., (which mean a man or group of men) have been explained as Yajamana, i.e., a sacrificer. For instance:

(a)	RV. I.60.4	मानुषेषु = यजमानेषु
(b)	RV. I.68.4	मनोरवत्ये = यजमानरूपायां प्रजायाम्
(c)	RV. J.128.1	मनुष:== मनुष्यस्य यजमानस्य
(d)	RV. I.140.12	जनान् ==यजमानान्

(f)	RV. I.31.15	विशाम् = यजमानरूपाणां प्रजानाम्

(g) RV, III, 8.5

तरः कर्मणां नेतार: ग्रष्टवर्षावयः

How strange it is that Sayana finds every man in this world as a sacrificer due to the wrong conception that the Vedas mean only rituals!

We have proved above beyond doubt that Yāska, Skanda, Durga, Ātmānanda, Jayatīrtha and other commentators clearly admitted that every verse in the Veda had three types of significance, i.e. pertaining to Soul (or the Supreme Soul), elements and yajñas. But the scope of Sāyaṇa is entirely limited and narrow as he miserably neglected two major aspects of the Vedic interpretation and only the Yājñika process has been imposed on every verse. We cite below a few instances from Sāyaṇa which will clearly show that the words Agni and Indra therein cannot mean sacrificial fire because of the qualifying adjectives which lead us to the conclusion that they imply some Omniscient Power:

MERITS OF SAYANA

Here we have pointed out some defects in Sāyaṇa's interpretation. But this is not all. The other side of the picture is yet to be painted. Let us imagine what the condition of the Vedic scholarship would have been today, had there not been the Vedārthaprakāśa of Sāyaṇa. This great interpreter of the Veda belonging to the 14th century has left no word unexplained, however obscure it may be. It would be better if we cite below a few words from Prof. M. Mül'er's preface to the Vedic Hymns:

"It is well known to them who have followed my literary publications that I never entertained any exaggerated opinion as to the value of the traditional interpretation of the Veda, handed down in the theological schools of India and preserved to us in the great commentary of Sāyaṇa. More than twenty years ago, when it required more courage to speak out than now, I expressed my opinion on that subject in no ambiguous language and was blamed for it by some of them who now speak of Sayana as a mere drag, in the progress of Vedic scholarship. Even a drag, however, is sometimes more conducive to the safe advancement of learning than a whip; and those who recollect the history of Vedic scholarship during the last five and twenty years know best that with all its faults and weaknesses, Sayana's commentary was a sine qua non for a scholar-like study of Reveda. I do not wonder that others who have more recently entered on that study are inclined to speak disparagingly of the scholastic interpretations of Sayana. They hardly know how much we all owe to his guidance in effecting our first entrance into this fortress of Vedic language and Vedic religion and how much even they, without being aware of it, are indebted to that Indian Eustathius. I do not withdraw an opinion which I expressed many years ago and for which I was much blamed at that time, that Sayana in many cases teaches us how the Veda ought not to be, rather than how it ought to be understood. But for all that, who does not know how much assistance may be derived from a first translation, even though it is imperfect; nay, how often the very mistakes of our predecessors help us in finding the right track? If now we can walk without Sayana1 we ought to bear in mind that five and twenty years ago, we could not have made even our first steps, we could never at least have gained a firm footing without his leading strings. If, therefore, we can now see further than he could, let us not forget that we are standing on his shoulders."

This is all right. Sāyaṇa fills a gap in the history of the Vedic interpretation which otherwise would have remained unfilled. Pischel and Geldner assign a positive value to this great commentator. He often hints the right meaning of a word. For instance, the word purīṣa means 'water'. Roth, who believed that any European exegetist can understand and interpret the Veda better than an Indian—remarks that all Indian interpreters explain the word purīṣa as 'water', whereas the word actually means 'land'. But this statement is open to challenge. Undoubtedly Sāyaṇa, in a number of cases, paraphrases this word as udaka, i.e. water; but in RV. X. 27.21 the word द्वरोबात् (Abl, Sing., from purīṣa) has been translated as प्रकात् मण्डलात्. Here Sāyaṇa is still more forward than Roth. Purīṣa means 'orb, circle', and here it is used to denote the word मण्डल, 'a region, domain, land, earth', as opposed to the 'sea' or 'ocean'. Again in the Taittirīya Samhitā (IV. 3.1) Sāyaṇa remarks: पुरोषशब्देन नद्यादिगता: सिकता उच्यन्ते. Thus here we find that the meaning which Roth assigns to the word purīṣa was well known to the Indian scholar and was accounted for in a more reasonable way. While explaining the verse from the Nadī Sūkta of the Rgveda, Yāska (N. II.22) interprets the word purīṣa as प्णाते: or पुराते:, i.e., it is derived from the root pṛ, to protect or to complete. Yāska also takes it in the sense of water on the authority of the Nighaṇṭu (I. 12).

Sāyaŋa prefaces each hymn by specification of its seer or Rsi: of the deity or deities to whom it is addressed; of the rhythmical structure of the several stanzas and of the viniyoga, the application of the hymn, or of portion of it, to the religious rites at which they are to be repeated.

He mentions several schools and works but does not throw any light upon the exact sources of information which he employs in his works. Thus he refers to the following:

(a)	Bhattabhaskara Miśra	(b)	Skandasvāmī
(c)	Kapardisvāmī	(d)	The Nairuktas
(e)	The Aitihasikas	(f)	The Pauranikas
(g)	The Śābdikas	(h)	The Sampradayavidas
, (i)	The Atmavidas	(j)	Bṛddhaśāsanam
(k)	Pūr vabhāşyakāras	(1)	Apare, etc.

MAHIDHARA

Mahīdhara was equally an important commentator on the Yajurveda; but from his Bhāṣya it is quite evident that he was a Vāma Mārgī and believed in the Tāntrika school of ritualists. It is useless to quote here a number of instances as the following one instance will convince the reader that something was seriously wrong with him. While explaining the Mantra (YV. XXIII.19) गणानांत्वा गणपति एहवामहे, etc., he remarks:

म्रत गणपति शब्देन म्रश्वो वाजी प्रहीतव्य:।

'Here the word Ganapati means a horse'. Then he adds: महिली यजमानस्य पत्नी यज्ञशालायां पश्यतां सर्वेषामृत्विजामश्वसमीपे शेते । शयाना सत्याह हे प्रश्व  ... क्षिपिस ।

"The wife of the sacrificer, in the presence of all the priests, lies with the horse nearby and then she addresses the horse and requests him....."

Thus Mahīdhara interprets this and the following nine verses in words which are not reproduceable even in the semi-obscurity of a learned European language. Here Mahīdhara deserves all censure for going too far to translate the word ganapati (i.e. Lord of multitudes) in the sense of a horse—which has no support in the entire Sanskrit language. For comparison I give below the English rendering of Dayānanda's Bhāsya here:

"We invoke Thee, O Lord and Protector of the numerous orders; who art also the Lord of all that is dear and near to us—of all the treasures and precious objects (e.g. knowledge and wealth). Thou pervadest (this world)."

We feel, when we see that a very well-known and simple word, like ganapati, has been interpreted as 'horse', that Mahīdhara's mind was not free from ill-conceived pre-notions against Vedic teaching. Actuated by such grossly erroneous ideas, he wrote whatever he could. He ought to have read and consulted the Śatapatha Brāhmana in this connection before he proceeded to comment upon such Mantras.

DAYANANDA AS THE INTERPRETER OF THE VEDAS

We have already discussed and critically examined all the interpreters of the Vedas, (whose works have come down to us. All of them deserve praise for their scholarly Vedic exegesis. But Dayānanda, who was a great son of India, possessed spiritual insight, which enabled him to peep deeply into the Vedic lore. He was an inspired seer. He was a profound scholar whose equal India could not produce after the great Śańkara. It was left to him, once more, during modern times, to show the way to the world, regarding the method of the proper and correct understanding of the Vedas. Dayānanda, whose biographical detailed character we have dealt with in Appendix I (pp. 462-488), lived from 1824 to 1883 and devoted his whole life to the propagation of the Vedic knowledge.

Style

His translation of the Vedas is always preceded by a full analysis of each and every word, along with the grammatical and etymological explanation. Then follows the meaning of every word, then explanation of the whole, and finally the commentary and its general purport as he understood it.

All this was done in Sanskrit, which has been translated into Hindi in full, for him by the Panditas, employed for this purpose. It was one of the boldest acts of his life to have issued a translation of the Vedas in Hindi, the national language of India, since this translation had never been attempted before. This fact should be the best proof of the transparency and honesty of his motives.

Obscurity of the Veda

Before we go further to critically assess the value of Dayānanda's translation, it must be borne in mind that it was not a child's play to comprehend the Vedas in the real sense, much less to interpret them, at the time when no oral or written tradition could reach us from prehistoric days. In 1869 when Prof. M. Müller brought to light the first edition of his Vedic Hymns (Part I), he described his hard labour as one of "deciphering", and it is not a strange thing that he repeated the same feeling in the same words after more than 20 years, when he published the second and the revised edition of the same work. He remarked:

"I hold that they (i.e. the first translators) ought to be called decipherers."

His adversaries ridiculed him on publishing a translation of the Vedas. According to them this work ought to have been attempted in the next century. Prof. M. Müller referring to his opponents (a whole host of German scholars) again remarked:

"There is another point also on which I am quite willing to admit that my adversaries are right. 'No one who knows any thing about the Veda', they say, 'would think of attempting a translation of it at present. A translation of the Rgveda is a task for the next century."1

At another place, he says:

"If by translation we mean a complete, satisfactory and final translation of the whole Rgveda, I should feel inclined to go even further than Prof. Von Roth. Not only shall we have to wait till the next century for such a work but I doubt whether we shall ever obtain it."²

Here M. Müller compares his own translation of the 165th hymn of the first Mandala of the Rgveda with that of Professor Von Roth, and concludes that a comparison like this:

The Veda, I feel convinced, will occupy scholars for centuries to come and maintain its position as the most ancient of books in the library of mankind."³

Baneful Positivism

Professor M. Müller undoubtedly voices the general feelings and a crying grievance when he complains of the "baneful positivism" of the European scholars as to interpretations which are little better than hypothetical conjuctures. The findings of the European scholars regarding the Vedic civilisation and culture are based upon these interpretations where "the same words and names" are interpreted differently from year to year and thus they cannot be regarded as conclusive. Sometimes these scholars have given their verdict by judging these ancient civilisations by Christian or other modern standards. They at once forget that all standards are mutable and are modified and reformed before their own eyes.

^{1.} SBE, vol. XXXII, pt. I, introduction, p. xi,

^{3.} Ibid., p. xxxi,

We are undoubtedly grateful to these European scholars for the time and hard toil they have put in on Vedic research. Coming generations of India, who would devote themselves to the study and interpretation of the Vedas, would derive great inspiration from these researches which are so valuable and needed.

But we cannot help remarking that their hasty conclusions as to the worth of the Vedic religion and culture have done a great and unnecessary harm by creating a mass of prejudice against the Vedas in the minds of the Hindus. The Missionary propagandists made a good use of it and condemned the Vedas in the positive terms at their command. They quoted these translations and consequently educated Indians began to reject the Vedas and accepted Christian thoughts—though not (in some cases) Christian religion.

Dayananda Stem in the Tide

Svāmī Dayānanda stood up and made up his mind to stem the powerful flow of anti-Vedic current by interpreting the Vedas in the style which he called arsa (i.e. the style of the seers).

A Christian Missionary writes about Dayananda in the following words:

".......He devoted himself entirely to the study of the Vedas from his 11th year and thus he is more practically conversant with them than most, if not all, of the great Pandits of Benaras, who generally know them only at second-hand or even less. At any rate, and this is the most remarkable feature distinguishing him from other Pandits, he is an independent student of the Vedas, and free from the trammels of traditional interpretation. The standard commentary of Sayana is held of little account by him. It can be no wonder, therefore, that his Vedic studies, conducted in that spirit, led him to the conviction that almost the whole of the (comparatively) modern Hinduism is in entire and irreconcilable contradiction with the Vedas and the Hinduism of Vedic times, about 2,000 years ago. Being of an active character, he determined not to keep his conviction to himself, but to impart it to his countrymen and try to effect an entire reform of Hindu Society."

Thus we see that Dayananda was not an ordinary interpreter of the Vedas, like Sayana, etc., who have no definite aim and object and whose visions were narrow and dominated by the Pauranika influence and notions. His study of the Vedas was independent and was conducted in a spirit of the highest reverence too.

He was an inspired soul, who visualised the Vedas with the rational conception of the Rsis who were depicted by Yaska as साक्षात्कृतधर्माणः, i.e., "to whom Dharma revealed itself." He saw the light and he refuted all anti-Vedic thoughts in the Hindu society and also criticised all the Vedic interpretations, which were based on Pauranika myths, quite unknown during the Vedic age. Sayana's commentary and all modern Vedic exegesis based on or influenced by Sayana, i.e., modern European translations of the Vedas, were severely criticised by him. He showed that the conclusions of modern scholars, envisaged in Sayana's commentary, were faulty and often effected by their conscious or unconscious Christian prejudics. In any case, in the words of modern scholars, e.g., M. Müller and Roth, all modern (Indian as well as European) translations of the Vedas are provisional. Syami Dayananda did not know any of the European languages, not even English. His criticism of M. Müller, etc., in his commentaries is therefore based on information supplied to him by friends knowing English.

Peculiarities of Dayananda's Translation

The following are the few aspects of Dayananda's interpretation of the Vedas:

- (1) The background of his Bhāṣya is the sincere conception that the Vedas are the words of God. Hence they contain pure and absolute knowledge.
- (2) The words used in the classical Sanskrit, greatly differ, as regards their meaning, from the words used in the Vedic language. We should not inerpret the Veda taking in view the current sense of the words in ordinary language.

- (3) According to him, all Vedic words have derivative or etymological sense. The Vedas know no $r\bar{u}dhi$ words (i.e. words with conventional sense). All words denote derivative and general sense. They are derived from the roots. Thus he does not take into consideration the worldly sense of the words. For instance, the word aht generally means 'a serpent'; but in the Veda it signifies 'a cloud' (vide Yaska).
- (4) Following in the footsteps of Yāska, he also believes that the Vedic words are used in the Vedas to denote triple significance of the Mantras, i.e., ādhyātmika, ādhidaivika and ādhiyājñika.
- (5) The Pada texts of the Mantras have not always been adhered to. The Vedic sense is more important than the man-made Pada Pāṭhas. As we have shown above, Yāska himself has not adhered to the Pāda text. In the Nirukta (V. 21), Yāska divides the word मासकृत् (in RV. I. 105.18) in two ways: (i) मास-कृत् and (ii) मा-सकृत्. Yāska attaches importance to the sense and not to the grammatical formations, so does Dayānanda believe. Yāska says:

Patanjali, the author of the Mahabhasya, also says:

न लक्षणेन पदकारा अनुवर्त्याः । पदकारैः नाम लक्षणमन्वर्त्यम् ।।

(MB. III.1.103)

(6) Dayananda follows the school of the etymologists, i.e., the Nairuktas. Hence he does not believe that the Veda contains narratives or reference to historical personages. Undoubtedly all descriptions are symbolic and figurative as Yaska says:

तत्को बृदः ? मेघ इति नैश्कता:। त्वाष्ट्रोऽसुर इत्यैतिहासिका:। अपां च ज्योतिषरच मिश्रीभावकर्मणो वर्षकर्म जायते। तत्नोपमार्थेन युद्धवर्णा भवन्ति।। (N. II.16)

(7) According to Dayananda, Devata means the subject-matter of the Mantra, or a hymn. All words signifying a Devata, e.g., Agni, Varuna and Indra, are the names of One Supreme Lord. There is only one Supreme Being described in the Vedas and Agni, Vayu, etc., are merely His different names indicating His most important attributes.

This matter is really set at rest by the well-known verse of the Rgveda:

इन्द्रं मित्रं वरणमिनमाहुरथो विद्य: स सुपर्णो गरुत्मान् । एकं सिंद्रप्रा बहुधा वदन्त्पींन यमं मातररिश्वानमाहुः ॥

(RV. I.164.46)

[He is One, sages call Him by many names, e.g., Agni, Yama and Matariśvan.]

This discovery, made again in the 19th century by Dayananda, has, in India at any rate, brought about a revolution in the method of interpretation applied to the Vedas. This view is evidently based upon one important grammatical distinction. Dayananda urged that the words used in the Vedas are employed in their etymological sense and undoubtedly this slight distinction in outlook has gone a great way in clearing up many difficulties and exonerating the Vedas from the charge of polytheism, and other theisms, invented and fastened upon them by the Western scholars.

(8) The yajña does not mean only a material sacrifice, i.e., to offer something into the fire. Dayananda here is supported by the entire scripture of the Hindus where it is clearly stated that 'any noble and unselfish act' is called a yajña. The Śatapatha clearly says:

यज्ञो वै श्रेष्ठतमं कर्म ।

(SB. I.7.1.5)

The fourth chapter of the Bhagavadgita describes all aspects of the yajña:

(a) एवं बहविधा यज्ञा वितता ब्रह्मणी मुखे।

(Gīta)

(b) श्रेयान् द्रव्यमयान् यज्ञान् ज्ञानयज्ञ: परन्तप ।

 $(Git\bar{a})$

YAUGIKAVĀDA

Now let us examine the theory that the Vedas contain only yaugika words, as it is accepted by Dayananda.

(a) Distinction between the Vedic and the laukika words is clearly indicated by the fact that Patanjali, the author of the Maha-bhāṣya, makes two separate categories of these two types of words. He declares:

केषां शब्दानाम् ? लौकिकानां वैदिकानाम् च ।

Then he further remarks:

नैगमारच रूढिभवारच।

Thus, he states in unambiguous terms that there are the Vedic words (which are yaugika) and the rūdhi words (i.e. words used in the world to express conventional meaning).

Thus, Patanjali draws a line of demarcation between the Vedic and laukika words.

It becomes more lucid and clear when we compare the meaning of some words which are common in both the languages.

- (i) According to Nighantu (III.15), the word kanva is a common noun being a synonym of medhavin (i.e. the intelligent), while in the common language it is a proper noun, i.e., the name of a sage.
- (ii) Ahi means a 'cloud' in the Nirukta, while it is a synonym of serpent in the common language.
- (iii) According to the Nighantu (I.12) and the Nirukta (II.22), the word purisa in the Vedas means 'water', while it denotes 'human excreta' in ordinary Sanskrit.
- (iv) Kanva, νεna, grtsa and usik are proper nouns in the common language, denoting some persons, while all these are synonyms of medhāvin (according to Nighantu, III. 15) in the Vedas.
- (v) The word Kuravah (plural of kuru) means 'doers', i.e. 'performing priests' (see Nighantu, III.18), while the same indicates persons or countries belonging to Kuru family in common Sanskrit.

Instances can be multiplied but paucity of space does not permit. This evidence clearly establishes the fact that it is not proper and reasonable to interpret Vedas on the basis of the classical Sanskrit. Sayana and Mahīdhara could not understand this fact and hence they committed mistakes. Dayananda's interpretation is an attempt in this direction.

Evidence of Yaska and Patanjali

The first canon of the interpretation of the Vedic terms, which is laid down by Yaska, the author of Nirukta, is that the Vedic terms are all yaugika (i.e. have derivative sense). They signify the meaning of the root together with the modification, affected by affixes. In fact, the structural elements out of which the word is compounded afford the whole and the only clue to the true signification of the words. The fourth section of the first chapter of the Nirukta opens with a discussion on this very subject, in which Yāska, Gārgya, Śākaṭāyana and all other grammarians and etymologists declare that the Vedic words are all yaugika. But Yāska and Śākaṭāyana maintain that rūdhi terms are also yaugika in as much as they were originally formed from the roots; but Gargya holds that only the rūdhi terms are not yaugika:

'नामान्याख्यातज्ञानि' इति शाकटायनो नैचनतसमयश्च । 'न सर्वाणीति' गार्ग्यो वैयाकरणानां चैके । तद् यत्र स्वरसंस्कारौ समयौ प्रादेशिकेन गुणेनान्वितौ स्याताम् ।

This section concludes with a refutation of the opinion of Gargya, establishing it as true that all terms, whether Vedic or laukika, are yaugika.

Patanjali also expresses the same opinion and distinguishes the Vedic terms from radhi terms by the designation of Naigama (i.e. Vedic). He says:

नाम च धातुजमाह निरुक्ते। व्याकरणे शकटस्य च तोकम्।।

And a line before this:

नैगमरूढिमवं हि मुसाधु । नैगमाश्च रूढिमवाश्च ।

The sense of all this is that all the ancient Rsis were of opinion that all the Vedic terms are derivative and denote general sense.

To an unprejudiced mind, the correctness of this law will never be doubtful. For, independently of the authority of the Nirukta, the very antiquity of the Vedas is a clear proof of its words being yaugika. Even Professor M. Müller is compelled to confess, at least concerning certain portions of the Vedas, that their words are yaugika. Says he:

"But there is a charm in these primitive strains discoverable in no other class of poetry. Every word retains something of its radical meaning; every epithet tells; every thought in spite of the most intricate and abrupt expressions, is, if we once disentangle it, true, correct and complete."

(History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 553)

Further again he adds:

"Names......are to be found in the Vedas, as it were, in a still fluid state. They never appear as appellatives, nor yet as proper nouns; they are organic, not yet broken or smoothed down."

(Ibid, p. 755)

Can there be any thing clearer than this? The terms occurring in the Vedas are yaugika, because "they never appear as appellatives, nor yet as proper names," and because "every word retains something of its radical meaning."

INTERNAL EVIDENCE

Now let us examine the theory of Yaugikism in the light of the Vedic literature:

- (i) Vedas: The internal evidence from the Vedas indicates that the Vedic words are yaugika:
 - (a) In RV. I.12.9 Agni is called as कवि, बृहस्पति and युवा. If we take the word agni as rūdhi it means only 'fire' which cannot be a कवि, बृहस्पति and युवा. Hence we have to interpret these words etymologically.
 - (b) Similarly आदित्य has the epithets of कवि, etc., in RV. II. 28.1.
 - (c) In RV. I.48.4 the word কাৰ has been used as an adjective by adding a suffix denoting superlative degree as কাৰ্বন:. In RV VII.79.3, the word স্থান is used as স্থানন: ।

It is possible only if we take all words as derivatives denoting radical sense.

(d) Even the Vedic text contains etymological explanations of the words:

च्यवनमच्युतानाम् । (RV. VIII.96.4) अरनन्तावश्विनौ । (RV. VIII.5.31)

(e) In RV. I.164.46 Agni has been called as Indra, Mitra, Varuna and Matariśva. How can it be possible if we do not accept these words denoting general sense?

एकं सद् विप्रा बहुधा वदन्त्यग्निं यमं मातरिश्वानमाहु:।

(ii) Brāhmaṇas: We need not give evidence in detail from the Brāhmaṇas in this connection as they abound in etymological explanations. Every word has been explained therein by giving their radical sense:

(a) प्रश्विनाविमे हीवं सर्वमरनुवाताम् । (SB. IV.1.5.16)

(b) ग्रश्नुवाते हि तौ लोकान् ज्योतिषा च रसेन च। (BD. VII.127)

(c) श्रश्विनौ यत् व्यश्नुवाते सर्वम् । रसेनान्य: । ज्योतिषान्य: । (N. XII.1) (d) तद् यदक्षरत् तदक्षरम् ।

(SB, VI.1.3.6)

(e) Agni is explained in SB. VI.1.1.11.

Similarly see:

(GP. I.7) for Angiras.

(SB. I.8.2.7) for Anuyāja.

(JU. I.20.4) for Antarikșa.

(SB. XIV.6.11.2) for Indra.

(SB. X.1.1.5) for Graha.

(SB. XIV.5.5.18) for Purușa.

(GB. I.3) for Bhrgu etc.

(iii) Nirukta: The Nirukta aims at giving all the possible etymological explanations of all words. Yāska has made it compulsory for the Nairuktas to offer every possible derivation:

न त्वेव न निर्भूयात् । भ्रयंनित्यः परीक्षेत् । न संस्कारमाद्वियेत् ।

Yāska goes as far as to say that even the laukika words are yaugika. Hence he explains them also:

इदमपीतरत् शिरः एतस्मात् एव ।

(N. IV.13)

(N. I)

- (iv) Mīmāmsakas: In the undermentioned citation from the Mīmāmsā Bhāsya we are directed to explain the Vedic words including those of rūdhis in accordance with the grammar and the Nirukta:
 - (a) विद्यमानोऽप्यर्थः प्रमादालस्यादिभिः नोपलभ्यते । निगमनिरुक्तव्याकरणवशेन धातुतोऽयैः कल्पयितव्यः । (MDB. [.2.41)
 - (b) शमयतीति शमिता। यौगिक एव शब्द: । (MDB, III.7.29)

Here we are told that the meanings are to be determined from the roots:

धातुतोऽर्थ: कल्पयितव्य: ।

(v) Skanda and Durga: These two foremost commentators of Yaska in the following citations clearly tell us that the etymological explanations of words are highly essential to show that the words have comprehensive and unlimited scope of expression. If we accept only the conventional fixed sense, it will restrict their power of expression.

(a) Skanda says:

एवमेतत् सर्वनाम्नामाख्यात अत्वं प्रतिपादितं भवित । तत् किमर्थम् ? उच्यते— भ्रमान्तरे यो रुदिशब्द: तस्यार्थान्तरे प्रयोग: । (p. 92)

(b) Durga also says:

स्वभावतो हि शब्दानां श्रियाजत्वेऽपि कांचिदेव क्रियामङ्गीकृत्यावस्थितिः भवति। (p. 64)

Durga also tells us that the various explanations given in the Nirukta do not indicate, as European scholars think now-a-days, that Yāska is uncertain about the definite meanings of the words as no tradition could reach him; but these different meanings imply the unrestricted power of expression of the words. He says:

भ्रनुपक्षीणाशक्तयो हि विभवो वेदशब्दा यथा यज्ञपुरुवाणामर्थाभिधाने विपरिणममाना: सर्वतोमुखा अनेकार्थान् प्रकुर्वन्तीत्येतदनेन प्रदर्शितं भवति । (N. 1.20)

- (vi) Different meanings at different places: Now we shall give below a brief list of words, which will show that one and the same word is interpreted by different scholars in different sense at different places. It is possible only if we admit that the Vedic words are not conventional but give radical sense based on the various original roots. This is the cause why Vedic words express different meanings and also why Yāska gave different significances of one and the same word:
 - (a) Agni : एष परमाहमा (Supreme Being) (Sāyaṇa, AV. II.1.4)

" : A Brāhmana (Sāyana, SB. I.4.2.2)

,, : Lightning (Durga, p. 363)

,, : The Veda, Omniscient (Sandhyā Bhāṣya, pp. 14,55,60)

: Supreme Lord (Śrī Kantha, Śrī Bhāsya, p. 3)

, : Viśnu, i.e. Omnipresent (Raghavendra Yati, pp. 8,23)

(b) $\bar{A}pah$: Does not mean 'water' but from the root $\bar{a}p$ 'to pervade': Omnipresent (Skanda, RV. I.91.1)

,, : Supreme Soul (Sandhyā Bhasya, pp. 45,46,47,163,171)

.. : Cows (SNB. XII.1-3)

": Atmospherical region (Skanda, RV. I.52.12)

": Milk (Śatrughna, p. 184)

- (c) Indra: Air (Durga, p. 710)
 - ": Sūrya or Supreme Lord (Satrughna, pp. 90, 133)
 - ": God (Jayatīrtha, p. 22)
 - ": Supreme Soul (Sayana, RV Bhasya, Bombay, vol. J, p. 52)
 - ": Glorious group of Maruts (Skanda, RV. I.6.8)
 - ,, : God (Sayana, RV. X.92.8)
 - ,, : A rich trader (Sayana, AV. III.15.1)
- (d) Rātri: Supreme soul (Sandhya Bhasya, pp. 42,135)
- (e) Savitā: Many meanings, e.g. Agni, Varuna, Vayu, sacrifice, thunderbolt, sun, moon, mind, soul or a man (Jaimini Upanişad Brahmana, p. 152)
 - ,, : God (Sandhya Bhasya, pp. 42,135)
 - " : A sacrificer according to Śakapūni (Skanda, RV. I.34. 10; I.95.7)

We have a very long list of such words. The reproduction of the whole list will require a separate volume. The comparative study of this brief list of words will surely convince the unprejudiced reader to understand that the Vedic words are yaugika and thus possess a flexible character of expression.

(vii) Aitihāsikas: Sāyaṇa, Mahīdhara and other authors of the Veda Bhāṣyas, who interpreted in accordance with the Aitihāsika view by following the rūdḥi method, had to adopt in large number of cases the process of yaugika interpretation as there was no other way out. No obscure cases could be explained without resorting to the yaugika method.

Sayana interprets:

- (a) Asvalı : व्यापनशील: प्रादित्य: (i.e. the sun, and not a horse, as it conventionally means) (RV. I.164.2)
- (b) Adityali: परमेश्वर: (i.e. God and not the sun) (RV. I.164.21)
- (c) Indrali : पर्जन्य: (i.e. cloud and not the king of gods)
 (RV. I.164.33)
- (d) Bhrātā: परोपकारक: (i.e. one who does good to others, and not a brother, as it ordinarily means) (RV. I.170.4)

- (e) Vasisthah : सर्वस्य वासिय तृतमः (i.e. the abode of all, i.e. God, and not as a proper noun) (RV. II.9.1)
- (f) Rathah : এন: (i.e. a sacrifice and not a car) (RV. II.18.1)
- (g) Manuh : मनुष्यो यख्टा माननीयो राजा (i.e. a sacrificer or a king and not as a proper noun of a king) (RV. X.51.5)
- (h) Angirastamā: খন্তুনমা (i.e. the best of all who move and not as a proper noun) (RV. VII.79.3)

Thus we see that yaugika method is the only scientific way of interpreting the Vedas. The entire Vedic literature admits the superiority of this method. It has the support of Yaska, Patanjali and all the Brahmanas. Skanda, Durga and all other ancient interpreters base their explanations on this method.

SUPERIORITY OF DAYANANDA'S BHASYA

Swami Dayananda employed the scientific method of interpretation based on the Nairukta school throughout his Vedic exegesis. It has many advantages. A few Indian scholars and all European scholars offer bitter criticism against the Vedic teaching. They are very easily removed through the medium of this interpretation. Agni, Varuna, Aditya, Mātariśvā and Indra may mean any thing in different contexts but they also mean Supreme Being (Brahma), described under different names. They are different names of one Lord. The discovery of this method, which was in vogue in Yaska's age, is quite new in modern times and it has brought about a new revolution in understanding the Vedic theme. In order that no doubt may be left concerning the monotheistic worship of the ancient Aryans, we quote from the Nirukta:

माहामाग्याद्देवताया एक एव बात्मा बहुधा स्तूयते । एकस्यात्मनोऽन्ये देवा: प्रत्यङ्गानि भवन्ति । (N. VII.4)

[One Supreme Soul is variously praised, on account of His Omnipotence. Other Devatas are but pratyangas (i.e., various manifestations) of this one Supreme Soul.]

From this, it is quite clear that Dayananda's interpretation of the Vedas, based on etymological method, has a sound support in Yaska and the Brahmanas,

It will be reasonable if a few citations from the Vedas themselves are given below in support of the theory that there was monotheism, i.e., worship of One Lord. It will clearly justify Dayananda's stand:

- (a) एकं सद् विप्रा बहुधा वदन्त्यग्निं यमं मातररिश्वानमाहु: ।
 [He is One; sages call Him by many names, e.g., Agni, Yama, Matariśvā.]

 (RV. I.164.46)
- (b) ग्राने भूरीणि तव जातवेदो देव स्वधावोऽमृतस्य नामा ।

 [Many are Thy names O Agni, Immortal, God, Divine, Jatavedas.]

 (RV. III.20.3)
- (c) इन्द्रो मायाभि: पुरुक्ष्प ईयते ।
 [Indra moves multiform, in His wonderful creation.]
 (RV. VI.47.18)
- (d) तदेवाग्निस्तवासित्यस्तद् वायुस्तदु चन्द्रमाः । तदेव शुक्तं तद् ब्रह्म ता भ्रापः स प्रजापतिः ॥

[Even He is Agni, He is Aditya, He is Vayu, He is Candramas; He is Sukra, He is Brahma, He is Apa, He is Prajapati.]

(YV. XXXII.1)

- (e) सोऽर्यमा स वरण: स रब्न: स महादेव: ।
 सोऽन्नि: स उ सूर्य: स उ एव महायम: ।
 [He is Aryama, He is Varuṇa, He is Rudra, He is Mahādeva.]
 (AV. XIII.4.4)
 [He is Agni, He is Sūrya, He is verily Mahā Yama.]
 - (AV. XIII.4.5)
- (f) न द्वितीयो न तृतीयश्चतुर्थो नाष्युक्यते । न पञ्चमो न षष्ठः सप्तमो नाष्युक्यते । नाष्टमो न नवमो दशमो नाष्युक्यते । स एव एक एकवृद् एक एव । सर्वे ग्रस्मिन् देवा एकवृतो मवन्ति ।

[Neither second, nor third, nor yet fourth, is He called. He is called neither fifth, nor sixth, nor yet seventh. He is called neither eighth, nor ninth, nor yet tenth. He is the Sole, the Absolute One, the One alone. In Him all gods become simple and One.]

(AV. XIII.4.14-21)

Nothing can be clearer than this. All these quotations will convince the reader that the ancient Aryans worshipped only one God. Thus Dayananda's interpretation which establishes this fact before the scholars must be admitted as a very good attempt for understanding the purport of the Vedic teaching.

It will be well to quote here from an article by Aurobindo Ghosh on the interpretation of the Vedas by Dayananda:

"What is the main positive issue in this matter? An interpretation of the Veda must stand or fall by its central conception of the Vedic religion and the amount of support given to it by the intrinsic evidence of the Veda itself. Here Dayananda's view is quite clear; its foundation inexpugnable, The Vedic Hymns are chanted to One Deity under many names. names which are used, and even designed, to express His qualities and powers. Was this conception of Dayananda's arbitrary conceit, fetched out of his own too ingenious imagination? Not at all: it is the explicit statement of the Veda itself. 'One Existent, Sages, not the ignorant, mind you, but the Seers, men of direct knowledge, speak of in many ways, as Indra and Yama, as Matariśvan, as Agni.' The Vedic Rishis ought surely to have known something about their religion, more, let us hope, than Roth or Max Müller; and this is what they knew.

"We are aware, how modern scholars twist away from the evidence. This Hymn, they say, was a later production, this loftier ideal, which it expresses with so clear a force rose up, somehow in the later Aryan mind or was borrowed by them from their Dravidian enemies. But throughout the Veda, we have confirmatory Hymns and expressions; Agni or Indra or any other is expressly 'hymned as One with all other gods. Agni contains all other Divine Powers within himself, the Maruts are described as 'all the gods', one Deity is addressed by the names of others as well as His own, or most commonly He is given, as Lord and King of the Universe, attributes only appropriate to the Supreme Deity. Ah: but that cannot mean, ought not to mean, must not mean, the worship of the One. Let us invent a new word, call it 'Henotheism', and suppose that the Rishis did not really believe Indra or Agni to be the Supreme Deity, but treated any god and every god as such for the nonce, perhaps, that he might feel the more flattered and lend a more gracious ear for so hyperbolic a compliment, but why should not the foundation of Vedic thought be natural monotheism rather than this newfangled monstrosity of henotheism? Well, because primitive barbarians could not possibly have risen to such high conceptions and if you allow them to have so risen, you imperil our theory of evolutionary stages of human development, and you destroy our whole idea about the sense of the Vedic Hymns and their place in the history of mankind. Truth must hide herself, commonsense must disappear from the field, so that a theory may flourish: I ask, in this point, and it is the fundamental point, who deals most straightforwardly with the text, Dayananda or the Western scholars?

"But if this fundamental point of Dayānanda's is granted, if the character given by the Vedic Rishis themselves to their gods is admitted, we are bound, whenever the hymn speaks of Agni or another, to see behind that Name present always to the thought of the Rishi, the One Supreme Deity or else one of His Powers with its attendant qualities or workings. Immediately the whole character of the Veda is fixed in the sense, Dayānanda gave to it; the merely ritual, mythological, polytheistic interpretation of Sāyaṇa collapses, the metrological and naturalistic European interpretation collapses. We have, instead, a real Scripture, one of the world's sacred books and the Divine word of a lofty and noble Religion.

"All the rest of Dayananda's theory arises logically out of this fundamental conception. If the Names of the God-heads express qualities of the One God-head, and it is these which the Rishis adored, and towards which they directed their aspiration, then there must inevitably be in the Veda a large part of psychology of Divine Nature, psychology of the relations of man with God and a constant indication of the law governing man's God-ward conduct. Dayananda asserts the presence of such an ethical element; he finds in the Veda, the law of life given by God to the human beings. And if the Vedic God-heads express the Powers of the Supreme Deity, who is the Creator, Ruler and Father of the Universe, then there must inevitably be in the Veda a large part of cosmology, the law of creation and of cosmos. Dayananda asserts the presence of such a cosmic element; he finds in the Veda, the secrets of creation and the law of Nature by which Omniscient governs the world.

"Neither Western Scholarship, nor ritualistic learning has succeeded in eliminating the psychological and ethical value of the Hymns, but they have both tended in different degrees to minimise it. Western scholars minimise, because they feel uneasy, whenever ideas that are not primitive seem to insist on their presence in these primeval utterances; they do not hesitate openly to abandon in certain passages, interpretations which they adopt in others and which are admittedly necessitated by their own philological and critical reasoning; because, if admitted always, they would often involve in deep and subtle psychological conceptions which cannot have occurred to primitive minds! Savana minimises, because his theory of Vedic discipline was not ethical righteousness with a moral and spiritual result, but mechanical performance of ritual with a material reward. But in spite of these efforts of suppression, the lofty ideas of the Vedas will reveal themselves in strange contrast to its alleged burden of fantastic naturalism or dull ritualism. The Vedic God-heads are constantly hymned as Masters of Wisdom, Power, Purity; Purifiers, Healers of grief and evil; Destroyers of sin and falsehood; Warriors for the Truth; constantly the Rishis pray to them for healing and purification, to be made, seers of knowledge, possessors of the truth, to be upheld in the Divine Law, to be assisted and armed with strength, manhood and energy. Dayananda has brought this idea of Divine right and truth, into the Veda: the Veda is as much, and more, a book of Divine Law as Hebrew Bible or Zoroastrian Avesta.

"The Cosmie element is not less conspicuous in the Veda. The Rishis speak always of the worlds, the firm laws that govern them, the Divine working in the cosmos. But Dayananda goes further: he affirms that the truths of modern physical science are discoverable in the hymns. Here we have the sole point of fundamental principle about which there can be any justifiable misgivings. I confess my incompetence to advance any settled opinion in the matter. But this much needs to be said that his idea is increasingly supported by the recent trend of knowledge about the ancient world. The ancient civilization did possess secrets of science, some of which modern knowledge has recovered, extended and made imore rich and precise, but others are even now not recovered. There is then nothing fantastic in Dayānanda's idea that the Veda contains truths of science as well as truths of religion. I will even add my own conviction that Veda contains other truths of a Science the modern world does not at all possess, and in that case Dayānanda has rather understated than overstated the depth and range of the Vedic Wisdom.

"Objection has also been made to his philological and etymological method by which he arrived at his results, especially in his dealings with the names of the God-heads. objection, I feel certain, is an error due to our introduction of modern ideas about language into our study of this ancient tongue. We, moderns, use words as counters, without any memory or appreciation of their original sense: when we speak, we speak, we think of the object spoken of, not at all of the expressive word, which is to us a dead and brute thing, mere coin of verbal currency, with no value of its own. In early language the word was, on the contrary, a living thing with essential powers of signification; its root-meanings were remembered because they were still in use; its wealth of force was vividly present to the mind of the speaker. We say 'wolf' and think only of the animal; and any other sound would have served our purpose as well, given the convention of its usage; the ancient said "tearer" and had that significance present to them. We say agni and think of fire, the word is of no other use to us; to the ancients, agni means other things besides, and only because one or more of its root-meanings was applied to the physical object fire. Our words are carefully limited to one or two senses; theirs were capable of a great number, and it was quite easy for them, if they so chose to use a word like Agni, Varuna or Vavu as sound-index of a great number of connected and complex ideas, 'a key word. It cannot be doubted that the Vedic Rishis did take advantage of this greater potentiality of their language, note their dealings with such words as gau and chandra. The Nirukta bears evidence to this capacity, and in the Brahmanas and Upanishads we find the memory of this free and symbolic use of words still subsisting.

"Certainly Dayananda had not the advantage that a comparative study of language gives to the European scholars, but he stands justified by the substance of Veda itself, by logic and reason, and by our growing knowledge of the past of mankind. The Veda does hymn "The One - Deity - Of - Many - Names - And-Powers"; it does celebrate the Divine Law and man's aspiration to fulfil it: it does purport to give us the law of cosmos.

"On the question of revelation, suffice it to say that here too, Dayananda was perfectly logical and it is quite grotesque to charge him with insincerity, because he held to and proclaimed the doctrine. There are always three fundamental entities which we have to know if we would understand existence at all, God, Nature and the Soul. If, as Dayananda held on strong enough grounds, the Veda reveals to us God, reveals to us the law of Nature, reveals to us the relations of the Soul to God and Nature, what is it but Revelation of Divine Truth? And if, as Dayananda held, it reveals them to us with a perfect truth, flawlessly, he might well hold it for an infallible Scripture. The rest is a question of the method of revelation, of Divine dealings with our race, of man's psychology and possibilities. Modern thought, affirming Nature and Law, but denying God, denied also the possibility of revelation, but so also has it denied many things, which a more modern thought is very busy re-affirming; we cannot demand of a great mind that it shall make itself a slave to vulgarly received opinion or the transient dogmas; the very essence of its greatness is this that it looks beyond, that it sees deeper."

VALUE OF INTERPRETATION

Thus we see that the method of the Vedic interpretation, discovered by Dayānanda after hundreds of centuries and which had been in vogue (before the birth of Sāyaṇa, Skanda, etc.) during the time of Yāska, is a scientific one. It is based on the etymological and grammatical explanations of the hymns. He realised that the root-meanings of the words must be first sought and then applied, always keeping in view the context. Thus he was able to translate with the help of the ancient works, e.g., the Nirukta, the Brāhmaṇas, the Aṣṭādhyāyī and others, written by ancient sages. It is quite absurd, as we have already proved by quoting a number of evidences from the authentic works, to try to paraphrase (the Vedic hymns according to the terminology of the Classical Sanskrit as some of the authors did. It is equally unreasonable to study the Veda under the light of the later Paurāṇika works. Sāyaṇa could not do without applying Paurāṇika influence over him.

HIS PLACE AMONG THE INTERPRETERS

Dayānanda did whatever he could and he deserves indeed our unstinted admiration. None can claim infallibility for his interpretation, nor did he. But "his honesty of purpose is clearly written on every page of his work," in that, unlike most of the European translators of the Veda (Max Muller and a few others excepted), he has not contented himself with giving his own empirical view of the text, but in almost every case has supported it with reasons and explanations and often by quotations from ancient authors, credited with a better and deeper knowledge of the Vedas, on account of the nearness of their time to the Vedic period of Indian civilization.

Speaking of his own efforts to understand and then translate the Vedas for the public, Prof. Max Müller says that it is a mere beginning, "a mere contribution towards the better understanding of the Vedic hymns," and he felt convinced that on many points his translation was liable to correction and to be replaced sooner or later by a more satisfactory one. He further remarks:

"There are, as all Vedic scholars know, whole verses which as yet yield no sense whatever. There are words the meaning of which we can guess."

(SBE, vol. XXXII, Vedic Hymns, part I, p. 32)

Thus all that we claim for Dayānanda's translation of the Vedas is that, from the Hindu point of view, it is the best and the most scholarly translation of that ancient Scripture, so far given to the public; yet, that Dayānanda has only shown the way to the coming generation how to approach the Vedas, how to interpret them. It would take centuries of hard labour and tireless scholarship before anything like a complete and thoroughly satisfactory translation of the Vedas could be made. Generations of learned Aryans will have to devote their lives to the study of the Vedas in a spirit of reverent devotion and with a determination to master all their riddles and difficulties, before these ancient Scriptures yield up even a fraction of their treasures of beauty and truth.

We would like to conclude this discussion by quoting a few lines from Aurobindo Ghosh, whose impartiality and independence of view cannot be questioned and who has given full support to the line of interpretation adopted by the great sage Dayananda, for the assessment of the value of his translation:

"In the matter fof Vedic interpretation, I am convinced that, whatever may be the final, complete interpretation, Dayananda will be honoured as the first discoverer of the right clues. Amidst chaos and obscurity of old ignorance and age-long misunderstanding, his was the eye of direct vision that pierced to the truth and fastened on that which was essential. He has found the keys of the doors that time had closed and rent asunder the seals of the imprisoned Fountain."*

(1) Ernest Wood writes:

"In the eyes of the Hindus, there is but one Supreme God. This was stated long ago in the Rig Veda in the following words, Ekam sad-viprāḥ bahudhā vadanti' which may be translated as 'The sages name The One Being variously.'"

(An Englishman Defends Mother India, p. 128)

(2) W.D. Brown, an English Scholar writes in his book, Superiority of the Vedic Religion:

"It (Vedic Religion) recognises but one God. It is a thoroughly scientific religion, where religion and science meet hand in hand. Here Theology is based upon Science and Philosophy."

(3) Jacolliat, a French savant, author of The Bible in India, wrote thus in his book about the Vedas:

"Astonishing fact! The Hindu Revelation (i.e. Veda) is of all revelations the only one whose ideas are in perfect harmony with modern science."

Finally we can say that whatever view may be taken by the Vedic scholars who will appear in the field in later years, we have not the least doubt that they shall have to recognise and appreciate the method of the Vedic interpretation adopted by Dayānanda.

^{*} A strong support is given indirectly by some impartial European scholars to Dayananda's interpretation of the Veda by admitting that the Vedas inculcate worship of one God.

CHAPTER VIII

TRIBUTES FROM CONTEMPORARIES

The amount of obloquy and persecution, to which Dayananda was exposed in his life-time, may be gathered from the fact that numerous attempts were made on his life by the orthodox Hindus and Muslims; assassins were hired to kill him; missiles were thrown at him during his lectures and disputations; he was called a hired emissary of the Christians, an apostate, an atheist, and so on. The spirit in which he met this fierce opposition may be judged from the following anecdotes which we cull from Madame Blavatsky's account of him in her book, The Cares and Jungles of Hindustan.

"One is inclined to think", says Madame Blavatsky, "that this wonderful Hindu bears a charmed life, so careless is he of raising the worst human passions, which are so dangerous in India. At Benaras, a worshipper of the Shiva, feeling sure that his cobra, trained purposely for the mysteries of a Shivaite pagoda, would at once make an end of the offender's life, triumphantly exclaimed: 'Let this god Vasuki (the snake god) himself show which of us is right!'

"Dayananda jerked off the cobra twisting round his leg, and with a single vigorous movement crushed his reptile's head. 'Let him do so', he quietly assented, 'your god has been too slow. It is I who have decided the dispute. Now go!' added he, addressing the crowd, 'and tell every one how easily perish all false gods'. Truly, a marble statue could not be less moved by the raging wrath of the crowd. We saw him once at work. He sent away all his faithful followers, and forbade them either to watch over him or to defend him, and stood alone before the infuriated crowd, facing calmly the monster, ready to spring upon him and tear him to pieces."

In the same work, Madame Blavatsky pays the following compliment to his learning and scholarship:

"It is perfectly certain that India never saw a more learned Sanskrit scholar, a deeper metaphysician, a more wonderful orator, and a more fearless denunciator of any evil, than Dayananda, since the time of Shankaracharya."

Another testimony to his erudition, and we have finished our account of the Swāmi's life. This is an unwilling admission of his great powers by his opponents among the orthodox Hindus; we give it in the words of Professor Max Muller:

(Biographical Essays, pp. 179-80)

His death elicited the highest tributes from all classes of people—Indian and non-Indian, Hindus, Musalmans, Christians and Parsis. The greatest among his contemporaries wrote or spoke of him in the highest terms and deplored his early death: of those we may mention the late Sir Syed Ahmed Khan, the greatest 19th century leader of the Muslims of India; Colonel Olcott, President of the Theosophical Society, and Madame Blavatsky, its founder. But the most characteristic tribute came from Professor Max Muller, who compared him with Dr. Pursy, of England, and wrote remarkably eulogistic notice of the man and his work.²

"Deply read in theological literature of his country......he was opposed to many of the abuses that had crept in, as he well knew, during the later periods of the religious growth of India, and of which, and is now well known, no trace can be found in the ancient sacred texts of the Brāhmaṇas, the Vedas...... In his public disputations with the most learned Pandits at Benaras and elsewhere, he was generally supposed to have been victorious, though often the aid of the police had to be called in to protect him from the blows of his conquered foes."

We give here, as a fitting conclusion to this chapter, a few passages from a long tribute which appeared in the official organ of the Theosophical Society, The Theosophist:

"A master spirit has passed away from India, Pandit Dayananda Sarasvati is gone; the irrepressible, energetic reformer, whose mighty voice and passionate eloquence for the last few years raised thousands of people in India from lethargic indifference and stupor into active patriotism, is no more"

"De Mortuis Nil Nisi Bonum. All our differences have been burnt with the body.....We remember only the grand virtues and noble qualities of our former colleague and teacher, and late antagonist. We bear in mind but his life-long devotion to the cause of Aryan regeneration; his ardent love for the grand philosophy of his forefathers; his relentless, untiring zeal in the work of the projected social and religious reform; and it is with unfeigned sorrow that we now hasten to join the ranks of his many mourners. In him, India has lost one of her noblest sons. A patriot in the true sense of the word, Swami Dayananda laboured from his earliest years for the recovery of the lost treasures of Indian intellect. His zeal for the reformation of his motherland was exceeded only by his unbounded learning. Whatever might be said as to his interpretations of the sacred writings, there can be but one opinion as to his knowledge of Sanskrit, and the impetus to the study of both received at his hands. There are a few towns and but one province, namely Madras, that Pandit Dayananda did not visit in furtherance of his missionary work, and fewer still where he has not left the impress of his remarkable mind behind him. He threw, as it were, a bombshell in the midst of the stagnant masses of degenerated Hinduism, and fired with love for the teachings of the Rishis and Vedic learning the hearts of all who were drawn within the influence of his eloquent oratory. Certainly there was no better or no grander orator in Hindi and Sanskrit than Dayananda, throughout the length and breadth of this land."

An soon as the sad rumour was confirmed, Colonel Olcott, who was then at Cawnpore, paid a public tribute to the Swami's memory. He said:

"Whatever might have been rights or wrongs in the controversy, and whatever other Pandits or Orientalists could say against the Swami, there was no room for two opinions as to his energetic patriotism or of the nationalising influence exerted upon his followers. In Pandit Dayānanda Sarasvatī, there was a total absence of anything like degrading sycophancy and toadyism towards foreigners from interested motives."

Again:

"Truly, however heretical and blasphemous might have appeared his religious radicalism in the sight of old orthodex Brahminism, still the teachings and Vedicd octrines promulgated by him were a thousand times more consonant with Shruti or even Smriti than the doctrines taught by all other native Samajas put together. If he merged the old idols into One Living Being, Ishwara, as being only the attributes and powers of the latter, he yet had never attempted the folly of forcing down the throats of his followers the hybrid compound of a Durga-Moses, Christ-and-Koran, and Buddha-Chaitanya mixture of the modern reformers. The Arya Samaj rites certainly make the nearest approach to the real Vedic national religion."

In the words of Romain Rolland (A.D. 1886-1944):

"Indian religious thought raised a purely Indian Samaj against Keshab's Brahmo Samaj and against all attempt at westernization, even during his lifetime, and at its head was a personality of the highest order, Dayanand Saraswati (1824-1883).

"This man with the nature of a lion is one of those, whom Europe is too apt to forget when she judges India, but whom she will probably be forced to remember to her cost; for he was that rare combination, a thinker of action with a genius for leadership.

"For fifteen years this son of a rich Brahmin, despoiled of everything and subsisting on alms, wandered as a Sadhu clad in the saffron robe along the roads of India. At length about 1860 he found at Muttra an old Guru even more implacable than himself in his condemnation of all weakness and his hatred of superstition, a "sannyasi" blind from infancy and from the age of eleven quite alone in the world, a learned man, a terrible man, Swami'Virjanand Saraswati. Dayanand put himself under his 'discipline', which in its old literal seventeenth century sense scarred his flesh as well as his spirit. Dayanand served this untamable and indomitable man for two and a half years as his pupil. It is therefore mere justice to remember that his subsequent course of action was simply the fulfilment of the will for the stern blind man. When they separated Virjanand extracted from him the promise that he would consecrate his life to the annihilation of the heresies that had crept into the Pauranic (old) faith to re-establish the ancient religious methods of the age before Buddha, and to disseminate the truth.

"Dayanand immediately began to preach in Northern India, but unlike the benign men of God who open all heaven before the eyes of their hearers he was a hero of the lliad or of the Gita with the athletic strength of a Hercules, who thundered against all forms of thought other than his own, the only true one. He was so successful that in five years Northern India was completely changed. During these five years his life was attempted four or five times—sometimes by poison. Once a fanatic threw a cobra at his face in the name of Shiva, but he caught it and crushed it. It was impossible to get the better of him; for he possessed an unrivalled knowledge of Sanskrit and the Vedas, while the burning vehemence of his words brought his adversaries to naught. They likened him to a flood. Never since Sankara had such a prophet of Vedism appeared. The orthodox Brahmins, completely overwhelmed, appealed from him to Benares, their Rome. Davanand went there fearlessly, and undertook in November, 1869, a Homeric contest. Before millions of assailants, all eager to bring him to his knees, he argued for hours together alone against three hundred pandits, the whole front line and the reserve of Hindu orthodoxy. He proved that the Vedant as practised was diametrically opposed to the primitive Vedas. He claimed that he was going back to the true Word, the pure Law of two thousand years earlier. They had not the patience to hear him out. He was hooted down and excommunicated. A void was created round him, but the echo of such a combat in the style of the Mahabharata spread throughtout the country, so that his name became famous over the whole of India. Dayanand was not a man to come to an understanding with religious philosophers imbued with Western ideas. His national Indian theism, its steel faith forged from the pure metal of the Vedas alone, had nothing in common with theirs, tinged as it was with modern doubt, which denied the infallibility of the Vedas and the doctrine of transmigration. Its (Arya Samaj's) spontaneous and impassioned success in contrast to the slight reverberations of Keshab's Brahmo Samaj, shows the degree to which Davanand's stern teachings corresponded to the thought of his country and to the first stirrings of Indian nationalism, to which he contributed.

"The enthusiastic reception accorded to the thunderous champion of the Vedas, a Vedist belonging to a great race and penetrated with the sacred writings of ancient India and with her heroic spirit, is then easily explained. He alone hurled the defiance of India against her invaders. Dayanand declared war on Christianity and his heavy massive sword cleft it asunder with scant reference to the scope or exactitude of his blows.

"Dayanand had no greater regard for the Koran and the Puranas, and trampled underfoot the body of Brahmin orthodoxy. He had no pity for any of his fellow countrymen, past or present, who had contributed in any way to the thousand-year decadence of India, at one time the mistress of the world. He was a ruthless critic of all who, according to him, had falsified or profaned the true Vedic religion. He was a Luther fighting against his own misled and misguided Church of Rome; and his first care was to throw open wells of the holy books, so that for the first time his people could come to them and drink for themselves. He wrote commentaries on the Vedas in the vernacular-it was in truth an epoch-making date for India, when a Brahmin not only acknowledged that all human beings have the right to know the Vedas, whose study had been previously prohibited by orthodox Brahmins, but insisted that their study and propaganda was the duty of every Arya.

"Dayanand transfused into the languid body of India his own formidable energy, his certainty, his lion's blood. His words rang with heroic power. He reminded the secular passivity of a people, too prone to bow to fate, that the soul is free and that action is the generator of destiny. He set the example of a complete clearance of all the encumbering growth of privilege and prejudice by a series of hatchet blows. With regard to questions of fact he went further than the Brahmo Samaj, and even further than the Ramakrishna Mission ventures today.

"His creation, the Arya Samaj, postulates in principle equal justice for all men and all nations, together with equality of the sexes. It repudiates a hereditary caste-system, and only recognises professions or guilds, suitable to the complementary aptitudes of men in society; religion was to have no part in these divisions, but only the service of the state, which assesses the tasks to be performed. The State alone, if it considers it for the good of the community, can raise or degrade a man from one caste to another by way of reward or punishment. Dayanand wished every man to have the opportunity to acquire as much knowledge as would enable him to raise himself in the social scale as high as he was able. Above all he would not tolerate the abominable injustice of the existence of untouchable, and nobody has been a more ardent champion of their outraged rights. They were admitted to the Arya Samaj on the basis of equality; for the Arvas are not a caste. 'The Arvas are all men of superior principles; and the Dasyus are they who lead a life of wickedness and sin'.

"Dayanand was no less generous and no less bold in his crusade to improve the condition of women, a deplorable one in India. He revolted against the abuses from which they suffered, recalling that in the heroic age they occupied in the home and in society a position at least equal to men. They ought to have equal education. according to him, and supreme control in marriage over household matters including the finances. Dayanand in fact claimed equal rights in marriage for men and women and though he regarded marriage as indissoluble, he admitted the marriage of widows.

"I have said enough about this rough Sannyasi with the soul of a leader, to show how great an uplifter of the peoples he was in fact the most vigorous force of the immediate and present action in India at the moment of the rebirth and reawakening of the national consciousness. He was one of the most ardeat prophets of reconstruction and of national organization. I feel that it was he who kept the Vigil."

A SHEWIT HIRLA Y CARRESTO ACTION OF

ŚRĪ DAYĀNANDA SARASVATĪS

RGVEDĀDI-BHĀŞYA-BHŪMIKĀ

Om! May (God) protect us both (preceptor and pupil or the author and the reader) simultaneously; may He give us enjoyments; may we attain strength together; may our learning be luminous and dignified; may we never harm each other.

May there be peace (to all from external material objects); may there be peace (from our ownselves); may there be peace (from Divine Wrath).

(Taittirīya Āranyaka, II. 1)

(1) Having made obeisance to Supreme Being (Brahman), who has no beginning or end, the creator of the universe, unborn, eternal, the highest reality and whose perpetual knowledge, called the Vedas (i.e. the Knowledge par excellence), upholds the Law (nigama) and destroys the unrighteousness and is blemishless, beneficial to the world and bestower of good fortunes on humanity, I, being desirous of explaining and interpreting the Vedas, compose this great commentary (bhāşya).

को ३म् । सह नावबतु सह नी भुनवतु सह वीर्षं करवावहै । तेज्ञस्त्र नावधीतमस्तु । मा विद्विषावेदे ॥ को ३म् । शान्तिः शान्तिः शान्तिः ॥ (तैत्तिरीयारण्यक, II. 1)

(1) ब्रह्मानन्तमनादि-विश्वकृतजं नित्यं परं शाश्वतम्, विद्या यस्य सनातनी निगमभृद्-वैधर्म्य-विश्वंसिनी। वेदाख्या विमला हिता हि जगती नुभ्यः सुभाग्यप्रदा, तं नत्वा निगमार्थभाष्यमितना भाष्यं तु तन्तन्यते।।

The word भाष्य, from the root पाष् 'to speak' with प्यत् means an exposition, gloss or commentary as in the word Veda-Bhāṣya, especially a commentary that explains Sūtras or aphorism, by words with comments of its own.

Cf. सूत्रार्थो वण्यंते यत पर्दः सूत्रानुसारिभिः।
स्वपदानि च वर्ण्यन्ते भाष्यं भाष्यविदो विदुः॥ and सुविस्तरतरा वाचो भाष्यभूता भवन्तु मे ॥
(Śiśupālavadha, II. 24)

- (2) I commenced this great commentary on Sunday, the first day of the bright half of the lunar month of Bhādrapada in the year (Vikrama Era) 1933.
- (3) Let the noble people (lit. sinless— अन्+ अघ) know that this commentary has been composed by one, in whose name the word Ananda (i.e. bliss) which is realised only by the self, shines after the word Daya (i.e. compassion) and after this word Sarasvatī (i.e. learning) dwells (as if Sarasvatī lives) under divine shelter doing good to all. He is celebrated for his noble virtues and Vedic studies.
- (4) By the grace of God, may I accomplish this Vedic commentary for the benefit of all men, giving the right and correct interpretation, based on rightly valid proof.
- (5) I shall lucidly explain here the meaning of the Vedic stanzas in Sanskrit as well as in Prākṛta (i.e. the language of common people, ↔ Hindi) and this will satisfy all desires.

(2) कालरामाक्कुचन्द्रेब्दे भाद्रमासे सिते दले। प्रिवपद्यादित्यवारे माध्यारम्मः कृतो मया।।

According to the न्याय of अङ्कानां वामतो गतिः (i.e. figures are written from right to left) the phrase कालरामाञ्चचन्द्रेडदे gives 1933. The words काल, राम, अङ्क and चन्द्र denote 3, 3, 9 and 1 respectively.

(3) वयाया भानन्दो विलसित पर: स्वात्मिविदितः, सरस्वत्यस्याग्रे निवसित हिता हीशशरणा। इयं ख्यातिर्यस्य प्रततसुगुणा वेदमनना-ऽस्त्येनेदं माष्यं रचितमिति बोद्धन्यमनघा: ॥

It is very common with the Sanskrit writers that they give their names in this manner : cf. (a) "हिर्ण्यपूर्वं किश्चपुं प्रचक्षते।" (Śiśupālavadha I). (b) पुण्यः शब्दो मुनिरित मुहः केवलं राजपूर्वः (Śākuntala, II. 14).

Shri Ghasi Ram wrongly translates this verse: "Let the virtuous know that this work has been composed by one whose name (Dayananda Saraswatī) is synonymous with noble qualities and Vedic study etc."

- (4) मनुष्येम्यो हितायेव सत्यार्थं सत्यमानतः । ईश्वरानुप्रहेणेदं वेद-मान्यं विधीयते ।।
- (5) संस्कृत-प्राकृताम्यां यत् भाष्याम्यामन्वितं शुमम् । मन्त्रार्थवर्णनं चात्र कियते कामधुङ् मया ।।

- (6) I shall explain the mantras by following the ancient method of interpretation of the Aryan saints and seers (i.e. Munis and Rsis) and not otherwise (i.e. the method which was followed by Sayana and others).
- (7-8) This (commentary) will frustrate and foil all blemishes of modern commentaries and glosses, casting a slur upon and grossly misinterpreting the Vedas and will reveal the ancient and accurate meaning of the Vedic lore.

May this attempt (of mine) be successful by the grace of Lord.

(6) आर्याणां मुन्यूषीणां या व्याख्यारीतिः सनातनी । तां समाश्रत्य मन्त्रार्था विधास्यन्ते तुनान्यथा ।।

The distinction between a muni and a rși can be explained thus; Rṣi is an inspired poet or sage or a singer of sacred hymns. They are the Seers of the Vedic hymns. Cf. ऋषयो मन्त्रद्वटार: and ऋषिदंशनात्. According to Yāska, यस्य वाक्यं स ऋषि: i.e. they are the persons to whom the Vedic hymns were revealed i.e. Seers (e.g., कुत्स, विसच्छ, अति, अगस्त्य etc.). Muni (मन इन उच्च, Uṇādi. 4.122) is a sage, a holy man, saint, devotee or an ascetic.

- Cf. (a) मुनीनामध्यहं व्यास: । (Gita, X. 37)
 - (b) दुःखेष्वनुद्धिग्नमनाः सुखेषु विगतस्पृहः। वीतरागभयकोध स्थितधीः मुनिरुच्यते।।

(Gîta, II. 56)

- (7) येनाधुनिकमार्थ्यैः ये टीकामिः वेददूषकाः ।दोषाः सर्वे विनश्येयुः—अन्यथार्थ-विवर्णनाः ।।

LORD'S PRAYER

(1) O Lord! Creator (of this universe), ward off all ills and evils (from us) and bestow upon us only what is good (for us). (YV. XXX. 3)

Explanation

O God, Thou art all-existence, all-intelligence, and all-bliss, most merciful, possessed of infinite knowledge, bestower of knowledge and science (Deva) illuminer of the whole universe—the Sun etc., revealer of the knowledge, bestower of all joys, (Savitā)—creator of the whole universe. Do Thou dispel far away our all miseries and all evil properties and surround us and graciously provide us with that happiness which is absolutely free from all pains and which through the attainment of real knowledge leads to prosperity in this life and to final beautitude in the next stage. Do Thou chase away all evil obstacles from this work of composing commentary on the Vedas, even before, they could occur.

O Supreme Brahman! be compassionate unto us and bestow upon what is good, such as sound health (lit. body), discrimination, (willing) co-operation (of others), efficiency and the light of the true knowledge etc. May we (be able to) write, through Thy favour, this significantly correct commentary on Thy work—the Vedas, which may shine forth with radiance of true knowledge and also have the support of all proofs e.g., direct perception, &c. May this all, by Thy grace, be beneficial for the whole humanity. Be kind to ordain, O God, that people may hold this commentary, in the highest faith and show the utmost regards for this. Om! (YV. XXX. 3)

(1) विश्वीनि देव सवितर्दुंितान् पर्यापुव । यद् भद्रं तन्नु आर्पुव । (YV. XXX. 3)

Also occurs in RV: V. 82.5.

The word Savitā is derived from the root स (to stimulate) with तृच्-It means stimulator, generator or creator. The Nirukta explains this word as सिवता सर्वस्य प्रसिवता (X. 31). According to the Nirukta, it also means the Sun आदित्योऽपि सिवतोच्यते (X. 32). In nearly half of its occurrences, the name is accompained by Deva when it means "the stimulator or creator God." In one stanza (RV. III.62.10) he is besought to stimulate thoughts of worshippers who desire to think of the glory of the Creator. This is the celebrated, Gāyatrī mantra, which- is also called the Guru mantra. The Sun is also a great stimulator of life and motion in the world.

- (2) Obeisance to God, the greatest and the most high, who governs the whole (universe and all times) past, present and future and who is the absolute bliss* (free from the slightest trace of pain). (AV. X. 23.4.1)
- (3) We offer homage to God, the most excellent and the most high, whose feet are the earth, whose abdomen is the atmospherical region (antarikṣa) and who has formed the upper most region, illumined by solar rays (divam) as the head.

 (AV. X. 23.4.32)
- (4) Deepest reverence to Lord, the most high and preeminent, whose eyes are the Sun and the Moon, renewed again and again and who has created fire as the mouth.

 (AV. X. 23.4.33)
 - (2) यो भूतं चु भव्यं चु सर्वे पश्ची धिष्ठिति । स्वर्यस्य चु केवेळं तस्मै ज्येष्ठायु ब्रह्मणे नर्मः ॥ (AV. X. 23.4.1)
 - (3) यस्य भूमिः प्रमान्तरिक्षमुतोवर्रम् । दिवं यश्चको मूर्द्धानं तस्मै ज्येष्ठाय ब्रह्मण् नर्मः ॥ (AV. X. 23.4.32)
 - (4) यस्य सूर्यश्चक्षं: चुन्द्रमाश्च पुनेर्णव:। अभिन यश्चुक आस्यं तस्मै ज्येष्ठाय बह्मणे नर्मः ॥ (AV. X. 23.4.33)
- * The word स्वर् has been translated here as 'bliss'. According to the Nighaṇṭu and the Nirukta, the following meanings can be ascribed to this word:
 - I. 'Heavenly region or the Sun': साधारणान्युत्तराणि षट् दिवश्चादित्यस्य च (Nirukta, II.13); स्व:। पृश्तिः। नाक:। गौ:। विष्टप्। नम इति षट् साधारणानि। (Nighantu, I.4); स्वरादित्यो भवति सु अरण: (Nirukta, II.14, IV.4).
 - II. 'Water'. It is given in the names of water. (See Nighantu I.12).
 - III. 'Heaven, paradise', as in स्वर्लोक. In classical literature it is very common ''स्वरव्ययम्' etc. (Amarakoşa).
 - IV. The sky, Ether.
 - V. 'The space above the Sun or between the Sun and the polar star.''
 - VI. The third व्याहृति.
 - VII. Radiance or glow.
 - VIII. 'Bliss, free from the slightest trace of pain'
 - çि. यत्न दुःखेन संमिन्नं न च प्रस्तमनन्तरम् । अभिलाषोपनीतं च तत्ं सुखं स्वः पदास्पदम् ॥

(5) Adorations to the Supreme Being, whose in-breathings and out-breathings are the air, whose eyes are illuminating rays (angirasas)* and who has made the directions as the organ of hearing.

(AV. X. 23.4.34)

Explanation

Our deepest homage to the highest and the greatest God, Who rules over the entire universe and also over the times past, present and future; i.e., Lord of all and is beyond the limitations of times; Whose character is absolute and decayless joy; where there is no slightest tinge of pain i.e., God full of surpreme bliss. (2)

(5) यस्य वार्तः प्राणापानौ चक्षुरिङ्गेरुसोऽभैवन् । दिश्वो यश्चुके प्रज्ञानीस्तस्मै ज्येष्टाय ब्रह्मणे नर्मः ।।

(AV X. 23, 4, 34)

- * The word Angirasas is derived from अङ्ग गती, (असि इस्ट् Uṇādi, 1V.235). According to the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa it is from 'अङ्गार'; "येऽङ्गारा आसन् तेऽङ्गिरसोऽभवन्". So the Nirukta (III.17) explains the word as 'अङ्गारेषु अङ्गिराः । अंगारा अंकना अञ्चनाः'. Angirasas is also an epithet of Agni. Etymologically it is connected with Agni. For instance:
 - (a) यदङ्ग दाशुषे त्वमग्ने मद्रं करिष्यसि । तवेत्तत् सत्यमङ्गिरः ।। (RV. I.1.6)
 - (b) त्वामाहुः सहसस्युत्रमङ्गिरः । (R.V. V. 11.6)

Thus it means firy rays or illuminating rays. In Vedic literature, we also come across adjectives like अंगिरसस्तम: (i.e., very rapid), especially like Agni, devouring everything.

Ralph T.H. Griffith translates these stanzas as follows:

- 2. "Worship to loftiest Brahma, Lord of what hath been and what shall be;
 - To him who rules the universe and heavenly light is all his own." (AV. X. 23.4.1).
- 3. "Be reverence paid to him, that highest Brahma, whose base is earth, his belly air, who made the sky to be his head." (AV. X 23.4.32).
- 4. Homage to highest Brahma, him whose eye is the Sun and the Moon who groweth young and new again, Him who made Agni for his mouth." (AV X, 23.4.33).
- 5. Homage to highest Brahma, Him whose two life-breathings were the wind;

The Angirasas his sight; Who made the regions be his means of sense. (AV. X. 23.4,34).

The earth is His feet (pramā), the cause of real knowledge, (i.e., people living on earth acquire knowledge). The space between the sun and the earth is His belly and Who has made the sky, illumined by solar rays, as His head. (3)

To Him—whose eyes are the sun and the moon, which renewed again and again in the beginning of creation and who has made fire as His mouth. (4).

The continuous adorations to the greatest Supreme Being of infinite knowledge whose two vital breathings (prana and apana) are the entire wind, whose eyes are the angirasas i.e., the illuminating rays: (vide Nirukta, III. 17) and who formed the directions disah as the cause of all activities. (5).

(6) May we adore with oblations, the blissful Lord of creatures (kasmai)* the giver of spiritual knowledge, of power and prowess and Whose commandments all the learned people 'devāḥ' acknowledge, Whose shelter is salvation and disregard of Whom is (misery and) death. (YV. XXV. 13)

- * अङ्गिरा: अङ्गारा: अङ्गुना: । (Nirukta, III. 17)
- (6) य अत्मिदा बेलुदा यस्यु विश्वं उपासंते प्रशिपु यस्य देवाः । यस्यं छायाऽमृत् यस्यं मृत्युः कस्मे देवाय द्विषा विधेम ॥ (YV. XXV. 13) or consider de rême de seden de la la

RV. X. 121.2: The first part of the second line is difficult. Prof. M. Müller translates it thus: "Whose shadow is immortality, whose shadow is death." The meaning may be that His cold shadow (his displeasure or ignorance of him) is death while the shadow or knowledge of His bright glory makes His devotees immortal.

Griffith renders this verse:

"Giver of vital breath, of power and vigour, he, whose commandment all the Gods acknowledge;

The Lord of death, whose shade is life immortal. What God shall we adore with our oblation?"

The word (kasmai) may be interrogative pronoun, but Dayananda, on the authority of the Satapatha Brālmaṇa says that it means प्रजापति or सञ्चरवरूप. Cf. ''प्रजापतिर्वे कः'' (Satapatha, VII. 3).

"ka" also means happiness or joy as in nāka which is explained thus: "न कं-सुखं = दु:खं; न अकं यह्न." Yāska says "किमिति सुखनाम, तत्प्रतिषिद्धं प्रतिषिध्येत्" (Nirukta, II.14),

- (7) May (there be) peace in the celestial region, may there be peace in the intermediate regions, may there be peace on the earth, may waters and herbs (bring) peace (to us); may trees be peaceful, may all learned people (Viśvedevāḥ) bring peace (to us); may the Vedic lore (propagate) peace (in the world); May all things be (source of) peace to us; may peace bestow peace on all and may that peace come to me also. (YV. XXXVI. 17)
- (8) From whatsoever region Thou desirest, make us fearless thence; grant happiness to our off-springs $(praj\bar{a})^*$ and security, to our animals.

(YV. XXXVI. 22)

- (7) द्यौः शान्तिर्न्तिरं पृथियी शान्तिरापुः शान्तिरोषं घयः शान्तिः । वनस्पर्वयः शान्तिविद्वे शान्तिः शान्तिः साम्प्रा शान्तिरेषि ।। (YV. XXXVI. 17)
- Cf.: The nearly similar verse in Atharvaveda (XIX. 9.14) is also found which ends differently:

पृथिवी शान्तिर्न्तिर्देशं शान्तिचौः शान्तिरापः शान्तिरोषंधयः शान्तिवंनुस्पतियः शान्तिविश्वं मे देवाः शान्तिः शानिः शानतिः शान्तिः शानिः शानिः शान्तिः शानिः शानिः शानिः शानिः शानिः शानिः शानिः शानिः

Sāyaṇa and others translate the words Viśve devāḥ as 'all gods' But 'Dayananda takes in the sense of 'the learned men' 'विद्वांसो हि देवा:' (ŚB). This is derived from √ दिवु क्रीडा-विजिगीषाच्यवहारद्युतिस्तृतिमोदमदस्यप्त-कान्तिगतिषु with अच् (P. III. 1.134) i.e., donor, imparter of joy or happiness, conqueror, illuminator. Yāska also states the same thing, 'देवो वानाहा दीपनाहा द्योतनाहा द्युस्थानो भवतीति वा", (Nirukta VII.15). In the commentary, Durga adds 'इह तु रश्मयो बहुवचनेनोच्यन्ते इति विशेष:"। (XII. 38).

(8) यतो यतः सुमीहेसे ततो नो अभेयं कुर । शर्त्र: कुर प्रजाश्योऽभेयं नः पृशुश्यः ॥ (YV. XXXVI. 22)

Griffith renders it as follows:

"From whatsoever trouble Thou desirest, give us safety thence. Give to our children happiness and to our beasts security."

From this translation, it is clear that the words "यतो यत:" give the sense of "from whatsoever trouble." But Dayananda says "यतो यतो देशात् त्वं समीहसे जगद्रचनपालनार्थां वेष्टां करोषि" i.e., "from whatsoever region in which you desire to plant and maintain a world." The second interpretation is better. God, who is all merciful never desires trouble for his devotees.

(1) तस्मीव् युज्ञात् सेवंहुत ऋचः सामानि जिज्ञरे । छन्दं¹⁹सि जिज्ञरे तस्मात् यजुस्तस्मीत् अजायत ।

(YV. XXXI, 7)

"Yojña". This word is translated by all Europeans as 'sacrifice'. Prof. Macdonell renders this verse as below:

"From that sacrifice, completely offered, were born the hymns and the chants; the metres were born from it; the sacrificial formula was born from it."

Griffith evidently could not accept this wrong rendering. He improved upon but could not find the right interpretation. I cite below his translation also:—

"From that great General Sacrifice, Rcas and Sama hymns were born; Therefrom were spells and charms produced, the $Y\bar{a}jus$ had its birth from it."

Sāyaṇa in his Upodghāta clearly says: ''तस्मात् यज्ञात्—यज्ञतीयात्; सर्वहृत:—सर्वै: ह्रयमानात्" etc., i.e., "from that adorable and universally invoked God." Thus according to Sāyaṇa the word yajña here means 'adorable God' and not "sacrifice" as it is interpreted by Europeans.

The word yajña is from the root यज् (देवपूजासङ्गतिकरणदानेषु) to sacrifice, to adore, honour or revere or to dedicate or give. Thus it has both the meanings, 'sacrifice' as well as 'adorable one'. If we take the context into consideration, the meaning of sacrifice has no justification here. Vedas were not born from any sacrifice. They were revealed by God for the accomplishment of yajñas.

Cf. "दुदोह यज्ञसिद्धचर्यम् ऋग्यजुः सामलक्षणम् ।" (Manusmṛtt) (contd.)

Sāyaṇa's interpretation of the word yajña is better and is based on etymology. Dayānanda goes a step further and cites the Śata patha-Brāhmaṇa in order to support his etymological meaning. "वतो वं विष्णुः" (ŚB I. 1.1.13) i.e., "yajña is verily Viṣṇu." Viṣṇu means Omni-present God "वेवेध्टि सर्वं = क्याप्नोति चराचरं जगत् स विष्णुः" i.e. Viṣṇu is so called as He pervades the whole universe.

Sarvahutaḥ=सर्व+ √हू (दानादनवो: आदाने चेत्येक) + क (P. III. 2.102) i.e., universally worshipped or adored.

"Reah" = √ऋच् to praise + किप् (U. II. 57). ऋचन्ति स्तुवन्ति यया सा (by which we praise). It denotes Regueda.

Sāmāni = ्रषो(नाशे) + मिनन् (U. IV. 153). Yāska in the Nirukta explains it as follows: "साम सिम्मतम्वा, अस्यतेर्वा, ऋचा समं मेने इति नैदानाः" (Nirukta, VII. 12). According to this, the following are the etymological meanings of the word Sama: (i) साम सिम्मतम्वा i.e. Sāma is so called as it is mixed with Rcas. (ii) 'अस्यतेर्वा' √असु(क्षेपणे) to throw i.e., Sāma is thrown in the Rcas. 'प्रक्षिपतिष्व हि तत् ऋचि भवति'। (Durga). (iii) 'स्यतेर्वा' √षो (अन्त कर्मण) As the Sāmagāna is a final item in a sacrifice. (iv) 'ऋचा समं मेने इति नैदानाः". Yāska cites here the views of Naidānas who say that Sāma is equal to Rcas.

"Chandānsi"—Macdonell interprets it as "metres", i.e., metres were born from it. Griffith translates it as 'spells and charms' and adds, 'probably those of the later collections of the Atharvaveda'. But according to Dayānanda it refers to Atharvaveda. He says: "वेदानां गायद्यादिछन्दोन्वित-त्वात् पुनश्च्छन्दोसि इति पदं चतुर्यस्यायवंवेदस्योत्पत्तिं ज्ञापयति।" i.e., The Vedas contain various metres—Gāyatrī &c but not withstanding this, the word Chandānsi (metres) is used to indicate that the Atharvaveda was revealed by God.

The word (chandānsi is derived from √चिंद (आह्नादे) + असुन् (U. IV. 186,219). The worshipper rejoices in reciting the chandānsi. In the Nighantu (III. 4), it is explained छन्दत्यचंति कर्मेति i.e., by which we worship. Yāska says: "छन्दोसि छादनात्" (VII. 12).

"Yajus"— √यज् + उस् (U. 11. 115). Yaska also says: "यजुर्यजतेः" (N. VII.12) i.e., from yaj to worship or adore. Yajurveda.

(2) "Tell me who is that Divine Being, from whom the Rgveda (Rcas) was produced (lit. 'hewed off'), from whom the Yajurveda was brought to light (lit. 'chipped'), whose hairs are Sama-verses and His mouth the Atharvangiras? (He is) Skambha (i.e. All sustaining God)." (AV. X. 7.20)

Explanation

(Tasmāt yajñāt) From that Supreme and Perfect Being (Para-Brahman), who possesses the attributes of Self-existence, Consciousness and Bliss (sat, cit, ānanda), who is Omnipotent and universally adored, were born the Rgveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda and Atharvaveda (Chandānsi). That is to say that four Vedas were revealed by Him alone.

The word 'sarva-hutah' can also be taken as an adjective, (qualifying) the Vedas. Vedas are sarva-hutah, as they also are worthy of acceptance by all*.

The two verbs 'jajñire and ajāyata' (both meaning 'produced') are used to denote that the Vedas contain numerous sciences. Similarly the twice repeated pronoun "tasmāt" (from him) emphasises (the fact) that God alone is the revealer of the Vedas.

All the Vedas contain various metres—Gayatri-&c; not withstanding this—the word "Chandānsi" (metres) denotes that the fourth Veda—the Atharvaveda—was also produced (by God).

According to the \hat{S} ata patha-Brāhmaṇa (where it is stated that "verily Viṣṇu is $yaj\~na$ " (I. 1.2.13)†; the word $yaj\~na$ means "Viṣṇu". Now Viṣṇu is God as the attribute of creating the whole universe can be applicable to God alone and none else. "Viṣṇu created this (visible and invisible) world, and He supports the threefold world." (YV V. 15)‡.

(2) यस्माद्ची अपार्तसन् यजुर्यस्मीद्रपार्कवन् । सामीनि यस्य लोमीन्यथर्वाङ्ग्रिसो मुख्यम् ॥ स्कुम्भं तं बृहि कतुमः स्विदेव स. ॥ (AV. X. 7.20)

The word "Skambha" is derived from the root स्कब्स to create, to stop, impede or restrain or to stop. Thus it means = support, prop, stay, i.e., God, who supports all. All other words in this verse have already been explained.

- सर्वै: होतुमादातुं प्रहोतुं योग्या: सन्तीत्यत: ।
- पं यज्ञों वे विष्णु: II (ŚB I. 1.1.13)
- ‡ Yajur Veda : इदं विष्णृतिचक्रमे त्रेधा निदधे पदम् (YV V. 15).

He is called Viṣṇu as He pervades the mobile and immobile world.¹ Explanation

"Tasmāt" Who is that Divine Being, the Almighty and the Supreme Brahman, by whom the Rgveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda, and Atharvareda were brought to light? Similarly (who is He?) whose mouth—the foremost part—is the Atharvaveda; hair—the Sāmaveda; the heart—the Yajurveda and the life breath, the Rgveda? In this way it is a figure of speach, called Metaphor. Tell me by Whom four Vedas were produced. It is a question. The answer to which is, "Be it known to you that He is Skambha—the all sustaining Lord."

Now this must be accepted that no other Deva than the all sustaining Lord is the author of the Vedas. The Sa:apatha clearly states (XIV. 5.4.11) that "the Rgveda, the Yajurveda, Samaveda and Atharvarigiras are like the breath of that Greatest Being."*

Here Yājñavalkya says, "O Maitreyī, let it be known that the four Vedas—the Rgveda &c.—came out of God who transcends even space, like the breath easily and naturally." As breath goes out of the body and again goes into it; so the Vedas are revealed and withdrawn again by God (at the time of creation and dissolution). (2)

Some one might object here, 'How could the Vedas, which are consisted of sounds (i.e. words) only be produced by God who possesses no bodily organs (nir-avayava)? Here we say,' "This objection is untenable in connection with the Almighty." He always has the power of acting without (the help of) all such instruments as the mouth, the vital breath &c. Moreover, as at the time of reflection, we, in our mind, pronounce words and ask and answer questions (without using our external bodily organs) so we must believe that the same is true of God also. In his work, the Almighty never requires help of any body or any thing. True, that we do need aids and helps in our undertakings, but such is not the case with Lord. When the incorporeal (lit-limbless) God has created the entire cosoms (lit-world), what objection there can be raised to His having revealed the Vedas. God has created extremely surprising objects in this world, whose composition is as subtle and fine as that of the Vedas.

(The $p\bar{u}rva$ - $pak\bar{s}\bar{\imath}$ i.e., the objector may retort here saying that the similarity between the world and the Vedas is not true) because no one except God has the power to create the universe, but in the case of the composition of the Vedas, men might have had the power to compose them just as they have power to write other books. Here our contention is that men have become able to compose books, only after studying the Vedas of Divine authorship and not otherwise. None can become learned without self-study (pathana) and receiving instructions (śravana) from others. As now-a-days men acquire knowledge by reading some treatise (sāstra), receiving (lit. hearing) oral instructions and observing the (worldly) events. It can be explained by the following (example). Suppose a human child is kept in absolutely lonely place upto his death, being provided (of course) with food and drink etc., but never holding the slightest talk with him by means of speech As that child would not achieve the smallest knowledge worth the name, and as the wild human beings of the great forests behave like beasts until they receive instructions (upadesa) from others, so all human-beings would have behaved (like beasts) from the commencement of the creation upto the present day, had not they received instructions through the Vedas. Not to speak of them, then their possessing of the power of composing books.

(The pūrva-pakṣī i.e., the objector again retorts and says that) this statement is not acceptable. God has granted men innate knowledge (svabhāvika-jñānam). This is superior to all bookish knowledge. Without this it is impossible to know the relation between the Vedic words and their imports. By developing that (innate knowledge) men would be able to write books. Hence, it is useless to believe in the Divine authorship of the Vedas.

At this point we ask: Has not God granted this innate knowledge to the child, who was brought in seclusion without providing any instruction as mentioned above or to the wild dweller of dense forest? And how is it that we, too, do not become learned without receiving (proper) education and without studying the Vedas? It is, therefore, concluded that mere innate knowledge is of no avail to a man without instruction and self-study. As men write books after acquiring multiform knowledge from the learned (teachers) and by studying the works of the learned, so all men, ultimately have to depend on Divine knowledge.

Moreover, in the beginning of the creation, there was no system of learning and teaching, nor there was any book (available to be read). Consequently none could possibly acquire knowledge (vid yā-sambhava) without receiving instructions from God. Hence, no man was able to write a book then. Men are not independent in the matter of empirical knowledge (naimittika-jñāna) and the mere innate knowledge is insufficient for the acquisition of knowledge (vidyā-prāpti) in general. What has been said that innate knowledge is superior (to all and is self-sufficient) is absurd. As it falls in the category of instruments (sādhana koţi) like the eye and as the eye is powerless to do anything without the co-operation of the mind, so innate knowledge is also too weak to acquire any thing without the help of the Divine knowledge and the learning of the learned men.

"What was God's motive in revealing the Vedas?"

This question is to be answered by another counter-question. "What could be His motive in not revealing the Vedas?"

"We do not know how to answer this (counter) question" will be (the plausible) reply from the objector.

"It is truly so. Now you listen what object God has in revealing the Vedas."

- Q. "Is God's knowledge infinite or is it not so?"
- A. "It is so."
- Q. "What is its advantage?"
- A. "It is for His own benefit (svartha)."
- O. "Is not God, benevolent to others?"
- A. "He does good to others. But what of that?"

This shows that the aim of knowledge is self-interest as well as of others. Had not God employed His knowledge for our instruction, it would have been futile in one respect. God has established the utility of His knowledge, by imparting it to us in the form of the Vedas. God, like a father, is the most merciful. As a father always cherishes compassion for his off-springs, so God, most mercifully revealed the Vedas for the benefit of entire mankind. Had he not done so, the eternal gross ignorance (andhaparampara) would have been in vogue and thus men, being unable to accomplish righteousness (dharma), prosperity (artha), enjoyments (kāma) and salvation (moksa), would have (ultimately) been deprived of the Supreme Bliss. When God, most compassionately created bulbous roots, fruits and herbs etc. for the happiness of the created beings, why should He not have revealed (lit. imparted instruction) the Vedic knowledge, which embodies all sciences and bring to light all kinds of pleasures. The amount of happiness, which one feels in enjoying (lit. in acquiring-praptya) all the best things of the universe cannot be compared with one thousandth part of the pleasure, which a learned man experiences. It is, therefore, definitely decided that the Vedic instructions (Veda-upadesa) are divine.

- Q. Whence did God procure the writing materials e.g. pen, inkpot etc. for scribing the books of the Vedas?
- A. Here our explanation is :-

It is surprisingly (aha-haha) a formidable (lit. great, Mahatī) objection, raised by you. As God created this universe without the assistance of bodily organs e.g. the hands, the feet etc. and also without the help of all instruments and materials, as wood, clay etc. so the Vedas were also revealed. You should raise no objection regarding the composition of the Vedas by Omnipotent God. But (remember) He did not reveal the Vedas in shape of books in the beginning (of the creation).

- Q. In what form then?
- A. In the form of (the inspired) knowledge.
- Q. In whose consciousness (were they revealed)?
- A. To the consciousness of Agni, Vayu, Aditya and Angirasa.
- Q. But they (Agni, Vayu, Aditya and Angirasa i.e. Fire, Air, Sun and Light) are inanimate things, devoid of consciousness.
- A. This is not so. In human bodies, they were human beings (born) in the beginning of creation.*
- Q. How is it?
- A. No inanimate object can perform an act of intelligence. Where the primary meaning (of a word) is incompatible, it is the sphere of lakṣaṇā (i.e. Indication).† For instance, if a credible person were to tell another that the bed-steads were crying

† Cf.: मुख्यायं नाधे तद्-युक्तो ययान्योऽर्थः प्रतीयते । स्बे: प्रयोजनाद् नापि लक्षणा शक्तिरापिता ।।

i.e. where the Expressed meaning of a word is incompatible with the context, we take secondary sense by lakṣaṇā i.e. Indication.

^{*} Sayana also corroborates, "जीवविशेषरिनवाय्वादित्यैः वेदानामुत्पादित-स्वात्" (ऋग्-भाष्योपोद्घातः)।

(मञ्चा: ऋोशन्ति), then it is inferred that persons sitting on the bed-steads are crying.* The similar method is also to be adopted

* There are three powers of words (शब्दशक्तित्वयो) to signify different meaning of all words, i.e. Abhidha, Lakṣaṇā and Vyañ janā. Abhidhā is also called Mukhyō-vṛtti i.e. the Primary power; which is defined as:--

"तत्र संकेतितार्थस्य बोधनादिष्रमाभिधा ॥" (Sāhityadarpaṇa. II)

Abhidhā or the Primary power conveys to the understanding the meaning which belongs to the word by convention (sanketa). Abhidhā expresses the conventional meaning of a word. This sanketa or convention is also fourfold as Jāti, Guṇa, Dravya and Kriyā.

The second power is called Lakṣaṇa or Indication. It is defined as :—
''मृख्यार्थबाधे तद् योगे ययान्योऽर्थ: प्रतीयते ।
क्टं: प्रयोजनाद् वापि लक्षणाशक्तिर्रापता ॥" (Sāhityadarpaṇa II)

When the primary meaning of a word is incompatible (with the rest of the sentence), this power of Indication is communicated (to the word); whereby another meaning (than the Expressed one) connected therewith becomes apprehended, either through usage—(Rudhi) or through some motive (Prayojana).

The sentence "क्लिक्झ:साहसिक:" is an example in Rūdhilakṣaṇā. It means: "Kalinga i.e. (Orissa) is rash". But the quality of rashness is found in sentient beings only. Thus the primary meaning of the word Kalinga is inappropriate here. This is 'मुख्यायं वाध". Hence, the word Kalinga causes us to think of the men, residing in the country; this meaning is connected with the primary meaning "country".

To take another example "गङ्गायां घोषः" or "herd-station on the Gangā." The word Gangā primarily signifies a "stream of water". But this meaning is inappropriate here as a herd-station cannot be built over a mass of water. Thus there is मुख्यायंवाध. This incompatability leads us to think of the bank, which is connected with itself (Gangā) by relation of proximity. Thus there is "Tad-yoga". (Contd.)

This power of a word by which we understand "men" from the word Kalinga and "Bank" from the word Gangā is called "Lakṣaṇā".

The first example is based on convention i.e. Rudhi and the second one on purpose i.e. Prayojana. This Lakṣaṇā has eighty varieties according to the Rhetoricians.

The third power of words is Vyanjana. Its simple definition is as follows:—

"विरतास्विमधाद्यासु ययार्थो वोध्यते परः । सा वृत्तिः स्यञ्जना नाम शब्दस्यार्थादिकस्य च ॥" (Sāhityadarpaṇa)

When Denotation ($Abhidh\bar{a}$) and other powers cease after discharging their function, that function of a word or its sense etc. by which a further meaning is conveyed is what is called $Vya\tilde{n}jan\bar{a}$ i.e. Suggestion.

This Vyañjanā is twofold (1) that which is based upon a word's power of Denotation i.e. Abhidhā-mūlā and (2) which is based upon its power of Indication (Lakṣaṇā-mūlā).

In Lakṣaṇā-malā Vyañianā we may take the example of "বঙ্গাৰা ঘাৰ:" (i.e. a herd-station on the Ganga). Here the power of Denotation ceases after denoting the meaning of "a mass of water", and when the power of Indication ceases after conveying the meaning of the "bank", then that power by which the excess of coolness and purity is conveyed, is called "Suggestion or Vyañjanā" based upon "Indication".

We have explained here very concisely the three Powers of words. The interested reader may refer to the Kavyaprakasa or Sahityadarpana. This brief explanation given here will help the reader in understanding our text.

* This is to say that we should interpret here Agni, Vāyu, Ādityā and Āngiras as Proper Nouns denoting four seers, called by these four names. They were human beings. These words do not signify here inanimate objects of nature—Fire, Air, Sun and Light.

(3) From them, when they meditated, were produced the three Vedas: from Agni was produced the Rgveda, from Vayu, the Yajurveda, and from Sūrya, the Sāmaveda.

God inspired their consciouness and the Vedas were revealed through them.

- Q. This is really true. We infer (from your statement) that God gave them knowledge and they composed the Vedas with the help of this knowledge.
- A. Do not take it in that sense. In what form did God give them knowledge?
- Q. In the form of the Vedas.
- A. Was that knowledge divine or was it theirs own?
- Q. Surely it was God's.
- A. Then, who did compose the Vedas? God or they?
- Q. God composed them as they (the Vedas) are His own knowledge: (lit. they were composed by Him whose knowledge they are).
- A. Then why have you raised objection and say that they (Agni and others) composed them?
- Q. To come to the definite conclusion.*
- Q. Is God just or partial?
- A. He is just.
- Q. Why, then, did He reveal the Vedas to the hearts of four persons only and why not to the hearts of all mankind?
- A. This does not indicate that God has even the slightest partiality.

 On the contrary, it clearly brings to light the exact justice of the ^{*} These questions and answers are not really so. Here the objector and the demonstrator of truth are represented by the words question and answer i.e. the question stands for objector and the answer for demonstrator of truth.

Mark the convincing method of discussion. How remarkably has the author advanced arguments and the objector himself admits truth, just God. Justice signifies to award fruit strictly in accordance with one's action. Be it known to you that only these (four sages) possessed previous (birth)—merits (pūrva-punya). Hence it was quite reasonable that the Vedas were revealed to their hearts only.

- Q. But they were born in the beginning of the creation. Whence did they acquire these previous merits?
- A. Here we say that all worldly souls (jīvas) are without beginning in their nature. Their actions and this great effect i.e. the universe are too without beginning, like an eternal flow of stream. We shall establish their eternal nature by adducing proofs later on.*
- Q. Has God composed (verses) in metres—such as Gayatrī and others also?
- A. Why this doubt? Does God lack in the knowledge of composing metres e.g. Gāyatrī and others? He is Omniscient and knows this science as well as all others. Hence, this objection is baseless.
- Q. Tradition (Aitihya) says that the four-faced Brahman composed the Vedas.
- A. Do not say so. The Aitihya i.e. the Traditional testimony is included in "Oral Evidence" i.e. (Śabda-pramaṇa). Ācārya ^{*} Here text is not very clear. "सर्वे जीवा: स्वरूपतोऽनादय: । तेषां कर्माण सर्वे कार्यं जगच्च प्रवाहेण एव अनादीनि सन्ति" and the Hindi version given by Panditas is contrary to the Sanskrit text.

We have technically followed the Sanskrit text in our English rendering. But the underlying idea is still obscure. In order to make it more lucid we offer the following explanation:—

[&]quot;Jivas, their actions and this great effect (kāryarāpa) i.e. (jagat), these three things are Anādi. But this Anāditva has some distinct aspects. Souls and Nature (i.e. Jīvas and Mūla-prakṛti) are without beginning (anādi), in their nature. They are eternal. But the actions and this universe (which is an effect of Mūla-prakṛti i.e., the Original Nature) are also called eternal in the sence that they are like the members of a series which has no beginning and which flows on continuously like an eternal current of a river. Technically this eternal aspect is called as प्रवाहिण अनादि. Ātmā and Mūlaprakṛti are eternal by nature.

Gautama in his treatise on logic (Nyāya-Sastra) defines it as (4) "A statement of a credible person" and adds that (5) "Traditional testimony is also an oral evidence." In his commentary on this aphorism (Sūtra), Vātsyāyana, the commentator says, (6) "Apta (a credible man) is he who has realised the truth and who being desirous of instructing others, represents the facts to them as personally visulised by him. Apti means realisation of truth (about a thing) and 'Apta' is a person who possesses this."

Consequently, the truthful tradition only is accepted as "Aithya", (i.e. a Traditional evidence) and not a false (or ambiguous) statement. Hence, that Aithya (Testimony of Tradition) is acceptable which stands the test of truth (Satya-pramāṇa) and is a statement of a credible person and not that which is contrary (to truth). A false (tradition), like the ravings of a mad man is (not acceptable). Similarly (the tradition) that Vyāsa or other sages (Rṣis) composed the Vedas is also false. The modern (Navīna)* books of the Purāṇas or the Tantras (which contain such false tales) are of no avail and worth.

- Q. Why should not we accept that the Mantras (Vedic stanzas) and Suktas (the Vedic hymns) were composed by those Rsis, whose names are mentioned over them?
- A. Do not say so. Even Brahman and others have studied and learnt the Vedas from others. The Śvetāśvatara and other Upaniṣads contain passages (saying):—

^{(4) &}quot;आप्तोवदेश: ज्ञब्द:" (Nyaya. I. 1.7)

^{(5) &}quot;शब्द ऐतिहामित्यादि" (Nyāya. II. 2.2)

^{(6) &}quot;अप्तः खलु साक्षात्कृतधर्मा यथादृष्टस्यार्थस्य चिरव्यापिषया प्रयुक्त उपदेष्टा । साक्षात् करणमर्थस्याप्तः, तया प्रवर्त्तते इत्याप्तः ।" (Nyāya-bhāşya. I. 1.7)

^{*} According to Dayānanda, there are two types of the Purāṇas; (I) Navīna and (II) Prācīna. The modern eighteen Purāṇas e. g. Viṣṇu-Purāṇa and Agni Purāṇa, contain false stories. They are included in the first category of Navīna Purāṇas. The second category of ancient Purāṇas includes Śatpatha-brāhmaṇa &c. The evidence of these ancient Purāṇas, is acceptable.

(7) "He who creates Brahman (i.e. 專即) first and then verily sends forth the Vedas to him." (SV. VI. 18)

The Vedas were known to Brahman and others when Rsis (Marīci and others) were not born. Manu says:

(8) "He (God) milked (i.e. caused them to be revealed) from Agni, Vāyu, and Ravi, the three (fold) eternal Veda (Brahma) by name Rg, Yajur and Sāma for the accomplishment of sacrifices (Yajñas)." (Manu I.23)

Again :-

(9) "Kavi, the son of Angiras taught his fathers (pitrn, i.e. elders)."
(Manu II. 151)

When Brahman himself learnt the Vedas from Agni and others, (then) what have we to say about Vyāsa etc.?

- Q. Why are the Rgveda and other Samhitas ascribed two names viz. Veda and Śruti?
- A. Because each of these names denotes distinct significance. The word Veda is derived from the (four) roots, i.e. "Vida" to know, "Vida" to exist, "Vidlr" to obtain, and "Vida" to think, by adding a suffix ঘন্ত (i.e. অ) in the sense of Instrumental and Locative cases, in accordance with the aphorism:
- (10) "Halasca". (P. III. 3. 121)
 - (7) "धो वै ब्रह्माणं विद्याति पूर्वम् । यो वै वेदाँश्च प्रहिणोति तस्मै ॥" (SV. VI. 18)

Here the verb prahinoti (प्र+√हि V.P.) ordinarily means (1) to send forth, propel, (2) to throw, discharge, shoot. Cf: विनाशात् तस्य वृक्षस्य रक्षस्तस्मै महोपलं प्रजिद्यास । (RV. XV. 21)

In this passage it means "to give" or "to send forth".

- (8) "अग्निवायुरविभ्यस्तु त्रयं ब्रह्म सनातनम् । दुदोह यज्ञ-सिद्धचर्थम्ग्यजुःसामलक्षणम् ।।" (MS. I. 23)
- (9) "अध्यापयामास पितृन् शिशुराङ्गिरसः कविः ।" (MS. II. 151)
- (10) "हलश्च" (P. III. 3. 121) On this aphorism Bhattojidīksita writes:—

"हलन्तात् घञ् स्यात् । घापबादः । रमन्ते योगिनोऽस्मिन् इति रामः । अपमृज्यतेऽनेन स्याभ्याबिरित्यवामार्गः ॥" (Contd.) Similarly the word Sruti is formed from the root \sqrt{sru} (to hear) with suffix किन् (ित) in the (sense of) Instrumental case. The Vedas are so called as all men know all true sciences in or through them or as all true

Here the author gives two examples, $R\bar{a}ma$ and $Ap\bar{a}m\bar{a}rga$ in Locative and Instrumental cases respectively. Similarly our author explains the word Veda from four different roots in the sense of these two nonnrelations i.e. Locative and Instrumental.

i.e. According to Dayananda the word "Veda" is derived from the following four roots:—

- (a) विद् ज्ञाने (अदादिगणे परस्मैपदे, सेट्) यथा-वेति ।
- (b) विद् सत्तायाम् (दिवादि आत्मनेपदेऽनिट्) यथा-विद्यते ।
- (c) विद् विचारणे (रुधादिगणे आत्मनेपदेऽनिट्) यथा-विन्ते ।
- (d) विदल लाभे (तुदाहि गणे उभयपदीयः सेट् धातुः) यथा-विन्दति, विन्दते ।

But there is another (fifth) root in Dhātupāṭha from which we can get the word Veda. The root " ्रविं चेतनास्थानविवासेषु" is mentioned in Tenth Conjugation as Set in Atmanepada.

This root means:—to make known, communicate, inform, apprise, tell or teach, expound as it is in the verse:—

"वेदार्थं स्वानवेदयत" (सिद्धान्त-कौमुदी)

The following verse illustrates the root in some of its conjugations:—

"वेत्ति सर्वाणि शास्त्राणि गर्वस्तस्य न विद्यते । वित्त धर्मं सदा सद्भिः तेषु पूजां च विन्दति ॥"

cf. also:—

"सत्तायां-विद्यते, ज्ञाने-वेति, विन्ते-विचारणे । विन्दते विन्दति-प्राप्तौ, श्यन् लुक् श्नम्शेष्टिवदं कमात् ॥"

This stanza also describes different Vikaraņas in different roots.

(cf: Latin — vidco; A.S. Witan; Goth — vait; English—wit)

Prof. A.A. Mecdonell's Vedic Grammer is very poor in this respect. He gives only two roots instead of five. (\sqrt{vid} —to know and \sqrt{vid} to obtain).

sciences exist in them or as men become learned by studying them.* (The Vedas are also called) Srutis as from the beginning of creation upto this day, Brahman and others have learnt all true sciences through them (by oral transmission) ϕ . No one (in this world) has seen the Vedas being composed

The word Veda has been used in ancient literature with two different accentuations i.e. "ādi-udātta" and "anta-udātṭa". The "ādi-udātta" "Veda" word (in Nominative, Singular) has been used in the Rgveda 15 times as "वेदं:" (RV. I. 73.5; III, 53.14. etc.) and once in Instrumental case as in "वेदेन—स्वाध्यायेन इति वेद्धुटमाधवः । वेदेन—वेदाध्ययनेन बह्मयज्ञेन इति सायणः" (RV. VIII. 19.5.): in Yajurveda and Atharvaveda we come across its use with anta-udātta which is not found in the Rgveda; as "वेदः" (YV II. 21; AV. VII. 28.1).

Paṇini enumerates this word in two different Gaṇas i.e. in বচন্দ্ৰাবি (VI. 1.160) and in ব্যাৰি (VI. 1. 203).

It is intesting to note that this word is etymologically explained in the following Vedic Texts:—

- (a) "वेदेन वं देवा असुराणां वित्तं वेद्यमविन्दत । तहेदस्य वेदत्वम् ।" (TS. 1.4.20)
- (b) ''वेदि: देवेभ्यो निलायत । तां वेदेनान्वविन्वन् । वेदेन वेदि विविदुः पृथिवीम् ।" (TB. III. 3.9.69)

These uses are from the root \sqrt{Vid} (to obtain).

Bhattabhaskara in his commentary on TS explains as follows :—
"विद्यते-लम्पतेऽनेनेति करागे घन । उठच्छादित्वात अन्तोदात्तम ।"

(c) Anandatīrtha in his Viśņutattvanirņaya cites a stanza showing the derivation of this word:—

''नेन्द्रियाणि नानुमानं, वेदा हि एव एनं वेदयन्ति । तस्मादाहुः वेदा इति विष्यलादश्रतिः ।''

(d) In Ayurveda:

"आयुरस्मिन् विद्यतेऽनेन वा आयुर्विन्दति-इत्यायुर्वेदः ।" (SST. I. 14) (Contd.)

^{* &}quot;विन्दन्ति-जानन्ति, विद्यन्ते-भवन्ति, विन्दन्ति विन्दन्ते-लमन्ते, विन्दते-विचारयन्ति सर्वे मनुष्याः सर्वाः सत्यविद्याः यैः येषु वा तथा विद्वांसः भवन्ति च ते वेदाः ॥"

 $[\]phi$ "सर्वाः सत्यविद्याः श्रूयन्ते अनया सा श्रुतिः ॥"

by any body in his corporeal body. Because they were revealed by God Who has no bodily organs. Agni, Vayu, Aditya and Angirasa are His instruments for revealing the Vedas of Divine authorship. This must be clearly known to you. The relation between the Vedic words and their objects is also divine as He is the Home of all sciences.

It has, therefore, been proved that the Vedas or Śrutis were revealed by God through Agni, Vāyu, Ravi and Angirasa, who were men in corporeal form.

Here the author appears to have accepted the suffix used in Instrumental or Locative senses.

The Commentator Ulhana derives it from the roots Vid (to exist), Vida (to know), Vida (to think) and Vid (to obtain) as :— "आयुरस्मिन् आयुर्वेदे विद्यते — अस्ति, विद्यते — ज्ञायतेऽनेनेति, विद्यते – विद्यते — वाप्येतेऽनेन वा । आयुर्वेन विन्दति — प्राप्नोति इत्यायुर्वेदः ॥"

- (e) "तत्रायुर्वेदयति इत्यायुर्वेदः ।" (Caraka XXX. 20)
- (f) Abhinavagupta in his Natyasastra :—

 "नाट्यस्य वेदनं सत्ता लामो विचारश्च यत्र ।

 तन्नाट्यस्य वेद शब्देनोच्यते ॥" (I. 1)
- (g) Medhātithi in his commentary on Manu :—
 "विन्दत्यनन्यप्रमाणवेद्यं धर्मलक्षणमर्थमस्माविति वेदः ।"
- (h) Kapādisvāmī writes :—
 "नि:श्रेयसकराणि कर्माणि आवेदयन्ति वेदाः ।" (APB. I. 33)

Svāmī Hari Prasāda's view that the word Veda cannot be derived from the above noted four roots is wrong. The above noted citations clearly prove the derivations of this word from these four (or five) roots.

THE DATE OF THE VEDAS

and to make the

- Q. How many years have elapsed since the Vedas were revealed?
- A. One Vrnda (i.e. Arab) ninety six crores, eight lacs, fifty two thousands, nine hundreds and seventy six years (i.e. 1,96,08,52,976 years) have passed and the current year is the seventy seventh (1,96,08,52,977th year).* The equal number of years has passed in the current Kalpa since the creation.
- Q. How do you ascertain that only so many years (and not more or less) have elapsed?
- A. We ascertain it, because in the current creation (i.e. Kalpa) the seventh "Manvantara" called "Vaivasvat" is running. Six "Manvantaras" have already passed before this. These seven "Manus" (or Manvantaras) are styled as Svayambhuva, Svarocişa, Auttami, Tamasa, Raivata, Cakşuşa and Vaivasvata. The coming seven Manus are Savarni &c. All these, put together, make fourteen Manvantaras.

The duration of one Manvantara is seventy one "Caturyugis" (i.e. four Yugas). These fourteen (Manvantaras) make one day of Brahman. One thousand "Catur-yugis" are the length of a day of Brahman. The night of Brahman is of the same duration. The period of cosmos is called 'day' and the time of dissolution is termed as 'night'.

In the present day of Brahman, six Manus have elapsed. The seventh Manvantara, called the Vaivasvata is running. During this

^{*} It refers to 1933 Vikrama Era when the author wrote this work. According to Śrī Yudhişthira Mīmāṇṣaka, this calculation omits seven Sandhis, intervening each Manvantara. To get the correct total, one must add period of 'seven' Sandhis (1728000×7=) 12096000 years to above mentioned total. It would give us correct total of 1972948976 years. I also agree with him. Otherwise we shall not get Brāhma day, consisting of one thousand Caturvugas which is clearly accepted by Svāmī Dayānanda here in original. Detailed calculation is given in our notes.

(seventh Manvantara) the 28th Kali-yuga is passing on. Four thousands nine hundreds and seventy six years (4976) have already rolled by in the present Kali age. The current year is the seventy seventh (i.e. 4977) which the Aryas call the Samvat 1933 according to the Vikrama Era. Here we cite below the authority of Manu:—

- (1) "Now listen the brief (description) of the duration of a day and night of Brahman and of all the ages (of the universe) in their respective order."
- (2) "Four thousands (i.e. 4000) years (of the Devas) make the "Krta" age. Sandhyā* (the preceding twilight) consists of so many hundred years (i. e. 400) and Sandhyā-aṃśa, (the succeeding twilight) is of the same number (of years i.e. 400).
- (3) "In other three ages (i.e. Treta, Dvapara and Kali) with their Sandhyas and Sandhya-amsas (i.e. the preceding and sccceeding twilights) the thousands and the hundreds are (diminished) by deducting one in each."

THE WEST TOPING

- (1) "ब्राह्मस्य तु क्षपाहस्य यत्त्रमाणं समासतः । एककिशो युगानां तु ऋमशस्तन्तिबोधत ॥"
- (2) "चत्वार्याहु: सहस्राणि वर्षाणां तत्कृतं युगम् । तस्य तावच्छती सन्ध्या, सन्ध्यांशश्च तथाविद्य: ॥"
- * The words Sandhyā and Sandhyā-aṃsa are explained by Kullūka Bhatta here as "युगस्य पूर्वा सन्ध्या, उत्तरश्च सन्ध्यांतः ।"
 - टा. तत्प्रमाणैः शतैः सन्ध्या पूर्वा तत्रामिधीयते । सन्ध्यांशकश्च तत्तुल्यो युगस्यानन्तरो हि यः ॥ सन्ध्यासन्ध्यांशयोरन्तर्यः कालो मुनिसत्तम । युगाख्यः स तु विज्ञेयः कृतत्रेताशिक्ष्यकः ॥ (VP विष्णु पुराणे)
 - cf. दिन्यैः वर्षसहस्त्रेस्तु कृतत्रेतादिसंज्ञितम् । चतुर्युगं द्वादशिमः तद्विभागं निवोध मे ॥ (VP)
 - cf. तव्हादशसहस्त्राणि चतुर्युगमुदाहृतम् । सूर्याव्दसंख्यया द्वित्रसागरैरयुता हतैः ॥ (SS. I. 15)
 - (3) "इतरेषु ससन्ध्येषु ससन्ध्यांशेषु च त्रिषु । एकापायेन वर्तन्ते सहस्राणि शतानि च ॥"

- (4) "These four (human) ages, which we have just enumerated, make one age of the gods (Devas) consisting of twelve thousand years (12,000)."
- (5) "The sum total of one thousand (1000) ages of the Devas (i.e. 1000 Catur-Yugīs) makes one day of Brahman and His night is also of the same duration."
- (6) "Those, who understand that the holy day of Brahman, ends with the expiry of 1,000 Yugas (i.e. Catur-yugīs) of the gods and His night is also of the same length, are indeed experts in (the calculation of) days and nights."
- (7) "The above described age or Yuga of the Devas, which consists of 12,000 (divine) years, when multiplied by 71 is called here as one Manvantara.*
 - (4) ''यबेतत् परिसंख्यातमादावेव चतुर्युगम्। एतव् द्वावशसाहस्रं देवानां युगम्च्यते॥''
 - (5) "दैविकानां युगानां तु सहस्रं परिसंख्यया। बाह्यमेकमहर्ज्ञेयं तावती राविरेव च॥"
 - (6) "तद्वै युगसहस्रान्तं ब्राह्मं पुण्यमहिंबदुः । राज्ञि च तावतीमेव तेऽहोराज्ञविदो जनाः ॥"
 - cf. "इत्यं युगसहस्रेण भूतसंहारकारक:।

कल्पो ब्राह्ममहः प्रोक्तं शर्वरी तस्य ताबती ॥" (SS. I. 20)

In the Bhagvad-gītā the same thing has been explained very briefly yet lucidly in the following one verse:—

"सहस्रयुगपर्यन्तमहर्यद् ब्रह्मणो विदु:। रात्रि युगसहस्रान्तां तेऽहोरात्रविदो जनाः।" (BG. VIII 17)

(7) "प्राग् द्वादशसाहस्रमुदितं दैविकं युगम् । तदेकसप्ततिगुणं मन्वन्तरमिहोच्यते ॥"

* In the Surya-Siddhanta, the Manvantara is described in more simple words, as:—

"युगानां सप्तितः सैका मन्वन्तरिमहोच्यते ।" (I. 18)

We are further told here that after every Manvantara, there is 'jala-plava' over the earth, the duration of which is similar to the age of the Krita.

cf. "कृताब्दसंख्यस्तस्यान्ते सन्धिः प्रोक्तो जलप्सवः ॥" (SS)

- (8) "These Manvantaras are countless. The creation and the dissolution (of the world) are also (numberless). They are, as it were, sportings of the Most High (Paramesthin) who creates it again and again.* (MS. I. 68-73 and 79, 80)
 - (8) "मन्वन्तराण्यसंख्यानि सर्गः संहार एव च । कोडन्निवैतत् कुरुते परमेव्ही पुनः पुनः ॥" (MS. I. 68-73, 79-80)
- * In the above cited last verse, Manu says that the workings of God are beyond human calculations. He is eternal and His functions are also eternal and beyond human imagination.

The sportive character of God is also described in the Śarīrika Sutra, as:—

'लीलावतु लीलाकैवल्यम्।" (VDD. II. 1.33)

The cycle of creation is eternal and endless.

cf. "सूर्याचन्द्रमसी धाता यथापूर्वमकल्पयत् ।" (RV. X. 191.3)

Here the word "Yatha-purvam" deserves notice.

This calculation of the Brahman's Day and Night is very popular in Indian Astronomy.

We have already quoted verses from the Sūrya-siḍḍhānta, Manu-smṛti and Bhagavad-gītā, which clearly explain the theory. Yāska in his Nirukta (XIV. 4) refers to this calculation and explains the gradual evolution of this universe:—

"युगसहस्त्रं राविः । तौ एतौ अहोराब्रावजस्त्रं परिवर्त्तते । स कालस्तदेत-बहर्मवित ।"

> ''युगसाहस्रपर्यन्तमहृर्यद् ब्रह्मणो विदुः। राज्ञि युगसहस्रान्तां तेऽहोरात्रविदो जनाः॥"

This calculation is also found in the Mahābhārata (Śāntiparva—231) and also in the Sūrya-siḍḍhānta.

Dayananda has mentioned here names of a few Manus, which have already elapsed. The names of the succeeding Manvantaras have been omitted. They are enumerated here in full:—

- 1. Svāyambhuva, 2. Svārociṣa, 3. Auttama, 4. Tāmasa,
- 5. Raivata, 6. Cākṣuṣa, 7. Vaivasvata, 8. Sāvarṇi, 9. Dakṣa Sāvarṇi, 10. Brahma Sāvarṇi, 11. Dharma Sāvarṇi, 12. Rudra Sāvarṇi, 13. Deva Sāvarṇi, 14. Indra Sāvarṇi.

The Visnu Purona also enumerates in detail all these aspects of the creation. We have already cited a few verses from this work.

The terms e.g. the Day of Brahman and the Night of Brahman, have been coined for measuring time and they are easy to be comprehended. In this way the calculation of the age of creation and dissolution of the world and also of the Vedic revelation becomes very easy. A Manvantara is so termed as with the change of a Manvantara there is a slight (kiñcit) modification (paryavartana) in the causitive qualities of the creation (Naimittika gunas)*

Following is the system of calculation here:-

- (9) "Eka=1, Dasa=10, Sata=100, Sahasra=1000, Ayuta=10000, Lakṣa=100000, Niyuta=10.00.000, Koți=10.000.000, Arbuda=100.000.000,"

This enumeration is according to the Sūrya-Siddhanta &c.

- (11) "Thou art (O God) the Measurer of Sahasra and the Creator of Sahasra." (YV. XV. 65)
- (12) "Saharsra is verily Sarva (i.e. all Visva) and Thou art the Giver of Sarva." (SP. VII. 5.2.13)

- (9) "एकं दश शतं चैव सहस्रमयुतं तथा। लक्षंच नियुतं चैव कोटिरब्दिमेव च ॥"
- (10) ''बृत्दः खर्वो निखर्वश्च शङ्कः पद्मं च सागरः । अन्त्यं मध्यं पराध्यं च दशवृद्धभा यथान्नमात् ॥'' (Reference not traceable)
- (11) "सहस्रस्य प्रमासि सहस्रस्य प्रतिमाऽसि ॥" (YV. XV. 65)
- (12) "सर्वं वे सहस्र, सर्वस्य दाताऽसि ।।" (S.P. VII. 5.2.13)

^{*} Sri Ghasi Ram M. A., LL. B. translates the phrase "सृब्देः नैमित्तिकगुणानामपि पर्यावर्त्तनम्" as follows:---

[&]quot;Modifications occur in the external arrangement of creation." It is wholly wrong. The words 看有有事 guinių do not mean "external arrangement." "Guṇas' denote "qualities" and 'Naimittika' means pertaining to some 'nimitta' i.e. cause. Moreover in his translation he omits the word "kincit" i.e. "slight".

Here the word Sarva is the name of the whole world, as well as of the time. as God is the Measurer (Pramā) and Reckoner (Pratimā) of the universe, where Day and Night (of Brahman) are consisted of one thousand Mahā-yugas. Hence, the Mamra occurs in general sense (described above).*

The treatises on Astronomical science describe the daily rotations of time (e.g. daily movements and changes-Tithi, Naksatra and Grahas).†

* The author means to say here that the calculation of Brahman's Day and Night has its origin in the Vedic texts. The world is called Sahasra because its existence and dissolution (i.e. Brahman's Day and Brahman's Night) consist of 1000 Mahā-yugas or Catur-yugīs each.

Dayananda is original in his Vedic interpretations. No other commentator so far has given this scientific interpretation of this Mantra. He really is a R$i.

Yudhishthira Mīmāmisaka proposes a correction in the original Sanskrit text as "सहस्रम्" in place of "सर्वम्" on the basis of "Hindi version". I do not agree. Dayānanda wrote or dictated the Sanskrit text only. Hindi rendering was done by some Panditas which is often wrong and contradictory.

† Sri Ghasi Ram wrongly translates the sentence "ज्योतिष् शास्त्रे प्रतिविनचर्याऽभिहिता" as "works on astronomical sciences lay down rules for daily observances".

Here the word "carya" is derived from the root car (to move), "carya" therefore means progress or rotation. All planets and stars show daily rotations which are calculated in the works on Astronomical science.

In order to elucidate this point I cite below a few instances from Sanskrit literature showing the root \sqrt{car} , used in the sense of "to walk, move, go about, roam, or wander":

- (a) "नब्दाशङ्काहरिणिशशवो मन्दमन्दं चरन्ति।" (Ś. I. 15)
- (b) "इन्द्रियाणां हि चरताम्।" (BG. II. 67)
- (c) "तस्यां त्वं साधु नाचर: 1" (RV. I. 76)

In Astronomical works "Car" is also used as noun. This has undermentioned meanings:—

- (I) The planet Mars i.e. Mangala.
- (II) Hence Tuesday.
- (III) The seventh Karana in Astrology.

The Aryas have clearly calculated and calculate even today according to Mathematical science the divisions of time from K_5ana (i.e. 4/5th of a second) upto Kalpa and Kalpanta. This (calculation) is repeatedly pronounced daily (in the beginning of their all religious or secular undertakings) and is known (to all).

Therefore, all men must accept this firmly established doctrine (vyavastha) (regarding the date of the Vedic revelation) and should accept none else; because, the Aryas repeat (the following) formula daily:—

(13) "Om, Tat-Sat. I performed or (will) perform this (act) in the second quarter (Prahara-ardha) of the Day of Brahman, in the first quarter of the 28th Kali age of the Vaivasvata-Manvantara in such and such year, solstice, season, month and fortnight (pakṣa), on such and such day, under such and such constellation, and at such and such moment of the Sun's entrance into a Zodical sign and at such an hour."

This (formula) is a matter of daily routine (lit. known) to all the Aryas—young or old—and this tradition (lit. History or Itihasa) is prevalent everywhere in India (Aryavarta) in an identical form. Hence it is impossible for any one to set aside this firmly established doctrine (vyavastha). This (fact) therefore must be clearly understood.

The interested reader may refer to the books on Astronomy here and will come across numberless instances there: Carya also means in A stronomy:—

- (i) a course.
- (ii) a motion as in Rāhu-caryā.

In Tapaş-caryā it means a "practice".

• It will be read with interest, the detailed calculation of the Day of Brahman, given below according to Manu and the Suryasiddhanta:—

Note: -360 human years = 1 year of the Devas.

1.	Duration of Kṛtayuga	4000 (ye	ars of the Devas)
2.	Duration of Tretayuga	3000	-do-
3.	Duration of Dvapara	2000	-do-
4.	Duration of Kaliyuga	1000	-do-
	Total	10000	Divine years

The intervals between the preceding and succeeding Yugas are called $Sandhy\bar{a}$ and $Sandhy\bar{a}m\dot{s}a$. ($Sandhy\bar{a}$ is a preceding twilight and $Sandhy\bar{a}m\dot{s}a$, a succeeding twilight)

		Durati	ion
1. (a)	Sandhyā of Kṛtayuga	400	(years of the I	Devas)
(b)	Sandhyanisa of Krtayuga	400	-do-	9.51
2. (a)	Sandhyā of Tretāyuga	300	-do-
(b)	Sandhyāmsa of Tretāyuga	300	-do-	12080
3. (a)	Sandhyā of Dvāpara	200	-do-
(b)	Sandhyamisa of Dvapara	200	-do-
4. (a)	Sandhyā of Kaliyuga	100	-do-
(b)	Sandhyāṃśa of Kaliyuga	100	-do-
	Total	2000
The grand	d total would be :-	MITTON L
	Duration of 4 Yugas	10000	I, Destain
	Duration of Sandhis	2000	2. 1
	Total	12000	(years of the L	Devas)

Thus these 12000 years of all Yugas are styled as one Caturyugī or one Mahāyuga.

Following are the human years of this Caturyugi or Mahayuga:

360 human days or one human year one day of the Devas.

360 human years = one year of the Devas.

- (a) Now $12000 \times 360 = 4,320,000$ human years which make the duration of a Caturyugi or Mahayuga according to our calculation.
 - (b) 1000 such Caturyugis make one Day of Brahman.

Thus

or

 $4320000 \times 1000 = 4320000000$ human years.

(c) A Day of Brahman = 12000000 years of the Devas.

or

Day of Brahman = 4320000000 human years.

We can come to the same conclusion by the following calculation also which is more lucid and simple:—

71 Caturyugīs = 1 Manvantara.

14 Manvantaras = 1 Day of Brahman.

While calculating the duration of 14 Manvantaras, we must add 15 Sandhts of jalaplavas (one in the beginning and one at the end of the each Manvantara). Each jalaplava or Sandht is equal to a Kṛtayuga.

- (a) 1 Manvantara = 71 Caturyugas or $43200.00 \times 71 = 306, 720, 000 \text{ hyman years.}$
- (b) 14 Manvantaras=306, 720, $000 \times 14 = 4294$, 080, 000 human years.
- (c) 15 Sandhis of Manvantaras; equal to the age of Kṛtayuga i.e. $1,728,000\times15=25,920,000$ human years.

Now we sum up as follows:-

		rose/essor	Human years.
1.	Duration of 14 Manvantaras	reministration	4, 294, 080, 000
2.	Duration of 15 Sandhis	поня	25, 920, 000
3.	Total duration of Brahman's day
	or grand total		4, 320, 000, 000

Note:—One day of Brahman consists of 1000 Caturyugīs because 71×14=994. To this if we add 6 Caturyugīs, the duration of 15 Sandhis we get 1000 Caturyugīs. 15 Sandhis are equal to the duration of Caturyugīs. Manu, Dayānanda and the author of Sūrya-siddhānta accept this calculation i.e. 71×14=994+6=1000). (Contd.)

The duration of the Night of Brahman is equal to His day. Thus:—

	and the second	Human years
(a)	Brahman's Day	4, 320, 000, 000
(b) Brahman's Night		4, 320, 000, 000
	total	8, 640, 000, 000

In order to come to the date of the Vedic revelation as described above in the text by our author, we must take into consideration the following verses from the Sūryasiddhānta:—

"कल्पादस्माच्च मनवः वड् व्यतीताः ससन्धयः । वैवस्वतस्य च मनोः युगानां विधनो गतः ॥ अष्टाविशात् युगादस्मात् यातमेतत् कृतं युगम् ॥" (I. 22-23)

i.e. In this Kalpa or Day of Brahman six Manus with (their 7) Sandhis have elapsed. In the present Vaivasvata Manuantara 27 Caturyugīs have also passed. The 28th Kṛtayuga also rolled by. Rṣi Dayānanda wrote this book in the Kali age which is the 28th one in the current Manuantara.

The author of the Sūryasiddhānta, further calculates years upto the period when he wrote his work (i.e. at the end of the Kṛtayuga):—

"षण्मनूनां तु सम्पीड्य कालं तरसिविभिः सह ।
कल्पादिसन्धिना साधं वैवस्वतमनोस्तथा ॥
पुगानां विधनं यातं तथा कृतयुगं त्विवम् ।
प्रोझ्य सृष्टेस्ततः कालं पूर्वोक्तं दिन्यसंख्यया॥
सूर्यान्दसंख्यया ज्ञेया कृतस्यान्ते गता अमी ।
ख-चतुष्क-यमाद्वचिन-शर-रस्ध-निशाकराः ॥" (Suryasihddanta)

According to this calculation, at the end of the 28th Kṛtayuga in this Vaivasvata Manvantara 1,953,720,000 solar years elapsed (when the Sūryasiddhānta was written according to its author.

Thus to get the correct total of passed human years (when the work was written by our author (1933 V:E.), we must add the duration of passed 7 Sandhis (1728000 \times 7=)12096000 years to the above stated passed years 1960852976 (1960852976 + 12096000 =) 1972948976. It is exact (Contd.)

From these arguments (lit. statement) it is quite evident that the contention of European Professors Max Muller, Wilson &c that the Vedas are of human and not of divine origin and also their verdict that the Vedas were composed 2400 or 2900 or 3000 or 3100 years back, are based on delusion. Similarly, the similar versions of the Vernacular commentators of the Vedas are also erroneous.

calculation of the past years. Similarly we have to add the period of 8 future (bhogya) Sandhis (1728000×8=)13824000 to the total (given by our author) of coming years and this will give us correct total (2333227024+13824000=)2347051024. Thus:

Śuddha Bhukta-kāla = 1972948976 Śuddha Bhogya-kāla = 2347051024

Total 4320000000 = (1000 Caturyugas or a Day of Brahman or a Kalpa).

Our author in his Sanskrit text (and also in Hindhi version) clearly states that the date of the Vedas is the same as that of the creation. He does not give different dates for creation and of revelation:—

cf: जितने वर्ष अभी ऊपर गिन आये हैं उतने ही वर्ष वेदों की और जगत् की उत्पत्ति में भी हो चुके हैं।। (Rgvedādi-Bhāşya-Bhūmikā. page 29).

THE PERPETUITY OF THE VEDAS

As the Vedas are revealed (lit. produced) by God, their eternity is self-evident (svatah) because all His powers are eternal.

Here some may object that the eternity of the Vedas cannot be established as they are consisted of words and words, like a pitcher, are effects (i.e. things created or fashioned). As a pitcher is a created thing (i.e. effect) so is a word. The words being non-perpetual, the Vedas should be confessed to be so. But this cannot be accepted so, because words are two-fold (1) eternal and (2) non-eternal (i.e. effects). The relations of words and imports, existing in the knowledge of Supreme Self must (naturally) be eternal; but those words which dwell in ours (i.e. in human knowledge) are effects (i.e. non-eternal). As all His powers must be eternal, so His knowledge and acts are eternal, inherently innate and beginningless. As the Vedas are knowledge of such a Being, their non-eternity is not tenable (i.e. they cannot be called effects or non-eternal like a pitcher).

- Q. How can you accept eternity of the Vedas, as there were no books in existence for (the acts of) learning and teaching (at the time) when this entire universe stood dissolved and disintegrated in its original (lit. causal) form and when all gross effects were non-existent?
- A. This (objection) is possible with respect to the things e.g. books, paper, ink & c and also with respect to our (human) actions only but not in other respects (i.e. in case of Divine acts and powers). We observe the Vedas to be eternal as they are a part of God's knowledge.*

Moreover, non-eternity of the Vedas cannot be established, simply on the ground that all books (employed) in learning and teaching are non-eternal, as they perpetually exist as a part of

^{*} Cf. (a) "तस्यैवैतस्य महतो मूतस्य निःश्वसितमेवैतद् यदुःवेदो यजुर्वेदः सामवेदोऽयर्वणः ॥"

⁽b) "बस्मिन्दः सामयज्9िषः"प्रतिष्ठिता रथनामाविवाराः ।" (YV. XXXIV. 5)

God's knowledge. The relations of words, letters and meanings in the Vedas in this Kalpa are the same as they were in the past and they will remain similar in future also; because God's knowledge is eternal and infallible. Hence it is said in the Rgveda:—

(1) "The Creator made the Sun and the Moon just in the same manner as He had created them before." (RV. X.190.3)

This is to say: here the words 'the Sun and the Moon (in the verse) are synecdoche (upalaksana) for the whole class.* The meaning is that the plan of the creation of the Sun and the Moon is the same in the present Kalpa as it was in God's knowledge in the previous Kalpa. Because God's knowledge is unchangable and (hence) is not liable to increase or decrease. The same fact must be admitted in respect of the Vedas as they are consisted of His knowledge.

Now we cite a few quotations from the Grammatical treatise etc. as evidence to prove the eternity of the Vedas. Sage Patañjali, the author of the Mahābhāṣya, says:—

(2) "Words are eternal. Eternal words must consist of perpetual (Kūṭasṭha) and changelessly immoveable letters, which are not liable to elision (apāya), augmentation and substitution (upajanavikāras)." (MB. 1)

(SK. on P. II. 4.80)

(2) "नित्याः शब्दाः । नित्येषु शब्देषु कूटस्थैरविचालिभिर्वर्णैः भवितव्यम् , सनपायोपजनविकारिभिः ।। इति ।।" $(MB,\ I)$

Here Upajana means Agama described as "मित्रवहागम:". Vikara indicates change or substitution. "शतुबदादेश: ।"

^{(1) &}quot;सूर्याचन्द्रमसौ धाता यथापूर्वमकल्पयत् ॥" (R.V. X. 190.3)

^{*} Upalak sana means: "स्वप्रतिपादकत्वे सति स्वेतरप्रतिपादकत्वम् ॥" i.e. implying something that has not been expressed actually; Implication of something in addition or any similar object where only one is mentioned. Synecdoche of a part for the whole, of an individual for the species or of a quality for that where the quality exists. "मन्त्रप्रहणं ब्राह्मणस्याप्युपलक्षणम् ॥"

This statement frequently occurs in the Mahābhāşya from the first Ahnika onwards. Moreover:—

(3) "The word or sound (Śabda) is that which is grasped through the ear, understood by the intellect, made manifest by being pronounced and of which free space or vacuity is the substratum."

(MB. I)

This (observation) occurs in the commentary on the aphorism, "बहुज्". It means that all words, whether Vaidika (found in the Vedas) or Laukika (used in the world by mankind) are eternal, because these words are consisted of letters which are perpetual, immovable and are not subject to elisions, augmentation or variation. Words are imperishable as there is no Apaya (disappearance) or Lopa (i.e. elision) or augmentation (Upajana) or Vikara (substitution).

- Q. How can be it justified when there are (definite) rules or injunctions for Apāya (elision) &c in the Gaṇapāṭha, Aṣṭāḍhyāyī and the Mahābhāṣya?
- A. To this objection, retorts the author of the Mahabhasya (as follows):—
- (4) "Complete words are substituted by complete words; according to Pāṇini, the son of Dākṣī. The eternalness of words can never be established if the change takes place in one portion (Eka-deśa) only." (MB.)
 - (3) ''श्रोत्रोपलव्धिः, बुद्धिनिर्प्राह्यः, प्रयोगेनामिज्वलितः आकाशदेशः शब्दः ।'' (MB. I)

The word Śabda is derived from the root, $\sqrt{\dot{s}}$ abd (X.U. शब्दायित-ते) to speak, to sound or make noise with suffix Ghañ. Śabda means sound, the object of the sense of hearing and property of Akaśa,

- cf. (a) "अपात्मनः शब्दगुणं गुणज्ञः पदं विमानेन विगाहमानः ।" (R. XIII. 1)
 - (b) "आकाशस्य तु विज्ञेय: शब्दो वैशेषिको गुण: ।" (N.S.M)
 - (c) "श्रुतिविषयगुणा या स्थिता व्याप्य विश्वम् ।" (S. I. 1)

The Logicians describe "Śabda" as "आप्तोपदेश: शब्द:" (ND)

(4) ''सर्वे सर्वपदादेशा दाक्षीपुत्रस्य पाणिनेः । एकदेशविकारे तु नित्यत्वं नोपपदाते ॥'' (MB) That is to say: complete sets (of letters) are replaced by other complete sets i.e. specific groups are substituted for specific groups. For instance "वैदपारग: + अभवत्"। this group (of letters) is used in place of another group "वैदपार। गम्। इ। सू। सू। शप्। तिप्"।*

(5) The speech resides in one (particular) letter (which is being pronounced) at a time. (MB. 1)

To elucidate clearly this point we may cite below a few quotations from some authentic works:—

- (a) "अय शब्दानुशासनम् । … अय गौरित्यत्र कः शब्दः ? कि यत्तत् सास्ना-साङ्गूलककुदखुरविषाण्यर्थरूपं सः शब्दः ? नेत्याह । द्रव्यं नाम तत्, … कस्तिह् शब्दः ? येनोच्चारितेन सास्नालाङ्गूलककुदखुरविषाणिनां सम्प्रत्ययो प्रवित स शब्दः । अथवा प्रतीत-पदार्थको लोके ब्वनिः शब्द इत्युच्यते । तद् यया—शब्दं कुरु, मा शब्दं कार्षीः, शब्दकार्ययं माणवक इति ध्वनि कुर्वन्नेवमुच्यते । तस्मात् ध्वनिः शब्दः ॥" (MB. I. 1.1)
 - (b) "प्रधानमूतस्फोटरूपध्यञ्जकस्य शब्दस्य ध्वनिरिति व्यवहारः।" (KP. 1)
- (c) स च ध्वन्यात्मकः । शब्दो नित्यः ब्रह्मस्वरूपः सकल्रश्नत्येयप्रत्यायनक्षमः अङ्गी-कियते । तत् व्यञ्जकः वर्णात्मकः शब्दः । (Sarabodhinī)

^{*} According to Panini's Grammer, the sentence "वेदपारगः अभवत्" । is accomplished in the following manner :—

[&]quot;पार + गम्" अत्र 'अन्तात्यन्ताध्वदूरपारसर्वानन्तेषु इ:" (P. III. 2.48) इत्यनेन "इ:"। "दिस्वादभस्यापि टे: लोपः"।

[&]quot;Abhavat" is from the root √Bhū with suffix शव् and तिप्. The शव् is from "कत्तंरि शव्" (P. III. 1. 68)

^{(5) &}quot;एकंकवर्णवित्तनी वाक्।" (MB)

The act of utterence terminates with the pronunciation of a particular letter. Hence the action of speech and not the word (or sound) is non-eternal.

- Q. The word comes into existence and also perishes, like the action of speech. i.e. When pronounced, it comes into existence and if not pronounced, it does not exist. How can it be, then, eternal?
- A. A word, like space (Ākāšā) pre-exists but in the absence of means, it remains unmanifested. But it becomes manifest by the action of speech and breath (Prāṇā i.e. Śvāsā or vital airs). For instance, in the word "gauḥ" when the action of speech is on 'g', it does not exist on 'au' and while it is on 'au' it has nothing to do with "visargas." Thus the action of speech and the act of pronunciation only have elision and augmentation and not the word itself which is indivisible, uniform and available every where. Neither the pronunciation nor the hearing (of a word) is possible if there are no acts of speech and air. Consequently the words are eternal like Space or Aether (Ākāšā). Thus according to Grammatical science, all words are eternal and what to speak of the Vedic words!

Similarly the sage Jaimini has also established the perpetuity of words. (He says):—

(6) "It (word) is verily eternal as it is manifested for the sake of others." (MD. I. 1.18)

This aphorism means as follows:—

Here the word "verily (tu)" is used to remove all doubts regarding the non-eternalness of words. Being imperishable, the word is eternal; because, its manifestation is for the sake of others. The purpose of manifestation or pronunciation is to communicate information to another. Thus the word is not non-eternal. Otherwise, the perception $(Abhij\bar{n}a)$ that "such and such was the import or cannotation of the word" is not possible by means of a perishable word.* This is tenable only if words are admitted

^{(6) &}quot;नित्यस्तु स्यात् दर्शनस्य परार्थत्वात् ॥" (MD. I. 1.18)

Here the word "Abhijñā" means "Abhijñāna" or "Prati-abhijñā." It indicates 'recognition'. "Abhijñāna' is a combination of "Anubhava" of direct perception and of "Smṛti" or recollection, a sort of direct perception, assisted by memory; as when we say, "This is the same man I saw yesterday."

to be eternal. (In that case) both, the signifier (i.e. the word) and the thing signified are existent. That is why many speakers are able to pronounce simultaneously the same word "COW" at different places and are also able to utter it at different times.

Thus, Jaimini has advanced a number of arguments in support of (the theory of) eternalness of words.

Moreover, the sage Kaṇāda, the author of the "Vaiśeṣika" aphorism also says:—

(7) "The Vedas are authentic because they are His word."
(VD. I. 1.3)

This is to say that all men should admit the authority of the four Vedas because they enjoin the performances of Dharma as duty and also because they are the word of God and thus eternal.

Similarly, the sage Gautama also says in his Nyayasastra:

(8) "Its authenticity is like that of the Mantras and Ayurveda (i.e. Science of Medicine) because the credibillity of the Aptas (i.e. trustworthy persons) is (quite natural)." (ND. II. 1.68)

(सोऽयं यो दृष्टो नर:); "Anubhava" or direct perception leading to the identification expressed by "Ayam" and memory leading to the past reference expressed by "Sah."

- cf. "अभिज्ञावचने लुट्।" (P. III. 2.112) "स्मृतिबोधिन्युपपदे मूतानद्यतने लृट्। स्मरिस कृष्ण, गोकुले वत्स्यामः॥" (Siddhanta-kaumudi)
- (7) "तद् वचनादाम्नायस्य प्रामाण्यम् ॥" (VD. I. 1.3)
- (8) "मन्त्रायुर्वेदप्रामाण्यवच्च तत्प्रामाण्यम् । आप्तप्रामाण्यात् ॥" (ND. II. 1.68)

This aphorism has been explained by Vatsyayana in his commentary as follows:—

"कि पुनरायुर्वेदस्य प्रामाण्यम् । यत्तदायुर्वेदेनोपि वश्यते । "इवं कृत्वा इष्टमिधगच्छिति, इवं वर्जियत्वाऽनिष्टं जहाति" इति तस्यानुष्ठीयमानस्य तथामायः —सत्यार्थता —अविषयंयः, मन्त्रपदानां च विषभूताशनिप्रतिषेष्ठार्थानां प्रयोगेऽर्थस्य तथामावः । एतत् —प्रामाण्यम् । कि कृतमेतत् ? आप्तप्रामाण्यकृतम् । कि पुनराप्तानां प्रामाण्यम् ? साक्षात्कृतधर्मता, भूतवया, वषाभूतार्यचिरव्यापयिषेति । आप्ताः खलु साक्षात्कृतधर्माणः ।।" (Contd.)

The significance is that all men should admit the authenticity of these Vedas, which are eternal and are "the Word of God." Why so? Because all the credible $(\bar{A}ptas)$, great Yogins, Brahman &c who were righteous, free from all defects such as deception and treachery, merciful, preceptors of truth, masters of learning (lit. gone across) have admitted the authenticity of the Vedas in the same manner as that of the Mantras and the $\bar{A}yurveda$.*

Sudarsana further explains it :-

"तत्—तस्य शब्दस्य-वेदवाक्यस्य प्रामाण्यं सिद्धम्—आत्तप्रामाण्यात् = वाक्योपदेशका-नामाप्तानां प्रामाण्यात् = मन्त्रायुर्वेदप्रामाण्यवदिति सुद्रान्वयः ॥"

The "Anumāna-Prakriyā" is like this :-

'वेदवारवं प्रमाणम् (प्रतिज्ञा), आप्तप्रामाण्यात् (हेतुः), मन्त्रायुर्वेदवारववत् (बृद्दान्तः)॥'

Dayānanda accepts the explanation given by Vātsyāyana and has clarified this Sūtra accordingly. Vācaspati Miśra advances another reason in support of this theory:—

"When we accept the sayings of the worldly (Aptas) credible persons as authoritative, there is no reason why the Words of God, Who is the ultimate source of knowledge should not be taken as credible."

This aphorism can independently be explained as under:-

"तत्—तस्य वेदस्य (निखिलस्येति भावः) प्रामाण्यं सिद्धम् । किमिव ? मन्त्रायुर्वेद-बत् । मन्त्रेषु (वेदेषु) प्रतिपादितो य आयुर्वेदः तद्-विदिति । तत्र हेतुस्तु-आप्तप्रामाण्यात् = आप्तैः प्रमाणत्वेन स्वाकृतत्वात् ॥"

This is to say that the authoritativeness of the Vedas as a whole is established like the Ayurveda, which has been expounded in some Mantras. Here the reason is that all trustworthy people accept the authority of the Vedas.

* Here the word "Mantra", according to Dayananda means 'Vicara' and not Mantras (spells and charms) used against Bhūtas and Fretas as accepted by Vātsyāyana in the previous quotation. Hence the author says:—

"मन्त्राणां = विचाराणाम्।"

But Vātsyāyana in his commentary upon this aphorism takes the word Mantra in the sense of a charm, spell, or incantation as in 'सोऽहमस्मि (Contd.)

Just as one considers Mantras. revealing factual principles of material science, to be true and authoritative, when their truth is (experimentally) established; and just as one on finding that the use of medicines, prescribed in one particular part of the Ayurveda, removes disease, comes to have faith on the similar part of the same, similarly on ascertaining (the truth of) a proposition stated in one part of the Vedas by direct perception (Pratyakşa) one ought to have faith (Prāmānyam) in the contents of the remaining portions of the Vedas which describe subjects beyond (the range of) Direct Cognition. The sage Vātsyāyana has also stated to this effect in his commentary on this aphorism. He says:—

मन्त्रसिदः" (DK. 54) and "अचिन्त्यो हि मणिमन्त्रोषधीनां प्रभावः ॥" Hence Vatsyayana says: "मन्त्रपदानां च विषम् ताशनिप्रतिषेधार्थानां प्रयोगे" (ND. II. 1.68)

The word Mantra is from the root \(/Mantr (10. A.)\) to consult, deliberate, ponder over, hold consultation or take counsel with suffix "ac". It is used in the following meanings:—

- (I) A Vedic hymn. It is of 3 types:— it is called Rc if metrical and intended to be loudly recited; Yajur— if in prose, muttered in a low tone and Sāman—if being metrical, it is intended for singing (गीतिषु सामाख्या)।
- (II) A Vedic text including Samhita.
- (III) A charm or spell.
- (IV) Consultation, deliberation, counsel, advice, resolution, plan.
 - cf. (a) 'तस्य संवृत्तमन्त्रस्य 1' (R. I. 20)
 - (b) "मन्त्र: प्रतिदिनं तस्य बम्नव सह मन्त्रिभ: ।।" (R. XVII. 50)
 - (c) See also Pañcatantra. (2.182)
 - (d) Manu-Smṛti (VII. 58).
- (V) Secret plan or consultation, a secret.
- (VI) Policy, statesmanship.

The meaning taken by Dayananda here falls in the fourth, fifth or sixth categories. We must note here the Vedic Text also:—

"समानो मन्त्रः समितिः समानी ।" (AV) otc.

(9) "This inference (Anumana) is (drawn) from the identity of Seers and expositors. (That is to say that) the same trustworthy persons, who are Seers and expositors of the Vedas, are also the Seers and expositors of the Ayurveda, etc. Thus it is inferred that the Vedas are as much authentic as the Medical Science (Ayurveda). Hence it has been argued that the words of the Vedas are of eternal authority; because they are accepted to be such by the trustworthy persons". (ND. II. 1.68)

The implied sense (of this passage) is that as the word of a creditable person is authoritative, so the Vedas should also be accepted as authentic; because they are also the Words of the Most perfectly trustworthy God and their authoritativeness has been admitted by all trustworthy persons. Hence briefly speaking, eternalness of the Vedas is (rightly) proved (by the fact that) they are God's knowledge.

Here, the sage Patanjali also refers to this topic in his Yogasastra:-

(10) "He is the Preceptor of the ancients also as He is not determined by time." (YD. I. 1.26)

God is the teacher of all—of the ancients who were born in the heginning of creation e. g. Agni, Vayu, Āditya, Angiras, Brahma etc.—of the moderns, like ourselves—and of the persons, who are yet to be born in future. (God is called Guru) because he proclaims (gṛṇāti) or instructs the truthful objects hy means of the Vedas.* He is eternal for all times, because Here our author takes this word in the first sense.

^{(10) &}quot;स पूर्वेषामिप गुरू: कालेवानवच्छेवात् ।" (YD. I. 1. 26)

^{*} God is called Guru, the Preceptor. The word Guru is derived from the root \sqrt{GR} (9. P.) to announce, speak, utter, proclaim. cf: (R. X. 63). "Gṛṇati iti Guruḥ". This also means to invoke as in 'नामापि नाम गुणताममृतत्वाय कल्पताम्'। (MVC. VII. 15)

It is also used in the sense "to praise or extol" as "केचिद् मीता: प्राञ्जलयो गुणन्ति"। (BG. XI. 21) and also see Bhaṭṭikāvya. (VIII. 77)

He is not affected by the process of time, (Kala-gater-apracarat). God is never touched by the afflictions of ignorance and sinful acts or their impressions (vasanas). In Him, there is absolutely the highest eternal and innate knowledge. The Vedas, being His words, are eternal and full of truth.

Similarly in the fifth Chapter of the Sārikhya-Śāstra, Acarya Kapila says:—

(11) "(The Vedas) having been revealed by His own power, have their self—authoritative character." (SD. V. 51)

This means that the self-authoritative and eternal character of the Vedas must be accepted as they have been brought to light by inseparably supreme power of God.

The word "Guru" is used in the following meanings:—

(a) Father, न केवलं तद् गुरूरेकपाधिव: ।

क्षितावमूरेकधनुर्धरोऽपि सः। (R. III. 31; 48; IV. 1; VIII. 29)

- (b) Forefather or ancestor. (URC. V. 28)
- (c) Any venerable person, an elderly man or relative.
 cf. ''शुश्रूषस्व गुरून्' (S. IV)
 ''गुरूनहत्वा हि महानुभावान्'' (BG. II)
- (d) A teacher or preceptor, particularly a religious teacher, spiritual preceptor. cf. "तौ गुरू: गुरूपरनी च श्रीत्या प्रतिननन्दतु: ।" (R. I. 57)
- (e) Technically, a "Guru" is one, who performs the purificatory ceremonies over a boy and instructs him in the Vedas:—

"स गुरू: य. क्रिया: कृत्वा वेदमस्मै प्रयच्छति ।" (YS. I. 34)

- (f) A lord, head ruler :—
 ''वर्णाश्रमाणां गुरवे स वर्णी।'' (R. V. 19)
 ''गुरू: नृपाणां गुरवे निवेद्य।'' (R. II. 68)
- (g) Name of Vrhaspati.
- (h) The planet Jupitor.
- (i) The lunar asterism called Puşya.
- (i) Name of Drong or of Prabhakara. (MD.)
- (k) The Supreme Spirit.
- (11) 'निजशक्त्यभिध्यक्तेः स्वतः प्रामाण्यम् ।'' (SD. V. 51)

On this subject, the sage Kṛṣṇadvaipāyana Vyāsa also says in his Vedānta śāstra: —

(12) "He is the Spring (source) of all Sastras (Vedas)." (V.D.D. I. 1.3)

The import of this (aphorism) is that Brahman is the original cause of the Rg and the other Vedas, which are the magnified (Upanynhita) repository of numberless sciences, and illuminate all objects like a lamp and thus He possesses (the title of) Omniscient. It is impossible to attribute authorship of such Śāstras as the Rg and the other Vedas, which are the home of entire universal knowledge (Sarvojña-guṇa-anvitasya) to some one else than the Omniscient God. It is very well known in the world that the particular person, who expounds in detail a particular science knows much more than what he writes (in his treatise) as Pāṇini in (the realm of) grammatical science. Ācārya Śaṅkara while explaining this aphorism has (clearly) stated:—

(13) "It is only to explain partly what he (the author) knows. He knows much more than that. This (point) is so well established in the world that it needs no (further) clarification." (VDD)

Thus it is concluded that the $S\overline{a}$ stra, (attributed) to Omniscient God must be eternal and must contain knowledge of all and every thing.

Moreover, in the same chapter (of the $Ved\overline{a}nta$) there is another aphorism:—

(14) "For this very reason (the Vedas) are eternal." (VDD. 1.3.29)

This is to say that all men must believe the established fact, that the Vedas are self-authoritative and repositories of all sciences as they have been proclaimed by God and have also the eternal character (nitya-dharma). They (the Vedas) are eternal as they remain changeless and true through all the ages. No other (external) evidence is admissible (svikriyate) to prove the authoritativeness of the Vedas. Other proofs are corroborative evidence (saksi). Like the Sun, the Vedas carry their own authority (with them). As the Sun, being Self-illuminated, illumines all objects in the world – both great and small—the mountains as well as the motes (trasarenu); similarly the Vedas being illuminated by themselves, cast their light on all sciences.

^{(12) &#}x27;शास्त्रयोनित्वात ।" (VDD. I. 1.3)

^{(14) &}quot;अत एव च नित्यत्वम् ।" (VDD. I. 3.29)

Hence, to prove His own existence, as it were, and also to establish the fact that the Vedas were revealed by Him, God reveals (the undermentioned Mantra as) authority:—

(15) "The Self-Born, Omnipresent (Paribhū) God overspreads all. He is entirely a Spirit with no corporeal form (śukram-akāyam) and (thus) woundless, tendenless and muscleless, Pure and Sinless. He is Omniscient (kavi), Inward Controller of all (Manīṣī), and the Ruler of all. He has from all eternity been teaching the true knowledge of things (through the revelation of the Vedas.)"

(YV. xxxx. 8)

The purport of the stanza is :-

God, as explained above, is omnipresent and pervades all things on all sides (paryagat = paritah) i.e. all sides, agat i.e. pervades). There is not a single atom wherein He does not exist. That Supreme Spirit (Brahman) is all energy $(sukra = virya)^*$ by which this whole universe is created and it

This word can be derived from the root $\sqrt{Suc+rak}$ (नि॰ क्त्वम्). It has the following meaning:

- (a) Bright, radiant, shining. cf.: शुक्रपेशसम्। (Rg. VIII. 6.8) Durgacarya says here, "शुक्रपेशसम्, शुक्ररूपाम्।"
- (b) White, pure.
- (c) The planet Venus; cf: "Sukra-asta."
- (d) Name of the preceptor of Asuras.
- (e) Name of Agni.
- (f) Name of a plant called Citraka.
- (g) Semen, Virile, cf:

"पुमान् पुंसोऽधिके शुक्ते। स्त्रो भवत्यधिके स्त्रियाः।" (Manu)

Our author takes this word here in the sense of "vīrya' i.e. semen and this here means 'God's creative energy'.

^{} The word Śukra is explained by Yāska in the Nirukta (VIII. 12) as शुक्रं शोचते: — ज्वलिकर्मण: । In the Nighanțu it is included in the list of words denoting Water. (I. 12) possesses eternal and mighty potency. He is free from the ties of the threefold body (kaya), the gross, the subtle and the causal. Even an atom (paramanu) cannot penetrate Him (lit. make hole in Him = chidram kartum). Thus being impregnable He is woundless (abranam), He is free from all bounds of arteries or viens (asnaviram), hence boundless and unveiled. He is untouched by all defects e.g. ignorance (suddham). Sins cannot reach Him and His actions are never sinful (apapa-viddham). He is Omniscient $(Kavi)^$. He

(Commentary of Skanda on Nirukta)

Dayānanda has interpreted this word in the sense of "One who knows every thing i.e. Omniscient." This meaning is clearly accepted by Skandasvāmin in his previous quotation.

In the Vedic literature God is often described as Kavi i.e. the Poet and the Vedas as His immortal poems. cf:

- (a) "अन्ति सन्तं न जहाति अन्ति सन्तं न मुञ्चिति । पश्य देवस्य काव्यं न समार न जीयंते ॥" (AV, X. 8.32)
- (b) "अग्निहोंता कवि: ऋतु: ।" (RV. I. 1. 5)
- (c) "कवि पुराणमनुशासितारम्।" (BG. VIII. 9)

See Manu Smṛti (II. 4) also.

Manīṣī: The Inward Controller or the Knower of all minds. सनस: +ईषा (according to शकन्दवाहिषु पररूपं वाज्यम् ॥ तज्व टे: । (MB) and the termination "Ini" ordained by (P. V. 2. 116) or √मनु (अववोधने) +ईषन् (U. IV. 26) or "ईष् (गतौ) +टाप् = ईषा; मनस: ईषा + इति" ॥ (P. III. 3. 103; (Contd.)

^{*} Kavi: It is here an epithet of God. कवि: √कु (शब्दे)+इ, (U. IV. 139) or √कव् (गत्यथें)+इण् किव or √कमु (पादिवक्षेपे)+इण्=किव। knows as a pure witness (what transpires in the) minds of all (created beings) ($Man\bar{\imath}\bar{\imath}i$). He is Over Lord of all i.e. Ruler of all ($Paribh\bar{u}$). He is Self-Existent and is without the three causes e.g. the instrumental, the material and the general ($Svayambh\bar{u}$). He is the Father of all – but of Him, the other generator there is none. By His own might He is ever present. God, the Supreme Self as described above is all Existence (Sat) all Consciousness (Cit) and all Bliss ($\bar{A}nanda$). He has been teaching the true knowledge of things to all His subjects ($sam\bar{a}$ - $praj\bar{a}$) through the revelation of the Vedas, in the beginning of creation. Whenever He creates the world, the gracious God reveals (lit. instructs) the Vedas, which contain all sciences for the benefit of all the created beings (prajabhyah).
Here we cite below a few lines from the Nirukta:—

Hence, every body should admit that the Vedas are eternal. The Vedas are His knowledge. God's knowledge is always unchanged and uniform.

As it has been decided on the scriptural evidence that the Vedas are eternal; so is true on reason also. For instance, 'something' cannot come out of 'nothing' and 'nothing' cannot produce 'something'. That thing alone which exists (at present) will remain in future. According to this maxim, the eternalness of the Vedas must be admitted. Because, a thing (i.e. a tree) which has no root, can never have branches. (To cherish contrary view, would be) like discerning the marriage of a sterile woman's son. If she has a son, she cannot be sterile. If she has no son, none can see his marriage. Similar view is also applicable here. If God does not possess eternal knowledge, how can He reveal knowledge to other? If God does not impart knowledge (to mankind) no one would be able to attain knowledge and perception (darsanam). For, nothing can sprout, if it has no root. Nothing is seen in this world, which has come into existence without a cause. What we state here is (based upon) the actual and direct (Sākṣāt-anubhava) experience of all men. We retain impression of that thing alone which is and also.

"मनीषिणः सन्ति गृहेषु देवताः ।" (KS. V)

Λr

"माननीयो मनीषिणाम्।" (R. I)

In the Vedic literature, it also indicates "a singer or praiser."

⁽Contd. from p. 51)

IV. 1.4). One who controls mind. The word Gati means 'ज्ञानं गमनं प्राप्तिश्चेति'. Hence, "the Knower of minds."

cf.: ''येनकर्माण्यपसो मनीषिणः।' (YV.)

related to our direct cognition (Pratyakṣa-anubhava) and our memory and knowledge are due to these impressions. This alone causes (in us) inclination and aversion (to a thing). It cannot be otherwise. For instance, one who studies Sanskrit, he alone gets impression of this language and not of other and one who reads the Modern Indian language, retains impression of that language only and of no other. In this way, no one would have been able to acquire experience in any branch of knowledge, if God had not imparted instructions and teachings (to mankind) in the beginning of creation. In the absence of such experience, there can be no impression (Samskāra) and without impression, there can be no rememberance and without rememberance, there can be no knowledge or even the semblance of it.

- Q. But how is it so? Men have natural inclination towards actions. In their (natural) activities, they experience pleasure and pain. During the course of time gradually they will develop (their stock of) knowledge (vidyā-vṛddhi). Then why should we accept that the Vedas were revealed by God?
- Here we say. This has been refuted while discussing the origin of the Vedas. It has been decided there that even now no one can achieve knowledge or can develop it without getting instructions from others. Similarly there can be no progress in learning and knowledge if man does not recieve instructions from God in the form of the Vedas as already illustrated by (the example) of a child, kept (in forest) without instruction and (also by the example of) a forest-dweller. (It has been shown there) that such a child or the forester could neither achieve knowledge nor learn the use of human speach without instruction—then leave the question of acquiring knowledge (through experience). Hence, the knowledge contained in the Vedas which has come down to us from God is certainly eternal like all His attributes. The epithets, the attributes and the actions of an eternal substance must be eternal by themselves as their substratum itself is eternal. The name, the attributes and the actions have no independent existence: they need a seat or a substratum as they depend on some thing else (i.e. substratum). They are non-eternal, if their substratum is non-eternal. The eternal substance has no production or dissolution. Production signifies a specific combination of separate elements. Dissolution means separation of the caused products (into their component parts). It is (only) a negation of combination (Sanghata-abhava). Dissolution is (the state of) imperception. God being changeless and uniform has not even a touch of combination or separation (Samyoga-viyoga).

Here we cite an aphorism from the sage Kanada as an authority (in support of this proposition):

(16) "The Eternal is that which Exists (Sat) and is uncaused (Akarana-vat)." (VD. IV.4.1)

This means that an effect which has cause and exists is non-eternal as it did not exist before its production. The substance which is not an effect of (a cause) but always exists as cause of others is however called eternal. Whatever is caused by combination, postulates (the exsistence of) an agent or producer. If the producer is an effect of combination, he also has its producer and so on "Ad infinitum." That, which itself is the result of combination, can possess no power of combining atoms in Prakrti, as these atoms are subtler than itself. The subtler thing (i.e. atoms) is the Atmā (i.e. pervader) of the grosser one, because the subtler can penetrate into the grosser thing as fire penetrates into iron. As fire because of its subtlety penetrates into hard and gross iron and separates its component parts from one another, similarly the water on account of its subtler character having entered into (gross) earth and its particles can combine them into a ball or disjoin them from one another. But these conjunctions and disjunctions cannot touch God who is All-Pervading. Consequently He has power to bring about conjunction and disjunction (i.e. creation and dissolution) according to the Law. This cannot be otherwise. As we, being within the range of (this Law of) conjunction and disjunction are powerless to combine or separate atoms in Prakrti; so would have been (the case) with God, if He also had been (within that sphere). He, from whom all combinations and separations proceed, is not under their control. Because He is the ultimate original cause of all conjunctions and disjunctions. The commencement of combination and dissolution is impossible without the Ultimate (First) cause.

As the Vedas have been revealed by and always exist in the knowledge of God, Who is the Ultimate (original First) cause of all conjunctions and disjunctions, Who is changeless by character, Who is unborn, without beginning and eternal and Who has perpetual power, their truthfulness of knowledge and eternity are established.

caused as a set into their component parts. It is you'll be the filler below or straightful.

The Vedas deal with the four (main) types of the subject matter e.g. (1) Vijñāna* (i.e. realisation of knowledge), (2) Karma (i.e. action in general), (3) Upāsanā (i.e. communion with God) and (4) Jñāna (i.e. knowledge). Here, the first topic viz Vijñāna is the most imperative of all. It means the direct perception or realisation of all things—from God down to a—(blade of) grass. Here, also the realisation of God occupies the foremost rank as He is the primary theme of all the Vedas because God is the chief most and the highest of all the entities. We cite here the following pieces of evidence:

(1) "I tell thee briefly (O Naciketas) that "OM" is the only word, which all the Vedas repeatedly proclaim, for (whose attainment)

'परमेश्वरादारभ्य तृणपर्यन्तपदार्थेषु बोधान्वयात ।"

According to this statement $Vij\bar{n}\bar{a}na$ means "realisation of knowledge." The word $Vij\bar{n}\bar{a}na$ is explained by Apte in the following manner:

- (I) Knowledge, wisdom, intelligence (PT. I. 24 and V. 3) cf.: "Vijnāna + Maya-Koşa."
 - (II) Discrimination.
 - (III) Skill, Proficiency, (Prayoga-Vijnana). (S. I. 2)
 - (IV) Worldly knowledge or knowledge derived from worldly experience (opposed to Jñāna which is knowledge of Brahman; "ज्ञानं चेदं सविज्ञानिमह बक्ष्याम्यशेषतः"। (BG. VII. 2, 3. 41). The whole Seventh Chapter of Gitā explains this.

But our author takes us to the stage which is the ultimate goal of human knowledge i.e. the knowledge of the Supreme Soul.

(1) ''सर्वे वेदा यत्पदमामनित्त, तपांसि सर्वाणि च यद् वदन्ति । यदिच्छन्तो ब्रह्मचर्यं चरन्ति तत्ते पदं संग्रहेण ब्रवोम्पोमित्येत् ।'' (KTU. II. 15)

^{*} The word Vijñāna has been translated by some scholars as, "Philosophy or Metaphysics" (Ghasi Ram). But it is wrong. Dayānada himself explains it as:

all peanances are observed and desirous of what they lead a life of celibacy (Brahmacarya)." (KTU. II.15)

- (2) "The sacred syllable OM denotes Him." (YD. I. 1. 27)
- (3) "OM is (the name of) Omnipresent God." (YV. XXXX. 17)
- (4) "OM is (the designation of) Brahman." (TA. VII. 8)
- (5) "(There are two types of knowledge (Vid yā). One is Aparā i.e. the Rgveda, the Yajurveda, the Sāmadeva, the Atharvaveda, Śikṣā (Phonetics), Kalpa (i.e. Ritual science), Grammer, Etymology, Metrics and Astronomy.

Now the $Par\bar{a}$ is that by which that Imperishable ($Ak \bar{s} ara$) is apprehended.

Men of resolute wisdom discern Him; who is invisible, incapable of being grasped or comprehended, having no family or caste (Agotram. Avarnam), without organs of sight and hearing, without hands and feet, eternal, all pervading, omnipresent, the most subtle, immutable and the origin of all beings."

(MUU. I. 5. 6)

All these citations mean that—"O Naciketas, (Sarve Vedas) the highest seat or stage which is called Final Emancipation (Mokşa) to be obtained by the realisation of the Supreme Soul, is OM (i.e. communion with God). It is all bliss and free from all pains. Pranava i.e. the syllable OM denotes Him and God is its expressed significance (Vācya). OM is the name of God. All the Vedas have, Brahman—the Most High (Mukhya Pratipādya) as their chief topic. The word \overline{A} manati is from the root \sqrt{M} na (to practise) with prefix 'A'. (Tapānsi etc.) All austerities and righteous deeds pertain to His realisation. (Yat Icchantah). Here the word "Brahmacarya" implies (Upalakṣaṇa) all the four stages of human life e.g. the life of a religious student as well as those of a house-holder, an ascetic and a teacher who has renounced the world. The object of all these practices is the attainment of Brahman.

The learned, desire to have an access to Him by concentrating (their mind) upon Him and variously proclaim (His glory). I. Yama, O Naciketas, tell thee briefly that seat is this Brahman.

There are two kinds of Vidya (i.e. knowledge) in the Vedas-"Apara and Para". That Vidya or knowledge by which we know precisely all (material) things—from earth and a blade of grass to Prakṛti, and understand their right use, is called Aparā and that by which one knows Brahman, Who is Omnipotent and Invisible etc. is styled as Para. It is also inferred that Para is higher than Apara.

Moreover, (the following stanza supports this view):

- (6) The learned always turn their eyes to the lofty place of Vişņu (i.e. Mokşa), spread like an eye in the Dyaus (i.e. luminous region)." (RV. I. 22.20)
 - (6) "तद् विध्णों: पर्म प्रम् सर्वा पश्यन्ति सूर्यः । द्विते चक्षुराततेम् ।" (RV. I. 22. 20)

The above English rendering of the stanza is mine. According to Dayananda it can be translated as follows:

"The learned look forward at all times for that Supreme seat (Parama Padam) of Vişņu (called Mokşa) (who pervades all space) as the eye pervades the solar light (i.e. the space filled by the Sun's rays)." (RV. I. 22.20)

Here the author has translated the word Pada (i.e. seat) as Mok$a. Mok$a is called a seat or a stage, because it is obtained by communion with God at the end of human life. The word Pada is derived from the root \sqrt{Pad} i.e. Padan$yam or Pr$apan$yam, i.e. a seat or stage which is to be obtained by the learned.

Author means to say that this final emancipation is nothing but the attainment of God. Hence it is described here as "Paramam Padam of Visnu". This Moksa is again described as "Atatam" as the Final Emancipation is not limited by space or time. It can be achieved by all devotees every where and always because God is Visnu (i.e. all pervading).

The word Pada is used in Sanskrit to denote this meaning $(Sth\bar{a}na-Padav\bar{\imath})$ also. $(Pada = \sqrt{Pad} + Ac)$. I cite below a few extracts from the classical literature where this word Pada means a rank or position or place or station:

- (a) "अद्योऽध: पदम ।" (NS. X)
- (b) "श्रगवत्या प्राश्निकस्य पदमध्यासितव्यम् ।" (MM. I) (Contd.)

This means that the learned (Sūris) see at all times that highest seat of all pervading God (Vişnu) which is called Final Emancipation (Moksa) and which is obtained by all men by adopting all the best possible means, and it is absolutely all bliss. It extends to all places i.e. it is not restricted by space, time and by any other matter. As God is all pervading (Visnu) by His character. His seat is obtainable by all at all places, Here the simile is given that as the sphere of the eye-sight is (the entire) space filled by the solar light so (devotees are capable of achieving that seat of Moksa every where as God exists at all places). Moksa being the highest possible object of human desire, the wise aspire to obtain it. Hence, the Vedas accord a special treatment to it.

Vyāsa also offers an aphorism on this topic in his Vedānta Sūtras:

(7) "He (Brahman) is the Theme (of the Vedas) because the applicability (of the text lies in Him)." (VDI. 1.4)

Here the idea is that God is regularly explained by the Vedas, at some places by indirect expressions and at others by indication or suggestion (Paramparaya).

Hence, God is the ultimate theme of the Vedas.

This can further be supported by (the following stanza from) the Yajurveda:

(Contd. from p. 57)

Here "Samanvaya" means "applicability". cf:

"न च सङ्गतानां पदानां ब्रह्मस्वरूपविषये निश्चिते समन्वयेऽर्थान्तरकल्पना युक्ता ।" (Śārīrika Bhāṣya)

(8) "That Supreme Being, than Whom no other and greater is born, Who penetrates the whole universe and Who, being the Lord of creatures, remains and sports with them, creates and (gives luster to) the three luminaries (the Sun, fire and electricity). From Him originate the sixteen digits*, which He unites with created beings." (YV. VIII. 36)

This is to say that no other superior object exists to Supreme Being (Para Brahman). Prajapati is a name of God as He is the main-stay of all creatures. He (Prajapati i.e. the Lord of created beings) pervades (Āviveśa) all the regions. Being the Bestower of Supreme Bliss on all beings He has filled and illumined all the worlds with three lights—the Sun, the fire and electricity. He has generated the sixteen Kalās i.e. digits or they exist in Him. Hence He is called Ṣoḍaśā.

This verse may be translated as:

"Than whom there is none other born more mighty,
Who hath pervaded all existing creaturesPrajāpati, rejoicing in his off-springs, he Sodasi, maintains the three great lustres." (Griffith)

Here three lustres may mean Agni, Vāyu, Sūrya or Fire, wind, Sun or Fire, lightening and Sun.

* The sixteen digits (Şodaśī Kalās) are enumerated to Sukeśa by Pippalāda as follows:

"इहैवान्तः शरीरे सौम्य ! सः पुरुषो यस्मिन्नेताः षोडश कलाः प्रमवन्ति । स प्राणमसृजत् । प्राणात् श्रद्धां खंवायुं ज्योतिरापः पृथिवीमिन्द्रियं मनः सन्तम् । सन्नाव् वीर्यं तपो मन्ताः कर्म लोका लोकेषु नाम च ।" (PU. VI. 2.4)

i.e. "To him he then said: 'Even here within the body, O friend, is that Person in whom they say the sixteen parts arise.

He created life $(Pr\bar{a}na)$; from life, faith $(Sraddh\bar{a})$, ether, wind, light, water, earth, sense-faculty (Indriya), mind, food; from food, virility, austerity, the Vedas, action, place and name." (PU. VI. 2.4)

God is, therefore, the supreme object of the Vedas. The Māṇḍūkya-Upaniṣad also states:

(9) "OM is an immortal syallable and this entire (world) is His manifestation." (MUU. I. 1)

This means: He is Akṣara whose name is OM. That Brahman is called Akṣara because He never perishes and also because He pervades the movable and immovable world. All the Vedas and the Scriptures and also the entire creation chiefly explain Him. Hence He must be accepted as the basic theme (of the Vedas).

Moreover, it is not logical to prefer secondary sense to the primary one; because it is in accordance with the authoritative dictum of the Maha-bhasya, the grammatical commentary that "the accomplishment of an action with the help of primary sense should be preferred where both—primary as well as secondary—meanings are available."*

Accordingly we should give preference to the primary meaning i.e. God while interpreting the Vedas because the chief object of the Vedic teaching is the attainment of God.

All men, therefore, should follow the Vedic instructions and append their activities (in the realm of Action, Meditation and Knowledge—Dharma, Upāsanā, Jñāna) with glorification of God so that they may attain success and accomplishment in (material and spiritual) matters concerning this life or life after death by doing good to others according to their capacity.

The second subject-matter (of the Vedas) is called Karma-Kāṇḍa (i.e. topic of action). It is entirely full of (various) activities. Without this, learning or knowledge would remain incomplete; because the internal or mental activities are closely related to the external or physical functions. This Karma-Kāṇḍa (i.e. department of action) is multifold. But its chief varieties are only two. One aims at the accomplishment of the supreme object of human existence i.e. the achievement of Mokṣa through the performance of God's praise, prayer and meditation, obedience and resignation to His will, righteous deeds and knowledge.

The other type of action is undertaken with a view to acquire riches and secure enjoyments by performing righteous deeds and thus to accomplish success in the worldly affairs. When action is performed with the absolute object of obtaing God, it is called Niskama (i.e. desireless or disattached action) and it has the noblest yield as it is endowed with eternal bliss. When it is performed with the sole object of securing wealth and enjoyment, resulting in worldly pleasure, it is styled as Sakama (i.e. an action attached to worldly desire); because it is mingled with the tasting of the birth and death. In the first category are included the activities of (various) sacrifices (yajñas)—from the Agnihotra to the Aśvamedha—where one has to offer oblations (consisted of) ingredients, duly refined and clarified which contain fragrant, sweet, tonic and curative properties, into the fire, for the purification of air and the rain-water. Such sacrifices (Yajñas) bring happiness to the whole world.

^{(9) &#}x27;'ओमित्येतदक्षरम् । इदं सर्वं तस्योपव्याख्यानम् ।'' (MUU. I. 1)

In the second category, are included such actions as the procurement of food-stuffs, cloth and manufacture of conveyances, machines, tools and implements etc. which are performed for the accomplishment of the regulated social order. Mostly these actions result in personal and individual joys only.

Here we are supported by (the following) evidence from the Pūrva Mīmānsā:

- (10) "As ingredients, their purificatory measures and the actions (in the sacrifices) are for the benefit of all others, statements asserting certain objects are only explanatory or laudatory ones,"

 (MD. IV. 3.1)
- (11) "The purificatory process for ingredients which are only for (sacrificial) activities, results in qualitative performance of the sacrifice (Kratu-Dharma)." (MD. IV. 3.8)
 - (10) "द्रव्यसंस्कारकर्मसु परार्थत्वात् फलश्रुतिरर्थवादः स्यात्" । (MD. IV. 3.1)
 - (11) ''द्रव्याणां तु क्रियार्थानां संस्कारः क्रतु-धर्मः स्यात् ।'' (MD. IV. 3.8)

Here the word "Arthavada" is very technical. The word "Artha" means: "object, purpose, wealth, context or substance". The "Arthavada" denotes the following meanings:

- (a) Declaration of any purpose.
- (b) Affirmation, declaratory assertion, an explanatory remark, speech or assertion having a certain object, a sentence.

It often recommends a Vidhi or a precept by stating the good arising from its proper observance and the evils arising from its omission, and also by adducing historical instances in its support. (Contd.)

The import of these aphorisms is that the duty of the performer of a Sacrifice (Yajña) is three-fold, e.g. the procurement of ingredients, their purification (samskāra) and the actual performance (karma). The above mentioned ingredients are of four kinds i.e. (I) fragrant (II) sweet (III) tonic and (IV) curative. The purificatory process relating to them (ingredients) must be adopted for the accomplishment of the best and meritorious results. For instance, with a view to prepare a good soup or sauce ($s\bar{u}pa = s\bar{u} + pa +$ ka in the sense of ghan) fragrant ghee is poured into a ladle (lit. spon) and fried upon the fire till it emits smoke; the ladle is thrust into the kettle containing the soup or curry and opening of the vessel is closed and the soup is moved about with it. Then the smoke like vapour arises before which being as condensed as fragrant liquid and mixing with the entire soup makes it nutritious, delicious and sweet-smelling. Similarly, vapours arising from a Yajña purify the atmosphere (lit. air) and the rain-water. Thus it is for the good of the whole world. Hence it has been stated in the Aitareya-Brāhmana:

cf: ''स्तुतिनिन्दापरकृतिपुराकल्प इत्यर्थवाद: ।'' (ND.) ''प्रकरणप्रतिपाद्यस्य तत्र तत्र प्रशंसनमर्थवाद: ।''

According to Laugaki, it is of three kinds:

"गुणवादः विरोधे स्यात् अनुवादोऽवधारिते ।" भूतार्थवादस्तद्धानात अर्थवादस्त्रिधा मतः ।"

Here the last kind includes many varieties.

- (c) One of the six means of finding out the "Tatparya" (real aim and object) of any work.
- (d) Praise or eulogy.

cf: "अर्थवाद एष:। दोषं तु से कंचित कथय।" (URC. I)

Our author interprets these Sūtras as "फलस्य श्रुति: श्रवणं हि अर्थवादोऽनयंनिवारणाय भवित ।" which is not very clear. The word $Artha-v\bar{a}da$ has been explained by us above. According to Dayānanda, no specific purpose or object can be attributed to any $Yaj\bar{n}a$. The real object of such performances is the benefit of the whole universe. Hence $Yaj\bar{n}as$ are included by our author in $Niṣk\bar{a}ma$ actions (i.e. actions detatched from desire). He is always original in his laudable interpretations.

(12) "A Yajña, which is performed by a learned man in the prescribed manner, conduces (to the happiness) of all mankind (janatā)."

(AB. I. 2)

Here "janata" (i.e. mankind) means all men (without any distinction). The $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ brings happiness to all men alike if a learned performer consumes duly purified ingredients in fire in the aforesaid manner. As it aims only at others' benefit, $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ results in the universal good. Hence statements indicating specific aims are merely laudatory ones. The real object (of a $Yaj\tilde{n}a$) is to ward off evils.

The purity of the performing people and the refinement of ingredients used in sacrificial performances should be taken as "Kratu-Dharma" (i.e. essentials of $Yaj\bar{n}as$). Sacred and beneficial results (dharmas) are brought forth only in this very manner and not otherwise (from a $Yaj\bar{n}a$).

It is supported by the following evidence:

(13) "Smoke or vapours are produced from fire, from smoke, the clouds; from clouds, the rain or (in short) from fire all these things are produced. Hence, they are called as Tapojas (i.e. born of heat or fire). (SB. V. 3)

The import is that from fire, smoke and vapour are brought forth. When this fire penetrates into trees, medicinal herbs, water and other substances and disintegrates the solid objects, it separates juice from them. These (juices) then reduced to levity and being borne up by the air soar up to the sky. The liquid part therein is called vapour and the hard substance is earthly one. The smoke, therefore, is the name given to the combination of both the particles. When such a smoke reaches the higher regions, and thus watery vapours grow in abundance there, it produces clouds. From these masses of clouds in the air, the rain begins to fall. Hence from fire alone (Agneḥ-eva) are generated all herbs and plants like barley. From them is produced food, from food, semen and from semen the bodies (of all living being).

^{(13) &#}x27;'अरनेर्वे घूमो जायते, घूमादम्ममश्चाद् वृष्टिः । अरनेर्वा एता जायन्ते । तस्मात् आह तपोजा इति ।" (SB. V. 3)

The same subject has been stated in the Taittiriya-Upanişad:

- (14) "From that Soul (Atman), varily ether (or space-ākāśa) arose, from ether, wind; from wind, fire; from fire, water; from water, the earth; from the earth, herbs; from herbs, food; from food, semen; from semen, the person (Puruṣa).
 - This, verily, is the person that consists of the essence of food." (TU. I. 2.)
- (15) "He performed austerity (Tapas). Having performed austerity be understood that Brahman is food. For truly, indeed, beings here are born from food, when born, they live by food, on deceasing, they enter into food." (TU. II. 3.)

Here food is called 'Brahman' (the great) as it is the chief cause of (the continuance of) life. All living beings draw happiness from pure food, water and air and not if they are impure.

There are two kinds of efforts (for the purification of all these things). One is 'Divine' and the other 'human'. God has created this fiery (orb of) the Sun, sweet fragrance and the flowers. The Sun is ceaselessly busy in drawing up juices from (all things) in the world. But as the fragrant and bad smelling qualities are mixed up with these juices, the water and air that come into contact with them. are, because of this combination of sweet and bad odour, rendered into an indifferent quality where there are both desirable as well as undesirable elements. Consequently the quality of plants, food, seed and bodies also becomes comparatively inferior because they are produced from such a rain water. Because of their iniddling quality, (all human) virtues e.g. strength, intellect, valour, prowess, perseverance, bravery grow mediocre. Because it is a philosophical doctrine that as is the cause so is the effect.

For this we cannot blame the Divine creation. Because bad smell and other defects are man-made and should be ascribed to human creation. As man is the author of bad odour and other defects, it is, therefore, obligatory for him to remove them. It is a divine ordinance that one ought to speak the truth and ought not to tell lies. He, who transgresses it, becomes a sinner and suffers afflictions in accordance with the law and order of God. Similarly God has ordained that man ought to perform a Yajña. Whoever violates this, commits sin and suffers pain, because he omits an action of universal good.

^{(14) &}quot;तहमाद्वा एतस्मात् आत्मन आकाशः सम्भूत आकाशात्" वायुः वायोरिग्नः, अग्नेरापः, अव्भयः पृथिवी पृथिव्या ओषधयः, ओषधिभ्योऽन्तमन्नाद् रेतः, रेतसः पुरुषः । स वा एष पुरुषोऽन्तरसमयः ।" (ब्रह्मानन्ववल्ली 2) (TU. I. 2)

The greater the number of men and other animals gathered together at one particular place, the greater is the amount of bad smell. God's creation is not its cause. Because it is a result of crowding together of a huge number of men and other animals. Sometimes men for their own pleasure, accumulate elephants and other animals at one particular place and the excessively offensive smell, caused by this must be ascribed to men's pleasure-seeking-activities. In this manner, the entire bad odour which pollutes the air and the rain-water is caused by human agency. Hence it becomes obligatory for men that they should remove it also.

Of all living beings men alone can discriminate between the good and the evil (lit. benefit and harm). Thinking or realisation (Vicāra or Manana) is the characteristic of a man's manhood.*

Of all embodied living beings, God has created men alone who possess mind (Manasvin i.e. having mind) and thus have the capacity of discrimination. By a particular combination of atoms (Paramanu-samyoga) He has created human organs; which have the capacity of acquiring knowledge (lit. abode of knowledge). Hence men alone and no other animals have power of discrimination between good and evil (Dharma and Adharma) and of doing righteous and leaving unrighteous actions.

That is why all men should perform Yojñas for universal benefit.†

* Author says : "मननं-विचारस्तद्-योगात् मनुष्य:"।

Here the following explanation of the word 'Manusya' given by Yaska deserves notice:—

"मनुष्याः कस्मात् ? मत्वा कर्माणि सीव्यन्ति । मनस्यमानेन सृष्टाः । मनस्यतिः पुनर्मनस्वीभावे । मनोरपत्यम् । मनुष्यो वा ।" (N. II. 3)

† Rsi Dayānanda in emphatic terms makes it clear that "Yajīna" is an obligatory act on the part of a man. A man must perform sacrifice for universal advantage. It has no selfish end. The word "Yajīna" is from the root " \sqrt{yaj} " to sacrifice, to worship with sacrifice.

The Bhagavad-Gītā clearly states that performance of a Yajīna is essential and unavoidable:— (Contd.)

cf: "सहयज्ञाः प्रजाः मृष्ट्या पुरोवाच प्रजापितः ।

अनेन प्रसिविष्यध्वमेष वोऽस्तिविष्टकामधुक् ॥१॥

यज्ञशिष्टाशिनः सन्तो मुच्यन्ते सर्विकित्विषैः ।

कमंबह्गोद्भवं विद्धि ब्रह्माक्षरसमुद्भवम् ।

तस्मातु सर्वगतं ब्रह्म नित्यं यज्ञे प्रतिब्ठितम ॥३॥" (BG. III)

i.e. "In ancient days, Brahmadeva created living beings together with $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ and said to them: "By means of this $(Yaj\tilde{n}a)$ may you grow, may this be to you a "Kama-dhenu" (i.e. something which fulfils all desires). (1)

"Those good men, who part-take of what remains after the performance of the $Yaj\tilde{n}a$, are redeemed from all sins. But those, who (without performing the $Yaj\tilde{n}a$) cook (food) for themselves only, such sinful persons eat only sin. (2)

"Know (that) the origin of Action is from the Brahma (that is, the Vedas) and this Brahma (the Vedas) has sprung out of the Brahman (God); therefore (know that) the All-Pervading Brahman is always 'primarily worshipped' in the " $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ "." (EG III)

Lord Krishna condemns a man who wastes his life without performing Yajñas for universal benefit:—

"एवं प्रवित्ततं चकं नानुवर्त्तयतीह यः। अद्यायुरिन्द्रियारामो मोघं पार्थं स जीवति ॥" (BG. III)

i.e. "The life of that man who does not move the cycle (of action) which has thus been started (for the maintenance of the world) is sinful; and the existence of this slave of the senses, O Arjuna, is worthless." (BG. III)

A Yajña must be performed without any personal desire. In the Māhabhārata we read:—

"वयो धर्मस्कन्धा यज्ञोऽध्ययनं दानिमिति । यज्ञो यध्टब्य इत्येव यो यज्ञत्यफलेप्सया ॥" (MB, Śānti) (Contd.) (Contd. from page 66)

"Yajña is an act which is done with no selfish motive."

(MB. Śānti)

The undermentioned citations from the Chāndog) a Upanişad may be read with benefit:—

- (a) "वयो धर्मस्कन्धा यज्ञोऽध्ययनं दानिर्मात ।" (CHU. II. 23.1)
- (b) "यदेष यन्न्विवं सर्वं पुनाति तस्मादेष यज्ञ: 1" (CHU. IV. 16.1)

The universal character of $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ is eulogised in our ancient literature. All beneficial activities e.g. patriotism, devotion to God, attainment of knowledge for others' benefit, life of celibacy, harmlessness to others, development of social order, protection of orphans and shelterless people are included in this $Yaj\tilde{n}a$. The following extracts from authoritative books will establish this fact beyond doubt:—

- (a) ''यद् यज्ञ इत्याचक्षते ब्रह्मचर्यमेव तत्।'' (CHU. VIII. 5.1)
- (b) ''त्वं ब्रह्मा त्वं यज्ञ: ।'' (BU. I. 5.17)
- (c) "अहं ब्रह्मा अहं यज्ञ: ।" (KTU. II)
- (d) "अहं ऋतुरहं यज्ञ: ।" (BG. IX. 16)

The selfless person perceives a Sacrifice (Yajña) going on within himself:—

- (ii) "शरोरं यज्ञ: ।" (MNU. XX. 12)
- (iii) "वार्ग्व यज्ञस्य होता। चक्षुर्वे यज्ञस्य अध्वर्युः । प्राणो वै यज्ञस्य उद्गाता। मनो वै यज्ञस्य ब्रह्मा।" (BU. III. 1.1-6)
- (iv) "तस्यैवं विदुषो यज्ञस्यात्मा यजमानः, श्रद्धा पत्नी, शरीरमिध्ममुरो वेविः, सोमानि बहिः, वेदः शिखा, हृदयं यूपः, काम आज्यं, मन्युः पशुः, तपोऽन्निः, दमः शर्मायता, दक्षिणा वाक् होता, प्राण उद्गाता, चक्षुरध्वर्युः, मनो ब्रह्मा, श्रोत्रमम्नोद् यावत् ध्रियते सा दीक्षा, यदश्नाति तद् हविः, यत् पिबति तदस्य सोमपानम् ।" (MNU. LXXX.) (Contd.)

Human body is described as the hermitage of "Seven Sages" who perform sacrifices:

"सप्त ऋषयः प्रतिहताः शरीरे सप्त रक्षन्ति सदमप्रमादम् ।" (BU; YV. XXXIV. 55)

According to the Bhagavad-Gītā God created men with sacrifice:-

''सह यज्ञाः प्रजाः सुष्टवा पुरोवाच प्रजापितः ।'' (BG. III. 10)

The universal aspect of a Yajna is highly praised in the Vedic literature also:—

- (I) "अध्वरो वै यज्ञ: 1" (SB. I. 2.4.5; I. 4.1.38)
- (II) "यज्ञो वै नम: ।" (YV. XIII. 8; SB. VII. 4 1.30)
- (III) "यज्ञो वै भुज्यु: ।" (YV. XVIII, 42)
- (IV) ''यज्ञो वै सर्वाणि भूतानि भुनितः।'' (SB. IX. 4.1.11)
- (V) "यज्ञो भग: 1" (YV. XI. 7)
- (VI) ''यज्ञो वा ऋतस्य योनिः ।" (YV. XI. 6)
- (VII) "यत्तो वै महिमा।" (YV. XI. 6; SB. VI. 3.1.18)
- (VIII) "यज्ञो वै स्व: ।" (YV. I. 11)
 - (IX) "यज्ञो वै सुम्नाम ।" (YV. XII. 67)
 - (X) "यज्ञो वै श्रेष्ठतमं कमैं।" (YV. I. 5; SB. I. 7.1.5)
 - (XI) "यज्ञो वै विशा यज्ञे हि सर्वाणि भूतानि विशन्ति।" (SB. VIII. 7.3)
- (XII) "यज्ञो वै भवनस्य नाभि:।" (TB. III. 9.5.5)
- (XIII) ''यज्ञो वा अवति ।'' (TB. VI. 4.5)

The selfish people (i.e. non-sacrificers are condemned in the following stanza:—

"अयज्वानः सनकाः प्रेतिमीयुः ।" (RV. X. 33.4)

i.e. "Even the charitable people who have no sacrificial activities go to ruin." cf:—

- (XIV) पराचिच्छीर्षाः वव्जुस्त इन्द्राध्यक्त्वानो यज्विभः स्पर्धमानाः ।" (RV. I. 33.5)
- (XV) "प्रास्य पारं नवति नाव्यानामपि कर्त्तमवर्त्तयोऽयज्यून् ।" (RV. I. 121.13)
- (XVI) "अयज्ञियो हतवर्चा भवति ॥" (AV. XII. 2 37)

Thus an "A-yajvā' is depricated in harsh terms, Ancient Aryans were known for their selfless charitable outlook towards all living beings. (Contd.)

- Q. How can it rightly be said that a Yajña is performed for others' benefit; when the fragrant substances e.g. musk etc. are reduced to ashes by being thrown into fire? These good things can serve more beneficial purpose, if they are given to men etc. to eat and be utilized otherwise, than being burnt in sacrificial fire. Then what is the advantage of performing a Yajña?
- A. Here we say that nothing is ever utterly perishable. Annihilation (vināśa) means merely the passing of an object from perceptible state into an imperceptible one.*
- Q. How many kinds of perception do you accept ?
- A. I admit eight types of cognition (Darsana).
- Q. What are they?
- A. I accept (the following) eight means of cognition (e.g.:-(1) Sense Perception (Pratyakşa), (2) Inference (Anumāna), (3) Analogy (Upamāna), (4) Verbal Evidence (Śabda), (5) Tradition (Aitihya), (6) Circumstantial Implication (Arthapatti), (7) Probability (Sambhava), (8) Non-existence (Abhāva).)

Acarya Gautama in his Nyaya Satra defines them as follows:

(16) "Sense perception (Pratyakşa) is that truly unerring and determined knowledge which is derived from the contact of a sense organ with its object." (ND. I. 1.4)

Dayānanda here stresses upon the fact that $Yaj\bar{n}a$ is performed only for universal benefit. We have quoted here a good number of instances showing the importance of a $Yaj\bar{n}a$. The interested reader may see (RV. II. 26.1; VII. 6.3; VIII. 70.11; and AV. XI. 2.23; and also Nirukta X. 26; RV. X. 81.5). Instances can be multiplied. We have, due to economy of space, not given here the English renderings of these citations which are quite simple and lucid.

- * cf. ''अव्यक्तादीनि भूतानि व्यक्तमध्यानि भारत । अव्यक्तनिधनान्येव तत्र का परिदेवना ॥'' (BG. II. 28)
- (16) "इन्द्रियार्थसन्निकर्षोत्पन्नं ज्ञानमन्यपदेश्यमध्यमिचारि व्यवसायात्मकं प्रत्यक्षम्।" (ND, I. 1.4)

- (17) "Now the Inference (Anumana) which is based on Sense-Perception is three-fold: (I) Parva-vat (Inference of the effect from the cause), (II) Sesa-vat (i.e. Inference of cause from the effect), (III) Samanyato-drsta) (i.e. an Inference neither deduced from the relation of cause to the effect nor from that of effect to the cause." (ND. I. 1.5)
- (18) "To establish fact on its resemblance to another object is called Analogy i.e. Upamāna." (ND. I. 1.6)
- (19) "The authoritative instruction is called Sabda (i.e. Verbal Evidence)." (ND. I. 1.7)

According to this I accept the eight types of Cognition. Here the Pratyakşa is that true and invariably precise knowledge, which is deduced from the contact of sense-organs with their objects. For example, by looking at from close quarter (we get right cognition) that he is a human being and nothing else. The inference based on cause and effect is Anumāna. For example on seeing the son it is concluded that he had a father. Knowledge based on similarity is called Upamāna. For example, Deva Datta resembles Yajña Datta. This instruction is based on analogy. By Śabda (i.e. Verbal Authority) the conviction regarding the seen or unseen objects is obtained. For example, "the statement that salvation is obtained by knowledge."

(Gautama again says in his NyāyaSūtra) as :--

- (20) "Not four only. The Aitihya (Tradition), Arthapatti (Presumption), Sambhava (Probability), and Abhāva (Non-existence) are also (means of) cognition." (ND. II. 2. 1)
- (21) "Śabda includes Aitihya; and Anumāna includes Arthā patti, Sambhaya and Abhāya." (ND. II. 2. 2)

These two aphorisms are briefly explained here. The Aitihya (Tradition) is accepted only when it is supported by Verbal Evidence from a

^{(17) &}quot;अथ तत्पूर्वकं त्रिविधमनुमानं पूर्ववत् शेषवत् सामान्यतोदृष्टं च ॥" (ND. I. 1.5)

^{(18) &}quot;प्रसिद्धसाधम्यात् साव्यसाधनमुपमानम्।" (ND. I. 1.6)

^{(19) &#}x27;'आप्तोपदेश: शब्दः ।'' (ND. I. 1.7)

^{(20) &}quot;न चतुष्ट्वम्—ऐतिह्यार्थापित्तसम्भवाभावप्रामाण्यात् ।" (ND. II. 2.1) trust worthy person. For instance, "there was a war between Devas and Asuras". Arthāpatti is the Circumstantial Presumption. For instance, the statement that "the rain falls when there are clouds" conveys indirectly that "it does not rain when there are no clouds". Sambhava means possibility of a thing by some mean or at a particular place. For example, the statement that "parents beget off-springs" is a possible one. But if some one says that the hair of moustache of Kumbhakarana stood erect four Kośas and the length of his nose was 16 Kośas, (he cannot be relied upon) because of his impossible and consequently false statement. Abhāva is Non-existence of an object at particular place and time. Some one asks a person to bring a pitcher. When he does not perceive the pitcher there, he gets cognition that the pitcher is not there by means of Non-existence (Abhāva). He fetches it from the place where it exists.

This is a concise explanation of Pratyakşa etc.

In this manner I accept eight sources of Cognition. Without accepting them, none can achieve success in the affairs of this world and of the next world.

(Imagine) some one thoroughly reduces a clod of earth to powder and throws it up high into the sky with the might of his arm in a violent wind. Here destruction $(n\bar{a}sa)$ of the clod is not (actual but) a figurative one (Upacaryate) because the clod has become only imperceptible to the eyes (and has not actually ceased to exist). The word "nasa" is derived from the root "Nas" to become invisible with suffix $(gha\tilde{n})$. Consequently the word "nasa" denotes disappearance i.e. a stage when a thing becomes imperceptible to the sense-organs. Moreover, when atoms (of a substance) are disjoined and separated, they are not seen by eyes as they are beyond Sense-Perception. When they join each other again and assume the character of a gross state, they become visible, because a gross substance alone is perceptible to sense-organs. When a substance is so continuously divided and subdivided that it becomes impossible to divide it further, those (last and final) divisions are termed as Paramanus (atoms). They thus subdivided become imperceptible but continue to exist in the void space.

Similarly, when a thing is put into fire it is disintegrated and continues to exist in some other region. It never ceases to exist. In this manner, the fragrant ingredients which are potent in removing all defects such as offensive odour, when are consumed in fire, they purify the air as well as the rainwater. When they are pure and free from defects, they bring about happiness and benefit to the entire creation.

For this reason, performance of a Yajña is obligatory.

- Q. If the sole aim of a Sacrifice is the purification of air and the rainwater, (it is useless to perform a Sacrifice as) this object can be achieved by keeping fragrant articles at dwelling places. What is the advantage of this whole fuss?
- A. No, this will not do. In this manner, the impure air (inside the house) can not become lighter and thus would not ascend into the sky, but would continue to remain where it exists and thus would not create vacuum for the external purer air to come in. Moreover, the disease—averting purpose can also not be achieved because of the simultaneous existence of pure and foul air (in the house side by side).

When in the house, fragrant and similar other substances be consumed in the fire, the air due to the heat expands, grows lighter and goes up higher into the sky. At this, the pure air would get vacuum to run in from all the four directions. As by this process the space inside the house is surcharged with pure air, it has desease-destroying effect also.

(Moreover) the air, carrying the atoms of fragrant ingredients by a Yajña would ascend into the higher regions and would purify the rain-water as well as also it would enhance the amount of rain. By this (pure rain) herbs etc., also become pure (i.e. qualitative). By and by the world is restored to immense happiness. It is beyond all doubts. This aim cannot be achieved by making the air fragrant without its contact with fire.

Hence, the performance of Yajña is decidedly beneficial.

Moreover, when a person consumes fragrant articles in the sacrificial fire, the wind carrying the (sweet) smell comes in contact with the nose-organ of a person sitting at a very far off place. He, then (at a distant station) realises the existence of the fragrant wind. From this, it is inferred that good or bad odour is vafted away by the blowing breeze. When it (fragrant air) has reached the remote region (and left the place where the Sacrifice was performed), it ceases to have contact with the smell-organ there. Here, men of immature wisdom wrongly conclude that the fragrance has perished. But they do not understand that the fragrant substances which were burnt in fire, do actually exist in the air in other (higher) region. Thus there are other multiformed purposes of sacrificial performances which the wise people can rightly comprehend by proper thinking.

Q. If the purpose of performing a Sacrifice be only this much, it can be achieved by burning ingredients in fire. Then what is the use of chanting of the Veda-Mantras in that act?

- A. (To meet this objection) we say that it has its own purpose to serve.
- Q. What is that?
- A. As we perform a Yajña with our hands, perceive it with our eyes and feel (its sensational touch) with our skin, so we recite the Vedic hymns with our tongue with a view to glorify, invoke and offer our prayers unto God. (Through them) we comprehend the purpose of the Sacrifice (also). Their repeated recitation preserves the Vedic Text and makes us realise God's existence. We are (indirectly) instructed that all acts should be preceded by prayers to God. The recitation of the Vedic hymns in the Sacrifice is done only to offer these prayers throughout all its stages.
- Q. What objection is there if (passages from) some other (sacred) books than the Vedas are chanted there?
- A. The above stated aim cannot be gained by reciting some other texts, because they, not being revealed by God, are not absolutely true. It must be admitted that whatever and wherever a truth is to be found, it is originated from the Vedas. Whatever false is there, it is outside the Vedas and God is not its source. On this topic Manu says:—
- (22) "O Lord, (Manu) thou alone art conversant with the duties (Karyas) and real meanings of the Vedas which are the words of unimaginable, unknowable and Self-existent God." (M. I. 3)
- (23) "The four Varnas (castes), the three regions, the four Asramas (stages of human life), and the Past, the Future and the Present, are all accomplished by means of the Vedas." (MS. XII. 97)
- (24) "The eternal science of the Vedas upholds the whole creation and is a medium of securing bliss for the living beings; hence I admit its highest place." (MS. XII. 99)

^{(22) &#}x27;'त्वमेको ह्यस्य सर्वस्य विद्यानस्य स्वयम्भुवः । अचिन्त्यस्याप्रमेयस्य कार्य-तत्त्वार्थवित-प्रभो ॥'' (M. I.3)

- Q. Is it essential for the performance of a Sacrifice (Yajña) to prepare a sacrificial altar (Vedi) by digging the earth, (construct a Yajña-śala), (procure) the sacrificial vessels e.g. Pranītā etc., and Kuśa grass and (to appoint) Sacrificial priests (Rtvijs)?
- A. Here our contention is that whatever is essential and reasonable that must be done and nothing else. For instance, by digging the ground, a Vedi is to be prepared. Fire kindled there, becomes powerful. Things thrown into it, becoming at once disintegrated ascend into the sky. Moreover, by preparing these various types of Vedis such as triangular, quadrangular, circular and falconshaped, the knowledge of Geometry is acquired. As the particular number of bricks is required for the particular type of the Vedi, Science of Mathematics is also learnt by this*.

* Prof. A.A, Mecdonell in his "INDIA'S PAST" says :-

"The beginnings of geometry go back to a period of high antiquity in India, for a considerable amount of geometrical knowledge is to be found in the Sulva-Sutras, or 'String Rules', which from a part of the general Vedic ritual (Kalpa) Sutra works. These give the rules for the laying out of the sacrificial ground, for the construction of the fire-altars, and other arrangements necessary for the performance of the single great. sacrifices. The design of the sacrificial ground with its most important constituent parts made the construction of right angles, squares, and circles, as well as the transformation of plane figures into others of equal area, a matter of necessity. To sacrificial experts it was of the utmost moment that the measurement of the sacrificial ground by means of cords (Sulva), stretched between stakes, should be carried out accurately according to rule. These practical requirements resulted in a considerable aggregate of geometrical knowledge, including the Pythagorean proposition (worked out in Euclid 1.47). Thus the ritual experts understood how to transform rectangles into squares, squares into circles, as well as vice It is probable that such geometrical knowledge based on practical operations goes back even to the time of the Vedic hymns." (Page. 192)

Prof. A.B. Kieth also confirms this view in his famous work "A History of Sanskrit Literature";— (Contd.)

Similarly other things serve their own purposes. But some say that "the placing of a Pranīta in a particular way produces religious merit (Punya) and to place it in any other way brings sin". This statement is imaginary and false; because there is no cause of sin. (Hence there is no sin). Whatever, is essential for the accomplishment of a Sacrifice and is reasonable, that must be provided; because if these things or acts are left aside, there can be no success.

"In one sphere, however, distinctly interesting results were attained in geometry as a result of the care taken in the measurement of altars. These results are enshrined in the Culvasūtras, works which are of the late Sūtra period, possibly of c. 200 B.C., though this is mere guesswork. They are concerned with the construction of squares and rectangles; the relation of the diagonal to the sides; the equivalence of rectangles and squares; and the construction of equivalent squares and circles." (Page 517)

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE DEVATAS

- O. What is denoted by the word "Devata" in a Sacrifice?
- A. Those objects, which are stated in the Vedas (are called Devatds). The pieces of evidence are as follows:—
- (1) "Agni is Devatā, Vata is Devatā, Sūrya is Devatā, Candramas is Devatā, Vasus are Devatās, Rudras are Devatās, Ādityas are Devatās, Maruts are Devatās, Viśvedevās are Devatās, Bṛhas pati is Devatā, Indra is Devatā and Varuņa is Devatā." (YV. XIV. 20)

Here, in the realm of ritualism (Karma-kanda), the word Devata denotes the "Vedic Mantras". Vedic stanzas (composed in) metres such as Gayatrī etc. are given the names of Agni Devatā and others. They are accepted here; because they expound the various methods of doing a ritual act. The stanza, which reveals the significance of the word of Agni is styled to have Agni as its Devatā. Similarly, the Mantras explaining the meanings of the words, Vāta, Sūrya, Candramas, Varuna, Vasus, Rudras, Ādityas, Maruts, Viśvedevās, Brhaspati and Indra are called to possess these substances for their Devatās; because these Mantras elucidate all such words and in them we get references to these substances made by most creditable authority of God.

On this point, Ācārya Yāska in his Nirukta observes :-

- (2) "The Vedas contain Mantras (which explain) the accomplishment of actions." (N. I. 2)
- (3) "The Daivata (chapter) is so called as it contains appellations of Devatas to whom primary praise is offered."
- (1) "अग्निहेंवता वातों देवता स्थां देवता चन्द्रमां देवता वसेवो देवता छहा देवतांऽऽदित्या देवतां मुरुतां देवता विश्वेदेवा देवता वृहस्पतिदेंवतेन्द्रों देवता वर्रणों देवता।" (YV. XIV, 20)
- (2) "कर्मसम्पत्तिर्मः तो वेदे।" (N. I. 2)
- (3) "अथातो दैवतम् । तद्यानि नामानि प्राधान्यस्तुतीनां देवतानां तद्दैवतिमित्याचक्षते । सैषा देवतोपपरीक्षा । यत्काम ऋषियंस्यां देवतायामार्थपत्यिमच्छन् स्तुति प्रयुङ्क्ते, तद्दैवतः स मन्त्रो भवति ।

तास्त्रिविद्या ऋचः परोक्षकृताः प्रत्यक्षकृता आध्यात्मिक्यश्च ॥" (N. VII. 1)

Here is the detailed examination of the Devatas :-

When a Seer desirous of a particular object praises a Devatā (i.e. a Mantra, knowing it as) possessing that object, that Mantra is said to have that (particular) Devatā. Such Mantras (Rcas) are of three kinds (I) those whose meaning is direct, (II) those where the meaning is indirect and (III) those relating to spiritual science." (N. VII. 1)

* These passages from the Nirukta cited by our author in support of his view that "the Vedic Mantras are the Devalās," have been translated here above by us in accordance with his interpretation. This dynamical rendering is worth-appreciation. We also write below the traditional translation of these passages. All commentators, including Durga, have accepted it:—

"Now the Daivata Kāṇḍa: They style this (chapter) as Daivata as it contains appellations (of deties) to whom primary praise is offered (i.e. a list of words beginning with Agni and ending with Devapatni).

Now follows the detailed test of Devatas.

When a Seer desirous of (achieving) a particular object glorifies a particular Devatā (a deity) knowing him as possessor of that (desired) substance (Arthapati) (with a Mantra) that stanza (Mantra) is said to have that particular Devatā."

(N. VII. 1)

The well known commentator Durgācārya explains these passages as follows:—

(s) ''यानि नामानि प्राधान्यस्तुतीनामग्न्यादीनां देवपत्त्यन्तानां देवतानां तद्दैवतं प्रकरणमित्येवमाचार्या आचक्षते । निरूदा हीयमेतिस्मन् प्रकरणे संतेत्यिमप्रायः । ... प्राधान्यस्तुतिभाञ्जि यानि देवताभिधानानि तत् समुदायो देवतं प्रकरणम् ।."

i.e. "In short a chapter containing appellations of Devatās to whom primary praise is offered is called Daivata."

भविष्यामि इति बुद्धि पुरोधाय स्तुर्ति प्रयुङ्कते तद्दैवतः स मन्त्रो भवति । … अथवा देवतायामस्यार्थस्येयं देवता दातुं समर्था इति जानानः स्तुर्ति प्रयुङ्कते येन मन्त्रेण सा प्राधान्यस्तुतिभाग्देवता ॥"

We according to this interpretation of Durgācārya have translated the above passages in the foot note here. Yāska divides Devatās in three categories (I) Pratyakṣa-kṛta, (II) Parokṣa-kṛta, (III) Ādhyātmikyas.

These three titles of Devatās have been translated by us here as (I) the Mantras, having clear meaning, (II) Mantras, where the meaning is not obvious, (III) and Mantras containing spiritual science But this interpretation is not in accordance with what Yāska has said. He defines these terms as follows:—

- (a) "परोक्षकृताः सर्वामिः नामविश्वक्तिभिः युज्यन्ते प्रथमपुरुषेश्चाख्यातस्य ।" i.e. Reas which contain words used in all cases and verbs used in Third Person are called 'परोक्षकृताः' ।
- (b) प्रत्यक्षकृता मध्यमपुरुषयोगास्त्विमिति चैतेन सर्वनाम्ना ।"
 i.e. Mantras containing Pronoun "Tvam" in Second Person are termed as प्रत्यक्षकृता: ।।
- (c) "उत्तमपुरुषयोगा अहमिति चैतेन सर्वनाम्ना।"
 i.e. Adhyātmikya Mantras are those which contain First Personal Pronoun
 "Aham".

But Dayānanda seems to have not followed the traditional translation or the definitions of these terms given by Yāska himself. We may add here that this topic has a number of intricate problems and controversies. No book including Sarvānukramaṇīs and Bṛhaddevatā can give final verdict on this topic. Hence Venkaṭa Mādhava, the commentator of Rgveda has clearly shown his helplessness to give final word in the matter of "Devatā-vāda" in his Devatānukramaṇī:—

"देवतातत्त्वविज्ञानं महता तपसा भवेत् । शक्यते तत् किमस्माभिः याथातथ्येन भाषितुम् ॥"

Only the Seers like Vasista and Dayananda can rightly ascertain the Devata of a particular stanza or hymn as is clear from the undernoted citation from the Bṛhaddevatā:— (Contd.)

That is to say when a Vedic Stanza comprehensively describes the methods of securing success and accomplishment in all actions (beginning with) Agni-Hotra (Fire Sacrifice) to Asva-medha (a Sacrifice for protection of Rastra or nation) or actions which promote arts and other sciences, that Mantra is technically styled as "Devata". Similarly when a Mantra describes actions leading to "Release" or Union with God, it as well as its import is also called a Devata. Now we say what a Devata is. The Devatas enjoying the primary praise (i.e. forming the chief subject matter) are called Daivatas. The names of substances (Arthas) occurring in a Mantra serve as a mark or indication of a Devata. For instance in the following Mantra of the Yajurveda, the word Agni occurs:—

(4) "I set Agni, the Envoy, in the front. I eulogise Him as the bearer of the oblations. May He cause the Devas (i.e. the learned) to sit here." (YV. XXII. 17)

Here the word Agni is an indication or a mark (to which Devata, this stanza belongs). What is its significance? Wherever a Devata is spoken of (i.e. is to be determined), there we should take into consideration the mark or indication, occurring in a Mantra i.e. the name of a substance, occurring in a stanza is the Devata of that Mantra.

A part of the test (of finding out) Devata (in a Mantra) has already been explained; the rest will be elucidated now. God is (here) Seer—the All Observer—. When He, desirous of imparting instructions about a Devata (i.e. an object) which possesses particular qualities (Arthapatyam-Arthasya Svamitvam) describes its properties, that Mantra is said to have

"योगेन दाक्ष्येण दमेन बुद्धा, बाहुश्रुत्येन तपसा नियोगै: ॥ उपास्यास्ता: कृत्स्नशो देवता: ॥" (BD. VIII. 129, 130)

i.e. "Only the Seer can rightly understand the Vedic text." "These Devatās (i.e. subject matters) of stanzas can be determined by a person who is strong in meditation, Brahmacarya and other austerities. Mere learning has no power to solve this question."

(4) "अ्षिन दूतं पुरोदेधे हन्यवाह्मुपबृदे । देवां२ऽआसोदयादिह ॥" (YV. XXII. 17) that object as its Devatā. Moreover, the Mantra itself which lucidly explains or reveals a certain object, is also given the name of Devatā. The word Rcas is derived from the root " $\sqrt{R}k$ " to praise. Rcas have been given the term of "Devatā" because the learned eulogise and explain through them all true sciences.

It also occurs in RV. VIII. 44.3.

These revealed Mantras are of three kinds (I) Parokṣa kṛtas i.e. those Mantras where meaning is not obvious, (II) the Pratyakṣa kṛtas i.e. where the meaning is quite obvious, and (III) Ādhyatmikyas i.e. those Mantras which describe the spiritual science—the soul and the all pervading God.*

These Reas in ritual or action-portion (Karma-Kānda) of the Vedas are denoted by the word Devatā.

(Yaska further says in his Nirukta): -

(5) "Now we give a test of finding out Devatas in the Mantras where they are not expressly specified. These Mantras belong to the Devata of the Yajāa (where they are recited) or that of its component part. According to the Yajāikas, Mantras not used

यद्देवतः स यज्ञो यज्ञाङ्गं वा तद्देवता भवन्ति । अथान्यत्र यज्ञात् प्राजापत्या इति याज्ञिकाः । नाराशंसा इति नैकक्ताः । अपि वा सा कामदेवता स्यात् । प्रायो देवता वा । अस्ति ह्याचारो बहुलं लोके—देवदेवत्यमतिथिदेवत्यं पितृ-देवत्यं याज्ञदैवतो मन्त्र इति ।'' (N. VII. 4)

Here some words are technical and need explanation. The author of the Nirukta means to say that it is not very easy to determine a Devatā in those stanzas where it is not expressly specified or indicated. He, therefore, gives some alternative suggestions for determining Devatā in such cases. According to him, "Anādiṣṭa Devatā-mantras" (stanzas with obscure unexpressed Devatās) may be assigned to the undermentioned Devatās:—

(1) Devatā of the Sacrifice or that of its component part. That is to say that Devatā can be determined with reference to the context. For instance, if a Stanza is recited in particular Sacrifice, the Devatā of the Sacrifice should be deemed as the Devatā of that Stanza. (Contd.)

The definitions of these technical words, in accordance with Yaska have already been given in our foot-note.

^{(5) &}quot;तद् येऽनादिष्टदेवतामन्त्रास्तेषु देवतोपपरीक्षा। in Sacrifices have "Prajāpati" as their Devatā. But the Nairuktas say that "Narāsansa" (i.e. they treat of men) is their Devatā. Or else (in such cases) Devatā may be "one's own option" or there might be many Devatās. Such practice is very common in the world, (that we say) that "Deva is Devatā or Holy guest is Devatā or father and mother are Devatās." (N. VII. 4)

- (II) The Mantras which are not used in a Sacrifice, may be attributed to "Prājapati." (i.e. the Lord of all beings—God.) This is the view of the Yājñikas. That is to say that Prajāpati (i.e. this name of God) includes all qualities which are expressed by different names as Agni etc. Durgāchārya says:—"अनिरुक्तो हि प्रजापति: 1"
- (III) But according to Etymologists (Nairuktas) such Mantras should be taken as having "Nārāśansa" as their Devatā. Now what is this Nārāśansa?

Yāska says: — "तत्को नाराशंसाः ? यज्ञ इति कायक्यः। अग्निरिति शाकपूणि:।"

According to Kāthakya it is "Yajña". Here "Yajña" means God. cf: "विष्णु: वै यज्ञ: 1"

But Śākapūņi says that "Nārāšansa is Agni, because Agni is a common name of all Devatās."

Dayananda here differs and offers a new interpretation of this word:—"नाराशंसा = मनुष्यविवया:" "ie. Such Mantras have human beings as Devatas as they treat of men." Durgacharya also says:—"नराः प्रशंस्यन्ते येन स नाराशंसो मन्त्रः"।

- (IV) Or else Devata may be determined by "one's own option" i.e. according to one's own desire. "अप वा कामदेवता स्यात् t" Here the word "kāma" means desire or option.
- (V) "Prāyo-De vatā" i.e. such stanzas can be attributed to a number of Devatās. The number of Devatās has never been fixed so far. All respected persons e.g. God, holy guests, father and mother are Devatās.

Now what is the test for finding out the "Devata" of a "Mantra" where the name of the Devata or its mean is stated (by Yāska) that in cases where no specific (mention of a Devata) is traceable, there the "Yajña" (in which the Mantra is used) or "its component part is the Devata". The Mantras, used elsewhere than the Yajñas, have Prajāpati (i.e, God) as their Devatā. This is the view of the Yajñikas. But there is another alternative to this (theory). The Etymologists maintain that these Mantras are "Nārāšansas" i.e. deal with mankind or there may be "one's own option or desire a Devatā". Human beings generally have some particular option or desire. There is a very common practice in the world in determining Devatās by (various) alternatives. In some cases, God, in others, Action (Karma), Mother or Father, or unexpected Holy Guest, or the Learned are (to be accepted as) Devatās. They are to be revered and respected. It must be borne in mind that they are worthy of respect because they are benefactors. This is the characteristic of a Devatā. The Vedic verses have their success in Sacrifices as their main object and therefore they have Sacrifices (Yajñas) as their Devatās.

(To summarise), in the ritual portion of the Vedas (Karma-Kānda) Devatās can be enumerated in this way. The Mantras composed in metres such as Gāyatrī etc. where the ordinance of God is revealed, "Yajña" or its component parts, Prajāpati, the Creator God, men, desires, learned men, guests, mother, father or the preceptor. But in Yajñas, the Devatās are the Mantras and God only.

Moreover, (in the Nirukta the words "Deva and Mantra" are explained in the following manner):—

- (6) "Deva is so called because he is donor or shining one or illuminator or has abode in the bright regions." (N. VII. 15)
- (7) "The (word) "Mantra" is (derived) from the root √Mantr to ponder over (or to consult or deliberate)."

"The word "Chandas" is (derived from the root) $\sqrt[4]{Chad}$ to cover (or to cover over, i.e. a veil)" (N. VII. 12)

In these citations "Dāna" (donation) means to relinquish one's own proprietory rights and to create proprietory rights of another over a thing; "Dīpanam" means illumination, while "Dyotanam" indicates precepts etc. Here

^{(6) &}quot;देवो दानाद्वा दीपनाद्वा द्योतनाद्वा द्यस्थानो भवतीति वा ।" (N. VII. 15)

^{(7) &}quot;सन्त्रा मननात् छन्दांसि छादनात् ।" (N. VII. 12)

God, learned men and human beings are called Devatas (as they donate gifts to others). The Sun and others (i.e. illuminaries), are called Devatas as they shine (Dipana) or illumine. "Dyotana" indicates instructions (also). Hence mother, father, preceptor, and the holy guest are also called Devatas. God is Deva as He is illuminator, of all illuminators and as He lives in the solar or other rays or in the Sun itself or in the Prānas (vital airs).

This (view) is supported by the following evidence from the Katha Upanişad:—

(8) "The Sun shines not there, nor the Moon and the stars,
These lightnings shine not, much less this (earthly) fire!
After Him as He shines, doth every thing shine,
This whole world is illumined with His light." (KTU. V. 15)

The Sun and others cannot illumine God. They shine and illumine after Him, Who is Self-luminous, These things have no independent light. Hence, God alone is one foremost Deity to Whom all adorations are due.

In the (following) stanza from the Yajurveda:

(9) "The Sense-powers (Devas) reached not it, speeding on before."

(YV. XXXX. 4)

the word "Deva" signifies five sense-organs and the mind. They are so called because they are "dyotakas" (illuminators) of all objects, fruth and falsehood and also because they convey to us (the sensations of) sound, touch, form,

- (8) "न तब्र सूर्यो भाति न चन्द्रतारकम्
 नेमा विद्युतो भान्ति कुतोऽयमग्निः ।
 तमेव भान्तमनुभाति सर्वम्
 तस्य भासा सर्वमिवं विभाति ॥" (KTU. V. 15)

 This stanza also occurs in the Mundaka (II. 2) and Śvetāśvatara (VI. 14)
- (9) The complete stanza is :—
 'अनुजरेक मनेसो जनीयो नेनर्देवा आंप्नुबन् पूर्वमर्थेत्। तढावेतोऽन्यानत्येति तिष्ठ्ताह्मिन्त्वो मोत्रिश्चा दशक्ति ॥"(YV. XXXX. 4)
 "Unmoving, the One (Ekam) is swifter than the Mind,
 The sense-powers (Devas) reached not It, speeding on before.
 Past others running, This goes standing.
 In It, Matarisvan places action." (YV. XXXX. 4) taste and smell, The words "Deva" and "Devata" have the identical meaning. The word "Devata" is formed by adding suffix 'Tal' to Deva in accordance with the aphorism "Devat-tal" (P. V. 4.27), (i.e. suffix "Tal" be added to the word Deva)* without any change in the meaning. "Stuti" (praise) means a (faithful) description of one's merits or defects i.e. to offer a precise and correct statement of things regarding their merits or demerits. For instance, this sword, when struck, cuts exceedingly well. It is sharp-edged and shining. It does not break even if it is bent down like a bow. This is a statement of good qualities. The sword does not possess other merits. It is a "Stuti" (praise) of the sword.

The foregoing observation (regarding the significance of the Devatā) is applicable in all cases, where it occurs. But this rule is restricted to the 'Action-portion' (Karma-Kānda) only. As regards the worship and knowledge-portions (Upāsanā-kānda and Jānana-kānda) and the Niṣkāma section (i.e. where actions are performed without any selfish motive) of the (Karma-kānda) are concerned, the word "Iṣṭa-Deva" denotes God; because the attainment of God is prayed there. In the "Sakāma section" (i.e. where actions are stated to be done with some self-motive) of (Karma-kānda), Deva also means God as we pray to God for the accomplishment of the desired objects of enjoyment. This clearly establishes the difference between (Sakāma and Niṣkāma sections of the Karma-kānda). The (underlying) purport of the Vedas is that reference to God should not be omitted anywhere in them.

The evidence (in support of this view) is furnished from the Nirukta:-

(10) "Because of the highly magnanimous character of the Devata (i.e. God), His one (universal) soul is variously eulogised. Other Devas (mentioned in the Vedas) are only the parts (i.e. manifes-

Dayānanda has laboured here to prove that plurality of gods, which is being wrongly interpreted by the European scholars, is only emanation of the One and only One God. All plurality is only imaginary—an idea, which is really already expressed clearly and distinctly in the following verse:— (Contd.)

^{* &}quot;देवात् तल्।" (P. V. 4.27)

^{(10) &}quot;माहाभाग्याद्देवताया एक एवात्मा बहुधा स्तूयते । एकस्यात्मनोऽन्ये देवाः प्रत्यङ्गानि भवन्ति । कर्मजन्मान आत्मजन्मानः । आत्मैवैषां रथो भवत्यात्मा- श्व आत्मायुष्टमात्मेषव आत्मा सर्वं देवस्य देवस्य ॥" (N. VII. 4) tations) of one (Supreme) Soul. They have come into existence, because of His (manifold) acts. Their birth is due to that Soul. Their Ratha is God (i.e. the One Universal Soul). Their Asvas (horses) are God. Their weapons are also the same Soul. That Soul alone is all the Devas." (N. VII.4)

(That is to say) of all the Devatās which are helpful in our daily life, the Supreme Soul (God) is the topmost Devatā, because that One Soul is the Most Magnanimous i.e. He alone possesses all qualities e.g. Almightiness etc. No other Devatā, can claim Devatā-hood before Him, because all the Vedas repeatedly enjoin in various ways, the adoration of only One All-

"इन्द्रं मिर्त्र वरुणमिन्नमाहुरथो दिन्यः स सुपर्णो गरुत्मान् । एकं सिंद्रप्रा बहुधा वदन्त्यिन् यमं मातिरिश्वानमाहुः ॥" (RV. I. 164.46)

"They call Him Indra, Mitra, Varuṇa,
And Agni; He is the divine Garutmān,
To what is One, the poets (Sad-Vipras) give many a name.
They call it Agni, Yama, Mātariśvan."

The same idea of "one God" is also expressed in the following verse from the Rgveda:—

"रूपं रूपं मचवा वोभवीति।"

The oneness of God is clearly further described in the following stanzas:—

"तदेवाग्निस्तदादित्यस्तद्वापुस्तदु चन्द्रमाः। तदेव शुक्रं तद् ब्रह्म ता आपः स प्रजापतिः॥" (YV. XXXII. 1)

"Even He is Agni, He is Āditya, He is Vāyu, He is Candramas, He is Śukra, He is Brahma, He is Āpas, He is Prajāpati."

"अग्ने भूरोणि तव जातवेदो देव स्वधावोऽमृतस्य नाम । याश्च माया मायिनां विश्वमिन्च त्वे पूर्वीः सन्दशुः पृष्टबन्धो ॥" (RV. III. 20.3)

i.e. "Many are Thy names, O Agni! Immortal, God, Divine, Jātavedas and many Charms of charmers, All-inspirer, Have they laid in Thee, Lord of true attendants," pervading Soul (i.e. God) who is one without a second, and is self-sufficient. The other $Devat\bar{a}s$ which we already have enumerated or whom we shall enumerate later on, are figuratively the limbs of that One Universal Soul. They are manifestations of a small portion of His great power. Here the word "Pratyanga" is formed from the root \sqrt{Anca} with prefix Prati i.e. having contact with all limbs.

These (Devatās) are Action-Born (Karma-Janmānaḥ) because their birth (origin) is due to His acts. They are also called "Ātma-Janmānaḥ" as their birth is due to Divine Might.

God is the "Ratha", i.e. the resting place (Ra + tha i.e. Ramaṇa-sthāna) of all these Devatās. He is their "Aśva" i.e. the cause of movement. He is their weapon by which they triumph. He is their arrows by which they destroy calamity. (In short) He is all in all of the Devas i.e. their generator, sustainer, over-lord and benefactor. It must be borne in mind that there is nothing nobler and higher than God.

The following citations (from the Vedic text) are a few pieces of evidence to support this view:—

(11) "The thirty three Dev as who assemble in our sacrifice (Yajña) receive their shares and return (them to us) two-fold."

(RV. VI.2.35.1 or VIII. 27.1)

(12) "Eulogise (by) thirty three (Devas) and peace be established (among all created beings). God—the Lord of creature—is their over-lord and Controller." (YV.XIV.31)

This verse has differently been translated by Sayana:-

"May the three and thirty divinities sit down upon sacred grass: May they accept (our offerings) and bestow upon us both (sorts of wealth)." (RV. VIII. 27.1)

(12) "त्रयंस्त्रिण्शतास्तुवत भूतान्यंशाम्यन् प्रजापंति: । परमेष्ठ्वधिपतिरासीत् ॥" (YV. XIV. 31)

Griffith translates it thus:

"With thirty three they praised: living beings were happy, Prajāpati, the Supreme, in place, was over-lord."

- (14) "The thirty three Devas accomplish their functions (duties) in God's creation (Lit. body). Only a few learned in the Vedas comprehend these thirty three Devas." (AV. X. 7.27)
- (15) "He verily said: 'these are their majestic powers that are thirty three Devas.' Who are these thirty three Devas? (They are)

Here the word "Nidhi" means "seeret treasure". According to Prof. Goldstrucker it is "the primitive, preserved Veda, identified with Skambha."

(14) "यस्य त्रयंस्तिशद्देवा अङ्गे गाता विभेजिते । तान वै त्रयंस्तिशद्देवान् एक ब्रह्मावद्गे विदु: ॥" (AV. X. 7.27)

Some deeply versed in Holy Lore, some know these three thirty Gods." (Griffith)

Here the phrase ''अंगे गाता विभेजिरे'' has been translated by Griffith as 'were disposed as limbs'. Ludwig also shares this view. According to Muir "found their several bodies," but Subernman clears it as "distributed the limbs among them."

I have translated all these verses above according to Dayānanda whose explanation of 'thirty three gods living in our bodies' is interesting genuine and correct. These views are given in foot-notes for comparison.

(15) ''स होवाच महिमान एवंषामेते त्रयस्त्रिशत्येव देवा इति । कतमे ते त्रयस्त्रि श्रिशिदत्यध्ये वसवः, एकादश रुद्राः, द्वादशादित्यास्त एकति श्रिशत्। इन्द्रश्चेव प्रजापतिश्च ॥ त्रयस्त्रि श्रिशाविति ॥'' (SB. XIV. 5)

- (20) "What are the three Devas? They are these three regions (Lokas). All the Devas (reside) in them. What are the two Devas? They are "Anna (i.e. food) and Prāṇas" (i.e. vital airs). What is "Adhyardha"? It is the Purifier." (SB. XIV. 5)
- (21) "They say this. This (air) alone is purified. Why is it called "Adhyardha"? Because it spreads throughout the world.

Who is the One Deva? It is Brahman (i.e. the Omnipresent God). They say." (SB. XIV. 5)

The following is the import of these extracts:-

It is evident that the Brāhmaṇas explain the meaning of the Vedic verses. (The above, quotation from the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa) is a statement from Yājīnavalkya to Śākalya. There are only thirty three gods (viz.) the eight Vasus, the eleven Rudras, the twelve Ādityas and Indra and Prajāpati.

The eight Vasus are the fire, the earth, the air, the region between the earth and the Sun, the Sun, Dyau, (i.e. illuminary regions) the Moon, the constellations. These eight are called "Vasus." Aditya means the Sun. Its rays or light is Dyau. Solar rays illumine the regions round about the Sun or the earth. Agni is the terrestrial fire. They are called Vasus, because the entire creation is established in them. Moreover, they are the abodes of all beings. The Agni and others being dwelling places of all are styled as Vasus (derived from the root \sqrt{Vas} to dwell).

The following are the eleven Rudras viz; ten Prāṇas in human body and one Ātman (soul). Thus collectively taken Rudras are eleven. The ten Prāṇas (vital airs) are: (I) Prāṇa (i.e. air inhaled), (II) Apāna (i.e. outbreath), (III) Vyāna (i.e. the air causing the bodily organs to move), (IV) Samāna (i.e. the air having its seat in the cavity of the naval and is essential for digestion), (V) Udāna (i.e. life-wind which rises up the throat and enters into the head), (VI) Nāga (i.e. the wind which is expelled by eructation), (VII) Kūrma (i.e. an outer wind of the body causing the opening and closing of eye-lids), (VIII) Kṛkala (i.e. cause of yawning), (IX) Devadatta

^{(20) &}quot;कतमे ते त्रयो देवा इति ? इस एव त्रयो लोकाः । एषु हीमे सर्वे देवा इति । कतमो द्वौ देवाविति ? अन्तं च प्राणाश्चेति । कतमोऽध्यर्ध इति ? योऽयं पवत इति ।" (SB. XIV. 5)

^{(21) &}quot;तदाहु: । यदयमेक एव पवत इति । अथ कथमध्यधं इति ? यदस्मिन् इदं सर्वमध्याद्रनीत् । तेनाष्ट्रयधं इति । कतम एको देव इति ? स ब्रह्मेत्याचक्षते ।।" (SB. XIV, 5)

(i.e. which produces hunger), (X) Dhana \tilde{n} jaya (i.e. the wind that remains in the body even after death and makes it swell). When (at the time of death) they (Rudras) go out of the mortal body, the relatives of the deceased person weep. Because they make people weep, therefore they are called "Rudras" (derived from the root \sqrt{Rud} to weep).

Here are the twelve Adityas (the Suns). The twelve months beginning with Caitra (March) and ending with Phalguṇa (February) should be taken as twelve Suns. These twelve months are so called because (1) they revolve and swallow up the whole creation from all directions (derived from the root " $\mbox{\ensuremath{D}}a$ ", prefixed by A: to take away) or (II) they bring on all created beings nearer and nearer at every moment to the life's end, or (III) they move like a wheel and thus gradually bring about the decay of all parts of the successively created things and finally the inevitable death.

Because of their mighty powers, thunder and lightning are called Indra (i.e. Indra from the root \sqrt{Indi} to have mighty power).

Yajña is the animals. It is called (here) Prajapati. The word Prajapati is used here in secondary sense because both the animals and Yajña are the cause of human prosperity.

All these collectively are called thirty three Devas. As the word "Deva" is derived from the root \sqrt{Divu} to shine, to give, to conquer etc. this epithet is given to them in a secular sense (i.e. because they shine or give light or happiness to the world).

The Three Lokas (i.e. regions) are also called Devas. What are they? The author of the Nirukta says here:—

(22) "Dhāmans (i.e. Lokas) are three viz.; 'Sthānas' (regions), 'Nāmans' (i.e. names) and Janmans (i.e. births)." (N. IX. 28)

(The three Lokas are explained in the Satapatha as follows:-

(23) "These (regions) are the three Lokas. The Vak (i.e. speech) is this (earthly) Loka; Manas (i.e. mind) is Antarikşa and the Prāṇa (vital air) is that (i.e. the uppermost region)." (SB. XIV.4)

^{(22) &}quot;धामानि त्रयाणि भवन्ति—स्थानानि, नामानि, जन्मानि ॥ इति ॥" (N. IX. 28)

^{(23) &#}x27;'व्रयो लोका एत एव । वागेवायं लोको मनोऽन्तरिक्षलोकः, प्राणोऽसौ लोकः ।'' (SB. XIV. 4)

These are also the three Devas:

The food (Anna) and the breath (Prana) are the two Devas.

"Adhyardha" which is also called "Sūtra-atma" (i.e. life-thread) of the whole cosmos is "Vāyu" (i.e. wind) as it causes the whole world to grow. This is also called Deva.

But, are all of them to be invoked or worshipped?

No. It is only Brahman, who alone is to be worshipped. He is the Creator of the universe, Almighty, the Object of all worships and adorations, All-sustainer, Omni-present, the Origin of all, Eternal, All-consciousness, All-bliss, Unborn, Just and has other such (qualities and) attributes. He alone, the One, the thirty fourth Deva, the Supreme Lord is to be worshipped by all men. He alone is the ultimate goal of all the Vedas.

The Aryas, who adhered to the path, prescribed in the Vedas, always worshipped Him alone (in the past), do worship Him (in the present) and will continue to worship Him alone (in the future). The worship of a deity other than Him results in non-Aryan character of human beings. It is an established fact.

The (undermentioned) evidence supports this view :-

(24) "One should worship $\overline{A}tman$ (i.e. Omni-present Soul—God) alone. If some one happens to say to some one who proclaims another than $\overline{A}tman$ (i.e. God) as dear (God) then he would lament for what is dear to him, most probably it would be so. He should worship $\overline{A}tman$ (i.e. God) alone as dear. He, who worships $\overline{A}tman$ alone as dear; his Dear One (i.e. God) does not lead him to ruin. He who worships another deity, knows nothing. He is like a beast among the learned men (Devas)." (SB. XIV. 4)

From this historical document it is quite evident that the Aryans were never the worshippers of another than God.

The final conclusion, therefore, is as follows: -

The word Deva contains all the ten meanings of the root \sqrt{Divu} , viz; (I) play, (II) desire to conquer, (III) general activity, (IV) glory, (V) praise,

^{(24) &#}x27;'आत्मेत्येवोपासीत्। स घोऽन्यमात्मानः प्रियं ब्रुवाणं ब्रूयात् प्रियं श्रेतेत्स्यती-तीश्वरोह तथैव स्यादात्मानमेव प्रियमुपासीतः। स य आत्मानमेव प्रियमुपास्ते न हास्य प्रियं प्रमायुकं भवति। योऽन्यां देवतामुपास्ते न स वेद यथा पशुरेव अस्ति स देवानाम् ॥'' (SB. XIV. 4)

(VI) delight, (VII) rapture (Moda), (VIII) sleep, (IX) beauty (Kanti) and (X) progressiveness (Gati). These meanings are applicable equally in both the cases. But (the difference between God and other Devas is that) all other Devatas receive light from God, while He (GOD) alone is Self-effulgent. Of these (10 meanings) Krīdā (i.e. sport), Vijigīsā (i.e. desire to subdue the wicked), Vyavahāra (i.e. daily routine), Svapna (i.e. sleep), Mada (i.e. despair) are mainly the worldly activities. The Devatās e.g. fire etc. are the causes of success in daily activities. Here also we cannot discard entirely the sense of God, because He is a (universal) All-pervading (force) and the Creator and Supporter of all.

But Dyuti i.e. luster or enlightenment, Stuti i.e. the statement of one's real merits, Moda i.e. delight, Kanti i.e. glory or beauty, and Gati i.e. knowledge, advancement and acquisition are directly and precisely the qualities of God. As other Devatas derive their powers from God, i.e. these qualities exist in them in secondary sense; so God's Devatahood is primary and in case of others it is secondary only.

Some people raise objection here. As the Vedas ordain the worship of both, the sentient and non-sentient beings, their authoritativeness becomes dubious. (To meet this objection) we maintain that this is erroneous. has imparted specific qualities in all the objects. For instance, He planted the eyes with a specific power of grasping the form and colour. Hence, only he, who has eyes, is able to perceive and not the blind. Hence, this objection is as futile as the one as to why God has not given us power to see the form and colour without the help of the eye and the Sun. (The word "Pūja" does not mean only worship. In reality it means proper treatment). The word "Pūjā" has the (following) synonyms, viz; Satkāra (i.e. to treat properly), Priyācaraņa (i.e. to behave agreeably), and Anukūla Ācaraņa (i.e. to act in conformity with a person or thing). In this way all men do Pūjā to the eyes also. As far as the fire etc. have the quality of showing us various objects and are useful in our search for knowledge, they may have the epithet of Devata and there is no harm (lit. objection) in calling them so, Because wherever, in the Vedas the worship (of Devata) is enjoined, the term (Devatā) connotes God and God alone.

Again. there are two systems (Matas). According to one, Devatas have a body and according to another they have no corporeal existence. We have already dealt with both of them.

In addition to the above-mentioned Devatas, the following five Devas who are to be worshipped by all men, are stated in the "Taittiriya Upanişad":—

- (25) "Be one to whom a mother is as a god.

 Be one to whom a father is as a god.

 Be one to whom a teacher is as a god.

 Be one to whom a guest is as a god." (TU. I. 11, TA. VII. 11)
- (26) "Thou, indeed, art the perceptible Brahma.

 Of thee, indeed, the perceptible Brahma, will I speak."

 (TA. VII. 1, TU. I. 1)

Here, mother, father, preceptor and guest are stated to be Devas (gods) having corporeal form. Similarly, while Brahma is absolutely formless.

Of these aforesaid Devatās, the five Vasus viz; fire, earth, Sun, Moon and stars have a body. But eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, the organs of sense with mind as the sixth, the wind, Antariksa, Dyau and the Mantras are Devatās having no corporeal form. Thunder—bolt and the lightning (electricity) and the prescribed Yajñas (Vidhi-Yajñas) are both, embodied as well as bodiless. Thus there are two categories of Devatās e.g. those with a body and those without a body. Their Devatā-hood is based upon their utility in our daily life. Similarly, Devatā-hood of mother, father, teacher and (holy) guest consists of their being useful in the affairs of this world and also in the matters relating to spiritual sphere.

But the object of our worsaip is only God because He is our supreme goal and also the greatest helper. It is, therefore, decided that the Vedas ordain the worship of God alone and of none else.

Some of the modern Aryans (i.e. Indians) and Europeans maintained and still maintain the view that the Vedas ordain the worship of physical Devas (i.e. gods) alone. This view, therefore, is absolutely false. Many Europeans hold that the Aryans in the beginning were the worshippers of material gods and with the passage of long ages thereafter gradually could know that God alone is to be worshipped. It is also false. But the real fact is that since the commencement of the creation, Aryas have been worshipping "One God" alone, under various names e.g. Indra, Varuna, Agni etc. in accordance with the manner prescribed in the Vedas.

(TA. VII. 1; TU, I. 1)

^{(25) &}quot;मातृदेवो भव । पितृदेवो भव । आचार्यदेवो भव । अतिथिदेवो भव ॥" (TU. I. 11; TA. VII. 11)

^{(26) &}quot;त्वमेव प्रत्यक्षं ब्रह्मासि । त्वामेव प्रत्यक्षं ब्रह्म विद्वामि ॥"

We give a few quotations from the Vedas in support of this view :-

- (27) "I eulogise God (Agni), the Self-effulgent, the Supporter of this universe, (from all eternity), the Illuminator (of all activity), the only Object of adorations in all seasons and the Most Bounteous and the Greatest Donor of splendid riches." (RV. I.1.1)
- (28) "The wise call the Adorable God, Indra (i.e. the Omnipotent), Mitra (i.e. the Friend of all), Varuna (i.e. the Holiest) and He also is (according to them) Divya (i.e. the Shining One), Suparna (i.e. Protector and Preserver), Gurutmān (i.e. the Mighty Spirit). (Though) He is one Unitary Being, they speak of Him in various ways, (sometimes calling Him) Agni (i.e. the Self-Effulgent), (sometimes) Yama (i.e. the Controller of the world) and (sometimes) Matariśvan (i.e. the Life-Energy of the Universe)."

(RV. I.164.46)

In the course of our commentary on this verse we have also cited the following remarks from the Nirukta:

(29) "The sages describe in many ways this very Agni—the great One Universal Soul, Who is one (without a second)." (N. VII.18)

The Yajur-Veda voices the same idea :-

(30) "Verily He is Agni (i.e. the All-Knowing), He is Aditya (i.e. the Imperishable); He is Vāyu (i.e. the Mover of all the world) and

- (27) ''अगिनमीले पुरोहितं युज्ञस्य देवमृत्विजीम् । होतांरं रतन्धार्तमम् ।।'' (RV. I. 1.1)
- (28) "इन्द्रं मित्रं वरुणमिनमाहुरयो दिन्यः स सुपर्णो गरुत्मान् । एकं सिंद्रशा बहुद्या वदन्त्यींन यमं मातरिश्वानमाहुः ॥" (RV. I. 164.46)
- (29) ''इममेवाग्नि महान्तमात्मानमेकात्मानं विबद्धधाः मेधावितो वदन्ति ॥'' (N. VII. 18)
- (30) "तदेवाग्निस्तदादित्यस्तद्वायुस्तदु चन्द्रमाः । तदेव शुक्रं तद् ब्रह्म ता आपः स प्रजापितः ॥" (YV. XXXII. 1) (Contd.)

Dayananda, being the greatest Vedic scholar of this age, has quoted here a number of verses from the Vedas to show that the ancient Aryans did positively know about "One God." The word Agni as supposed by some scholars does not merely mean terrestrial fire in the first instance. Primarily all such words in the Vedas signify God. Only in the secondary sense they indicate fire etc. The following question put in the Regueda and the answer given to it here leave no doubt as to the use of the word "Agni" to denote the "Supremr Being":—

"कस्य नूनं कतमस्यामृतानां मनामहे चारु देवस्य नाम । को नो मह्या अदितये पुनर्दात् पितरं च दृशेयं मातरं च ॥" (RV. I. 24.1)

i.e. "Who is that amongst all the immortal beings, possessed of divine attrributes whose charming name we shall contemplate? What is that Being who will give us birth again on earth so that we may see father and mother?" (RV. I. 24.2)

To this question the answer is as follows:—

"अग्नेर्वयं प्रथमस्यामृतानां मनामहे चारु देवस्य नाम । स नो मह्या अदितये पुनर्दात् पितरं च दृशेये मातरं च ॥" (RV. I. 24.2)

i.e. "We shall contemplate the charming name of Agni (the Self-effulgent God) Who is the foremost of all the immortal beings, possessed of divine attributes. He will give us birth again on earth so that we may see father and mother." (RV. I. 24.2)

Suerly the ordinary kitchen-fire, or that blazing in the biggest blasting furnace on earth, or even the Sun, can be said to have the qualities mentioned in the above verse. Nor can any wise devotee be expected to give vent to the grand emotion, embodied in the following verse of the Rgveda in addressing the physical fire:—

"यदग्ने स्यामहं त्वं त्वं वा घा स्यामहम् । स्युष्टे सत्या इहाशिषः ॥" (RV. VIII. 44.23)

i.e. "Agni, (i.e. O Lord, Omniscient), that I should ever experience myself subsisting in Thee and that Thou mayset always be immanent in me, in this, indeed, is the fulfilment of Thy Blassings."

(c) "यस्येमे हिमर्वन्तो महित्वा यस्यं समुद्रं रसया सहाहुः । यस्येमाः प्रदिशो यस्यं त्राह कस्ये देवायं द्विषां विधेम ॥" (RV. X. 121.4)

"i.e. Whose greatness, these snow-clad mountains and the ocean with its (vast) waters proclaim; Whose arms are these vast regions; He, the All Blissful, it is to Whom we shall offer our prayes."

"i.e. when these vast APAS (i.e. the diffused matter in liquid form) holding the universe in their womb and producing AGNI (i.e. igneous state) manifested themselves, He was the one life of the Devas. He, it is to Whom we shall offer our prayers."

(YV. XXXII.9)

(Contd. from page 98)

"i.e. He, Who with His greatness looked upon that APAS (i.e. the diffused matter) endowed with energy and producing the YAJÑA (i.e. cosmos), Who is one supreme Lord of all the Devas, He, it is to Whom we shall offer our prayers."

(h) "मा नो हिसीज्जिन्तिता यः पृथि्ब्या– यो ना दिनं सुत्यर्थमा जजानं। यश्चापश्चन्द्रा वृद्धतीर्ज्जिन् कस्में देवार्य हुविषां विधेम ॥" (RV. X. 121.9)

"i.e. May He, the Lord of righteousness, Who is the generator of this earth, Who created these luminary regions and who made this vast and shining diff'used matter manifest itself, not harm us. He, it is to Whom we shall offer our prayers."

(33) "प्रतहोंचेद्रमृतं नु विद्वान् गन्धवों धामु बिर्श्वतं गुहा सत्। ब्रीणि पुदानि निर्दिता गुहांस्य यस्तानि वेद स पितुः पिता संत्॥" (YV. XXXII. 9)

In this stanza the following words deserve notice:

- (a) प्र+वोचेत्=(P. III. 1.86 & VII. 4.20) i.e. teaches about.
- (b) Amṛtam (নল্+ দূত্+ কর = (P. III. 2.102 or Tan, U. III. 88) (রনিমূত়্≎যা কিচৰ U. III. 88) Imperishable.
- (c) Gandharva: (गां=बेरवाचं, धरति, गो+धूज्+व—U. I. 155 & P. VII 3.109) i.e. Protector of the Vedic lore.
 - (d) Guhā: i.e. in the intellect.
 - (e) Padani: (✓पद+अच्) i. e. states or positions (of the universe).
 - (f) Pituh Pitā Asat: to be respected among the elderly people.

- (34) "He is our Kin, our generator (Janita) and our supporter. He knows all the places and regions. In Him, the learned men taste of immortality (i.e. Am_Tta i.e. salvation) and enjoy the bliss of that highest station." (YV. XXXII.10)
- (35) "Only an enlightened man can, after studying (Upasthāya), the eternal Vedic lore (Prathamajām) (and properly abiding by it) realise by a sincere effort from his heart and soul that Supreme Lord, Who encompasses all the creatures and all the regions, pervades all the quarters of the universe and is Immanent in the very essence of truth (in mind, speech and deeds)."

(YV. XXXII. 11)

(34) "स नो बन्धुंर्जनिता स विधाता धामानि वेद भुवनानि विश्वी । यत्रे देवा अमृतमानशानास्तृतीये धार्मन्तृध्येरयन्त ।" (YV. XXXII. 10)

Here the word 'Amrtam' means bliss of spiritual emancipation.

' $T_{r}tt\bar{t}ye$ Dhāman': Place or source i.e. source of final beatitude; Who is the source of final emancipation and is quite distinct from the primordial matter and the individual soul.

(35) ''पुरीत्यं भृतानि पुरीत्यं छोकान् पुरीत्य सबीः प्रदिशो दिशेश्च। जुपुस्थायं प्रथम्जामृतस्यात्मन्।तमानेमुभि सं विवेश ॥"

(YV. XXXII. 11)

- (a) 'Parītya': Having pervaded from all sides.
- (b) 'Upasthaya': (उप+√ण्ठा (गितिनिवृत्तौ) + ल्यप् i. e. Having studied, having well practised.
- (c) 'Prathamajām': (प्रथममुत्पन्ताम् । प्रथम + जा ; √ जिनि + विट् P. III.2.67; VI.4.41) i. e. the Vedic lore; the four Vedas revealed in the beginning of the first creation.
- (d) 'Rtasya Atmanam': the very essence of truth in thought, word and deed.

(36) "I know this Supreme Being; the Greatest of all, the Selfeffulgent Sun, that dispels the darkness (of ignorance that mars man's mind) and is Himself ever beyond it. Man can reach his goal-emancipation-only by knowing and worshipping Him alone, and there is no other way of achieving this," i

(YV. XXXI.18)

(37) "It moves, It moves not.It is far, and It is near.It is within all this.And It is outside of all this."

(YV. XXXX.5)

(38) "He has environed. The bright, the bodiless, the scatheless,

The sinewless, the pure (Suddha), unpierced by evil (Apapa Viddha).

Wise (Kavi), intelligent (Manīṣī), encompassing (Paribhū) self existent (Svayambhū).

(36) "बेद्राहमेतं पुरुषं महान्तमादित्यवर्णं तमसः पुरस्तीत् । तमेव विदित्वाऽतिमृत्युमेति नान्यः पन्यो विद्यतेऽयेनाय ॥"

(YV. XXXI, 18)

Griffith translates this verse thus: "I know this mighty Purusha, whose colour is like the Sun, beyond the reach of darkness."

He only, who knows him, leaves Death behind him. There is no path save this alone to travel.

(37) ''तद्रेजित तन्ते जेति तद्दूरे तद्रेन्तिके। तद्नतरस्य सर्वस्य तद् सर्वस्यास्य वाह्यतः ॥'' (YV. XXXX. 5)

This verse also occurs in the Isa Upanişad. The same idea is also expressed with some variation in words in the Bhagavad Gītā (XIII.15):

"बहिरन्तञ्च भूतानामचरं चरमेव च। सूक्ष्मत्वात्तदिवज्ञेयं दूरस्यं चान्तिके च तत्।।"

(38) ''स पर्यंगाच्छुकर्मक्रायमंग्रण-मंस्नाविर⁹⁹ शुद्धमपीपविद्धम् । कृविमैनीषी पेरिभूः स्वेयुम्भूः योषातथ्युतोऽर्थान् व्यवद्यात् शाश्वतीभ्युः समोभ्यः ॥" (YV. XXXX. 8)

- Appropriately He distributed objects (Arthan), through the eternal years." (YV. XXXX.8)
- (39) "He makes gifts of all these words; the Seer, the Generous Lord, the Omni-present, our Father; His wish is riches. He pervades the entire creation, the earliest as well as the lasts."

 (YV. XVII.17)
- (40) "What was the place, where He took His seat? What was it, that upheld Him? What was the (specific) method? By which the Universal creator, beholding all-generating this earth, brought to light this heaven by His powers." (YV. XVII.18)
- (41) "He keeps eyes on all directions, a mouth on all directions and arms and feet on all directions. He, the One Unitary God, creating this earth and heaven, establishes them appropriately like the wings (of a bird) with His Might."

(YV. XVII. 19) (RV. X. 81.3)

These and other such verses are (found) in the Yajurveda. Similarly in the second half (ৱলংগাৰিক) of the Sāmaveda':—

- (39) "य इमा विश्वा भूवनानि जुह्ब्द्
 ऋषिहोंता न्यसीवत् पिता नै: ।
 स आशिपा द्रविणमिच्छमानः
 प्रथमच्छ्रवर्तरां ॥ २ ॥ आविवेश ॥" (YV. XVII. 17)
- (40) 'कि¹⁹ स्विदासीदश्चिष्ठानेम् आरम्भणं कतुमत् स्वित् कृषासीन् । यत्रो भूमि जुनर्यन् विश्वकर्मा विद्यामौणीन्महिना विश्वचेकाः । (YV. XVII. 18)
- (41) "विश्वतंश्चक्षुकृत विश्वतोषुखो विश्वतोवाहुकृत विश्वतंस्पात् । सं बाहुभ्यां धर्मात् सं पतंत्रैद्यावाभूमा जुनर्यन् द्वेव एकः ॥" अधिकार्यः

(YV. XVII. 19; RV. X.81.3)

The second half of this verse can better be translated as: "He, the sole God, producing earth and heaven, wields them together with his arms as wings." Cf.: "ब्रह्मणस्पतिरेता सं कर्मार इवामवत्"। (RV. X 72 2)

"(i.e. These, the Creator, produced with blast and smelting like Smith.)" Also, Cf. RV. IV.2.17.

- (42) "We, like, the unmilked kine, clamour aloud, O Gracious Indra (i.e. God), the Hero, unto Thee. Thou art the Supreme Lord of every thing that moves and of that which does not move and Thy vision encompasses (the entire creation including) heaven." (SV.)
- (43) "O Glorious Lord (Indra), there is no one like unto Thee, of earth or of the luminary regions, none has been born or ever will be born. We pray, O Lord, grant us power and wealth in horses or in cattle." (SV.)

These and similar other verses are found in the Samaveda. Beginning with the following stanza:—

- (44) "There was not the non-existent (Asat i.e. the perishable manifested cosmos), nor the existent (Sat i.e. the earliest state of matter evolved out of the primordial matter for creation of the universe) then; there was not the air nor the sky beyond them. What did it encompass? Where? (Kuhu?), under whose protection? What were the waters, which were unfathomable and profound?" (RV. X.129.1)
 - ३१२ ३१२ (42) "अभित्वा शूर नो नुमोऽदुग्धा इव धेनवः। १२३ २र ३२३१२ ३१२ ईशानमस्य जगतः स्वर्धशमीशानमिन्द्र तस्युषः॥" ∰(SV.)
 - १ २ इ ३ ३ १ २ इ ३ १ २ र (43) "न त्या वाँ अन्यो दिन्यो न पाधियो न जातो न जिन्ह्यते।

 ३ १ ३ ३ १२३१२
 अश्वत्यन्तो मधविन्निन्द्युवाजिनो गत्यन्तस्त्वा हवामहे॥" (SV.)
 (साममन्त्रेषु स्वराङ्कनमस्माकम्।)
 - (44) ''नार्सवासीन्नो सर्वासीत् त्वानीम् , नासीद्वजो नो ब्योमा पुरी यत् । किमार्वरीवः कुहु कस्य शर्मन् , अम्भुः किमासीत् गर्दनं गभुरिम् ॥'' (RV. X. 129. 1)

Professor Macdonell translates it as:—"There was not the non-existent nor the existent then. There was not the air nor the heaven which is beyond. What did it contain? Where? In whose protection? Was there water unfathomable, profound?"

and ending with the following (there are seven stanzas in the Rgveda to support this view):

- (45) "From whom this creation came into existence; whether He supported it or not? (Who else can, if He does not?) Whoever is the Supervisor of also the highest heaven; He verily knows or does not know. (i.e. who knows it if He also does not know)." (RV. X. 129.7)
 - (45) "इयं विस्विष्ट्यंते आतुभूत्र यदि वा दुधे यदि वा न । यो अस्याध्येक्षः पर्मे व्यॉमन् सो अङ्क वेद यदि वा न वेदं ॥" (RV. X.129.7)

"Whence this creation has arisen? Whether He founded it or did not?; He Who in the highest heaven is its surveyor, He only knows or else He knows not."

(Macdonell)

The first and the last verses have been cited above from the Hymn of Creation by our author. The intervening five stanzas which have been referred to here are given below:—

(I) "न मृत्युरसिद्भृतं न तर्हि न राह्या अहने आसीत् प्रकेतः, आनीदेवातं स्वधया तदेकं तस्मोद्धान्यन्त पुरः किञ्चनासं ॥" (RV. 1.129.2)

"There was not death nor the immortality then. There was not the emblem of night nor of day. That One (God) existed (lit.=breathed) without agitation ($a+v\bar{a}ta$. From the root $\sqrt{v\bar{a}}$ to move; or windless) by His own might. Other than Him there was not any thing beyond."

(II) ''तर्स आसीत् तर्मसा गूल्हमध्येऽप्रकेतं साळुलं सर्वमा हुबम् । तुच्छयेनु।भवपिहितं यदासीत् तर्पसस्तन्महिनाजायुर्तकेम् ॥" (RV. X. 129.3)

"There was darkness in the beginning concealed by darkness; indistinguishable, this all was water, (i.e. entire original matter in liquid form) or (the word SALILA may mean chaos). Whatever came into being was covered with void. The One created the cosmos by His mighty greatness (or that one arose through the power of heat"). (Contd.)

(III) ''कामुस्तवध्रे सर्मवर्तेताि मर्नस्रो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । स्तो बन्धुमर्सति निर्रविन्दन् हृदि प्रतीध्यो कृवयों मनीषा ।'' (RV. X. 129.4)

"In the beginning, then Desire came upon that. This (Desire) was the first seed of mind. Sages searching in their hearts discovered the bond of the existent with the non-existent."

(IV) "तिरुश्चीनो विर्ततो रुद्दिमरेवाम् अधः स्विदासी ३टुपिरं स्विदासी ३त्। रेतोघा अप्तिन् मिहुमानं आसन् स्वुधा अवस्तात् प्रयंति: पुरस्तात् ॥"

(RV. X. 129. 5)

"Their (of sages) cord(Raśmin i. e. cord of knowledge) was extended across; was there below or was there above? There were impregnators (i. e. Retodhas i. e. the germs of life), there were mighty forces, there was energy below (i. e. at one place), there was impulse above (i. e. at another place)."

The meaning of "Cord" (Rasmin) is not here very certain but it seems to be an explanation of 'Bandhu' (i. e. bond) in the above verse. The word 'Eṣām' here refers to 'sages'. This whole means that whatever was below or whatever was above was traversed by the light of these sages.

(V) ''को अद्भा वेंद् क इह प्रवीचृत् कुत् आजाता कुर्त इयं विस्विटः । अविद्वा अस्य विसर्जनेनाया को वेंद् यतं आव्भूवं ॥'' (RV. X. 129. 6)

"Who knows rightly? Who shall here declare? Whence has it (creation) sprung up? Verily there were shining ones after the (process of) this creation. Who knows (then) from where it came?"

After giving the faithful translation of this Hymn of Creation, it is desirable to write here a brief explanatory note as the whole hymn is rather cryptic. It describes the pre-birth conditions of the world and in a language most befitting the theme. The light came into being much after the original process. In the absence of this light, it was not possible to offer a precise picture and definite description. Hence we find here a language of negation. We cannot say that there was nothing. Something cannot come out of nothing. Even Sankara believes that a Universal Soul existed. Therefore we find negation of both 'SAT' as well as that of 'ASAT'.

Here, therefore, the words Sat and Asat have special meaning. I think the word Sat here denotes creation or created objects. It is evident that there were no such things. Else the process of creation would have meaningless.

It is very interesting to understand and compare the two lists of things which contain separately things—negated and things affirmed.

The things negated are :-

(I) Asat: Non-existent or non-being.

(II) Sat : Existent i.e. created objects.

(III) Rajas : Globes.

(IV) Vyoma: Firmament.

(V) Mrtyu: Death.

(VI) Amṛta: Immortality i. e. life.

(VII) Praketa (of day & night): Distinction between night and day, i. e. emblem of day and night.

Now the question is, 'Was there anything then?' "What was that?' They are:

(I) Avāta Ekam : One immoveable Being.

(II) Svadhā : The matter. The main cause of the creation. (Sva+√Dhā to support).

(III) Tamas : Darkness i. e. negation of distinction.

(IV) A-Praketam

Salilam : Undistinguishable fluid.

(V) Abhu : Something covered by void.

(VI) Kāma ; Will or desire,

(Contd. from page 106)

(VII) Retodha : Seed-bearers. Impregnators.

(IX) Prayati : Energizing power or impulse.

The unimaginable and indescribable conditions cannot be expressed in words. Words or all expressions are things of post creation. It is why the Hymn is indefinite about the exact way in which true conditions can be described.

It is quite clear from the critical examination of this hymn that the following statement of Professor Macdonell is not reasonable:—

"In the following cosmogonic poem, the origin of the world is explained as the evolution of the existent (Sat) from the non-existent (Asat)."

We cannot agree with him because the Mantras are definite about two things:—

- (I) In the pre-creation period there was something.
- (II) These were more than one thing i.e. plurality is the main theme of this Hymn.

The following points support our conclusion:

- (I) 'Tapasaḥ Mahinā Ajāyata' i. e. This creation is the result of the greatness of energy. It is not "chance-sprung."
- (II) 'Svadhā Avastāt; Prayatiḥ Parastāt,' i.e. Matter below and Will above. This clearly indicates the superiority of the Creator over the matter.
- (III) 'Retadha Asan': i,e. "There were seed-bearers". Sayana explains this phrase as:

"रेतसो बीजमूतस्य कर्मणो विधातारः। मोक्तारश्च जीवा आसन्।।"

- i. e. "There were souls which are the bearers of action = seeds and their enjoyers".
- (IV) 'Mahimanah': I think this word refers to the great souls which have been liberated from the cycle of action.

- (46) "That multiformed Universe, which Prajāpati created, the highest, the mid-most and the lowest—how for did God (Skambha) pervade it? What part was that which did He leave unpervaded?"

 (AV. X. 7,8)
- (47) Who is that God Skambha (Lord of Creatures), on whom, the earth, the intermediate region and the heaven are established as their foundation and where the fire, the moon, the sun and the air take their shelter?" (AV. X. 7.12)

These and similar other many verses are tracable in the Atharvaveda also. Of these verses, some have already been explained, the others will be explained hereafter. This being not the proper place we do not explain them here. The following citations are from the Upanişads:

(48) "More minute than the minute, greater than the great, Is the Soul (ātman) that is set in the heart of a creature here. One who is without the active will (a-kratu) beholds

Him and becomes freed from sorrow-

When by the grace (Prasada) of the Creator (Dhatr) he beholds the greatness of the Soul.' (KTU II. 20)

- (46) "यत्पर्ममेव् मं यच्चे मध्यमम् प्रजापितः ससृजे विश्मरूपम् । क्रियेता स्कृम्मः प्रविवेशः तत्र यन्न प्राविशत् कियत्तद् वेभूव ॥'' (AV. X. 7. 8)
- (47) ''यस्मिन् भूभिर्न्तरिशं द्यौर्यस्मिन् अध्याहिता । यत्नाग्निश्चन्द्रमाः सूर्यो वातुस्तिष्ठन्त्यपिताः । स्कुम्भं तं बृहि कतुमः स्विदेव सः ॥'' (AV. X. 7. 12)
- (48) "अणोरणीयान्, महतो महीयान् आत्मास्य जन्तीनिहितं गुहायाम् । तमऋतुः पश्यति वीतशोकः धातुः प्रसादान् महिमानमात्मनः ॥"

(KTU. 11. 20)

The doctrine of Grace (PRASADA) is clearly stated here. This idea is found earlier in the celebrated Hymn of VAC (RV. X. 125. 5) and again in the Mundaka (XXXII. 3); Sankara interprets this word 'PRASADA' as reace or tranquility attained through Samadhi.

- (49) "What is soundless, touchless, formless, imperishable,
 Likewise, tasteless, constant, odourless,
 Without beginning, without end, higher than the great, stable—
 By beholding That, one is liberated from the mouth of death."
 (KTU. III. 15)
- (50) "Whatever is here, that is there,
 What is there, that again is here.
 He obtains death after death
 Who seems to see a difference there." (KTU. IV. 10)
- (51) The Inner Soul (Antar-atma) of all things, the One Controller, Who makes his one from many fold-The wise who perceive Him as standing in oneself, They, and no others, have eternal happiness." (KTU. V. 12)
- (52) "Him, who is the eternal among the non-eternal, the intelligent among intelligences,

 The One among many, who grants desiresThe wise who perceive Him as standing in oneself,

 They, and no other, have eternal peace." (KTU. V. 13)
 - (49) ''अशब्दमस्पर्शमरूपमञ्ययम्, तथाऽरसं नित्यभगन्धवच्च यत् । अनाद्यनन्तं महतः परं ध्रुवम् निचाय्य तं मृत्युमुखात् प्रमुच्यते'' ।। (KTU. III. 15)
 - (50) ''यदेवेह तदमुत्र यदमुत्र तदेवेह (तदन्विह)। मृत्यो: स मृत्युमाप्नोति य इह नानेव पश्यति"।। (KTU. IV. 20)
- (51) "एको वशी सर्वमूतान्तरात्मा एकं रूपं बहुधा यः करोति । तमात्मस्थं ये नु पञ्चन्ति धीराः तेषां सुखं शाश्वतं नेतरेषाम्" ॥ (KTU. V. 12)
 - (52) "नित्यो नित्यानां चेतनश्चेतनानाम्, एको बहूनां यो विद्याति कामान् । तमात्मस्यं येऽनुपश्यन्ति श्रीराः तेषां शान्तिः शाश्वती नेतरेषाम्" ॥
 (KTU. V. 13)

- (53) "Heavenly (Divya) formless is the Person (Puruṣa)

 He is without and within, unborn,

 Breathless (a-prāṇa), mindless (a-manas), pure (Śubhra)

 Higher than the high, Imperishable." (MUU. II. 1.2)
- (54) "He, who is all-knowing, all-wise,
 Whose is this greatness on the earthHe is in the divine Brahma-city*
 And in the heaven established," (MUU. II. 2.7)
- (55) "Not inwardly cognitive (antaḥ-prajña), not outwardly cognitive (bahiḥ-prajña), not both-wise cognitive (Ubhayataḥ prajña), not a cognition-mass (prajñanaghana), not cognitive (prajña), not non-cognitive (Ā-prajña), unseen (a-dṛṣṭa), with which there can be no dealing (a-vyavahārya), ungraspable (a-grāhya), having no distinctive mark (a-lakṣaṇa), non-thinkable (a-cintya), that cannot be designated (a-vyapadeśya), the essence of the assurance of which is the state of being one with the Self (ekātmya-pratyaya-sāra), the cessation of development (prapañca-upaśama), tranquil (śānta), benign (śiva), without a second (a-dvaita)-such they think is the fourth. He is the Ātman. He should be discerned."
- (56) "He, who knows Brahman as the real (Satya), as knowledge
 (Jñana), as the infinite (Ananta),
 Set down in the secret place (of the heart) and in the highest heaven (Parame-Vyoman);
 - (53) ''विध्यो ह्यमूत्तंः पुरुषः स वाह्याभ्यन्तरो ह्यजः । अप्राणो ह्यमनाः शुभ्रः अक्षरात् परतः परः' ॥ (MUU. II. 1. 2)
 - (54) "यः सर्वेज्ञः सर्वेविद्यस्यैव महिमा मृति । कियो ब्रह्मपुरे ह्रोव व्योग्न्यात्मा प्रतिब्ठितः ॥" (MUU. II. 2. 7)
 - * i.e. "in the body" as in Chandogya (VIII. 1. 1).
- (55) ''नान्तः प्रज्ञं न बहिः प्रज्ञं नोभयतः प्रज्ञं न प्रज्ञानघनं न प्रज्ञं नाप्रज्ञम् । अबुब्दमध्यवहार्यमग्राह्यमलक्षणमिन्त्यमध्यपदेश्यमेकात्म्यप्रत्ययसारं प्रपञ्चोपशमं शान्तं शिवमद्वंतं चतुर्यं मन्यन्ते, स आत्मा स विज्ञेयः" ।। (MU. VII)
- (56) ''सत्यं ज्ञानमनम्तं ब्रह्म यो वेद निहितं गुहायाम् परमे व्योमन् । सोश्नुते सर्वान् कामान् ब्रह्मणा सह विपश्चितितं" ।। (TU. II. 1. 1)

He obtains all desires,

Together with the intelligent (Vipascit) Brahman." (TU. II. 1.1)

- (57) "Verily a Plenum is the same as Pleasure. There is no Pleasure in the small. Only a Plenum is Pleasure. But one must desire to understand the Plenum (Bhūman)." (CHU. VII. 23)
- (58) "Where one sees nothing else, hears nothing else, understands nothing else—that is a Plenum (Bhūman). But where one sees something else—hears something else, understands something else—that is small. Verily Plenum is the same as the Immortal; but the small is the same as the mortal."

"That Plenum, Sir; on what is it established?"
"On its own greatness." (CHU. VII. 24)

From all these quotations we must admit that since the commencement of the creation upto this day, Aryans worshipped that One God Who is described in the Vedas as Iśana (i.e. One Controller), and Whom the Upanişads eulogise as 'More minute than the minute.' Therefore, the statement of Professor Max Müller that "in the beginning Aryans had no conception of One God" and that "it is the result of gradual evolution," is not acceptable by the learned.

The German Professor Max Müller while commenting upon the Mantra, "Hiranya Garbhah etc." (RV. VIII. 7.3) (translated above) in his book entitled 'The History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature' says that this verse is comparatively recent than the Chandas. But this is not tenable. Again he divides the Vedas into two parts i.e. (1) Chandas and (2) Mantra. He, then defines the Chandas as the type of composition which contains a common place theme, bereft of originality and which is only a rhapsody flowing spontaneously from the mouth of an idiot. According to him, the upper limit of the date of such composition cannot be earlier than 3100 years and the upper limit in the case of the Mantra-composition cannot be prior to 2900 years. In support of his view he advances the authority of the following and similar other verses:

^{(57) &}quot;यो वे भूमा तत्सुखं, नाल्पे सुखमस्ति । भूमैव सुखम् । भूमा त्वेव विजिन्नासितक्य इति" ।। (CHU. VII. 23)

^{(58) &#}x27;'यत्र नान्यत् पश्यित नान्यत् श्रृणोति ज्ञान्यत् विज्ञानाति स भूमा । अथ यत्रान्यत् पश्यित अन्यत् श्रृणोति अन्यत् विज्ञानाति तवल्पम् । यो वं भूमा तदमृतम् । अथ यवल्पं तन्मर्यम् । स मगवः कस्मिन् प्रतिष्ठित इति'' स्वे महिस्निः ।''

(59) "Agni (God) is to be worshipped by the both—earlier as well as the later-sages ..." (RV. I. 1.2)

But this is also erroneous. Because he does not know the correct meaning of the word "Hiranya Garbha". According to the following statement from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa:—

(60) "Hiranya means Jyoti and Jyoti is immortality i.e. Hiranya." (SB. VI. 7.1.2)

Hiranya means Jyoti and Jyoti means immortality (i.e. final emancipation). (To explain these terms the following quotations are to be taken into consideration):

- (61) "This Keśin is called Jyoti. Keśas means rays. The possessor of those rays is (called) Keśin (Keśa+in). Jyoti (i.e. light) is called Keśin, because it shines and illumines." (N. XII. 25, 26)
- (62) "Yasas (i.e. fame) is verily Hiranya." (AB. VII. 3)
- (63) "This very Soul is Jyoti; thus Jyoti (light) is Self." (SB. XIV. 7)
- (64) "Indra and Agni are (called) Jyoti (i.e. light)." (SB. X. 4)

According to these authorities, Hiranya Garbha means (1) One (i.e. God) Who is omniscient by His nature (Svarūpa i.e. Hiranya: knowledge and Garbha: Svarūpa). (2) Secondly it means God who has in His Garbha (womb i.e. control) the light of immortality (Mokşa), the luminous globes of the sun and glory, good fame, the souls, the lightning (INDRA) and fire etc.

^{(63) &}quot;ज्योतिरेवायं पुरुषः इत्यात्मज्योतिः"। (SB. XIV. 7, 16)

^{(64) &}quot;ज्योतिरिन्द्राग्नी"। (SB. X. 4. 1. 6)

Consequently, the use of the word Hiranya Garbha indicates the noble and eternal nature of the Vedas and not their modernity.

Thus the statement of Professor (referred to above) that "the use of the word Hiranya Garbha demonstrates the modernity of the Mantra portion and that we have no evidence to establish their antiquity" is based on illusion.

He also says that verses like (RV. I. 1.2, quoted above) prove the Mantra portion. This (statement) is equally false. Because God (being Omniscient) knows all the three times. God knows, "I have been, I am and I shall be invoked and worshipped by all the sages of (all times i.e.) the past, the present and the future." Hence He has made this statement. Thus there can be no objection.

The Seers (R ilde s is) are the persons who (I) had direct perception of the Mantras, (2) $Pr \overline a \eta as$ (i.e. vital airs) and (3) Tarka (i.e. rationalism). Moreover, the persons who having studied Vedas and the other scriptures instruct others are designated as the "ancient" and those who learn from them are called "modern." God is to be adored and invoked by all these Rsis.

In this connection we produce an evidence from the Nirukta:

- (65) "This deductive reasoning (Abhyūhā) is applied (in case there is) curiosity (to know the real) meaning of a Vedic verse.
- (65) "सयं मन्त्रायं जिन्ताभ्यूहोऽभ्यूह्हः । स्रिपि श्रुतितः स्रिपि तकंतः । न सु पृथक्त्वेन मन्त्रा निवंक्तव्याः । प्रकरणश एव तु निवंक्तव्याः । न ह्येषु प्रत्यक्षमस्ति स्रनृषः, स्रतपसो वा । पारोवयं वित्सु तु खलु वेबितृषु भूयो विद्यः प्रशस्यो भवति । इत्युक्तं पुरस्तात् । मनुष्या वा ऋषिषु उत्कामत्सु देवानबृवन् । को नः ऋषिः मविष्यति ? इति । तेभ्यः एतं तकंमृषि प्रायच्छन् । मन्त्रायं चिन्ताभ्यूहमम्यूल्हम् । तस्मात् यदेव किचान् चानोऽभ्यूहित श्राषं तव् भवति" । (N. XIII. 12).

In original Sanskrit text our author has quoted the above mentioned extract from the Nirukta to support his view that the word "RSI" means "TARKA" (i.e. Reasoning) also. Here we find it clear that Yaska accepts TARKA as Seer; because by resorting to it a Vedic scholar can determine the exact meaning of the Vedic Text.

According to some interpreters the first sentence of the quotation (तरप्रकृतीतरत् वर्त्तनसामान्यादिति । N. XIII. 12) has no relation with the subsequent sentences. It is related to the previous sentences, i.e. (Contd.)

(This reasoning should be based on) the Vedas themselves as well as on (purely) logic. Isolated verses should not be explained. They are to be explained with reference to the context only. None else than a Seer or a man of penance has direct cognition in them. It has been stated above that the more learned man is to be preferred among the scholars who have merely traditional knowledge. When the Seers were leaving (this world), people asked the Devas; "Who will be a Seer amongst us?" They gave them Tarka (i.e. logic) as the Seer. By reasoning the curiosity regarding the interpretation of the Mantras is pacified. Therefore, whatever (meaning) is guessed out by a versatile Vedic scholar (Anucana) should be taken as \overline{Arsa} (i.e. a direct cognition of a Seer)."

(N. XIII. 12)

This is to say that one has curiosity to understand the real meaning of the Vedic verses which evidently are collections of Padas (i.e. inflected and conjugated forms of words), i.e. words and letters which are interrelated as adjectives and substantives and which are used in a general sense. There is curiosity in one's mind (lit.; intellect), "What can be the real theme of this Mantra?" A man must exercise reasoning to determine the exact meaning of a Mantra completely. This full-fledged logic or reasoning is called "Abhyūha". The Vedic verses should not be explained away by in-off-hand way on merely hearing them or merely by reasoning. In explaining them due consideration should be given to the context and they must be interpreted with reference to the context. A person, who is not a Seer (Rsi), who has not led a life of austerity, whose mind is not pure and who has not (sufficiently) high learning (to his credit), cannot claim an insight into the real meaning of the Mantras. Unless a person attains a supremely high and exceedingly best and versatile erudition by which he surpasses

[&]quot;वाचोऽक्ष इति वा। अक्षो वा यानस्याञ्जनात्। तत् प्रकृतीतरव् वर्त्तनसामान्यात् इति"। (N. XIII. 12)

Hence, commenting upon this sentence, the commentator Durga remarks:—

^{&#}x27;'स्वरमधिरूढानि व्यञ्जनानि मवन्ति''। After it he adds: ''इति परिसमाप्त्यर्थः इति करणः। उप प्रवर्शनार्थो वान्तस्य।'' i.e. here the word ''ITI'' denotes the end of the topic. Due to the absence of punctuation in the original text, the scribe confused this short phrase with the subsequent paragraph. But Rsi Dayananda does not accept this view.

the tradition-knowing interpreters of the Vedas; he cannot explain rightly the Vedic verses; however, his reasoning may be good.

Here the author (of the Nirukta) quotes an Itihasa (i.e. historical tradition to illustrate) this point. Once upon a time, when the Seers (Rsis) were (by and by) leaving this world, men approached the Devas (i.e. the learned) and asked them as to who should be the Seer among them. They (the Devas) gave them Tarka (i.e. logic) as their Seer (Rsi), so that by discriminating between truth and falsehood, they might be able to understand the precise sense of the Vedas. In reply they—(Devas) said to them, "Tarka (i.e. logic) will be the "Seer" amongst you". What type of reasoning is accepted here? That TARKA, which helps us in determining the real sense of the Vedic verses i.e. which elucidates the meaning of the Mantras. Therefore, it is an established fact that whatever exposition of the Vedas is offered by a versatile scholar who has come across (the ocean of) all sciences, it should be accepted as Arsa (i.e. coming from a Seer). The explanation given by a half-read man who is not very intelligent and who is prejudiced and biased should be taken as Anarsa (i.e. coming from a non-Seer) and hence it is false. Such (interpretation) deserves on consideration; because it contains perverted meanings. People will also have perverted notions by according undue regard to them.

Therefore, the meaning (of the above quoted Mantra) would be this:—

"The Agni (the Self-effulgent God) is to be adored and glorified by the ancient Rsis (i.e. logics) or by the modern Rsis (i.e. Tarkas) or by those of future generation."

No object other than God is ever to be glorified and worshipped by any man. It is a decided fact. If this Mantra (i.e. Agni Pūrvebhih etc. RV. I. 1.2) is explained in this manner, no objection regarding modernity can be raised against the Vedas.

Moreover, the Aitareya Brahmana (II. 4.3) tells :-

(66) "The Pranas (vital airs) are the Divine Rsis." (AB. II. 4.3)

According to it, the phrase, "Ancient and modern Seers" means, the Praṇas as they existed in the causal state (in precreation period) and the Praṇas as they exist (in the creation period now)." The Mantra, therefore, indicates that God is to be worshipped and eulogised by all the learned people with the help of such Rsis (i.e. vital airs) through the process of Samādhi yoga (i.e. trance, the last stage of Rāja-Yoga, concentration). This alone leads to happiness.

The statement (of Professor Max Müller cited above) that "the terms Chandas and Mantra have distinct and different application", is also not tenable. Because the words Chandas, Veda, Nigama, Mantra and Śruti are synonyms. Here the word Chandas expresses various other meanings. It denotes metres or the Vedic metres e.g. Gayatri etc. and the Laukika metres e.g. Āryā etc. It also means "freedom". Here Ācārya Yāska says:—

(67) 'Mantras are so called because they are meditated (i.e. from the root √Man to think); Chandas are so called because they cover (i.e. from the root √Chad to cover); Stoma is so called because we praise with them (i.e. from the root √Stu to praise); Yajur is from the root √Yaj (to sacrifice); Sāman is so called because it is mixed with Rks." (N. VII. 12)

The Veda is called Chandas because it wards off afflictions caused by ignorance (Avidya) and cover (us) with bliss. It is also derived from the root \sqrt{Cadi} to delight and to shine by adding the suffix "Asun" and by changing its first letter "Ca" into 'Cha'. According to the Aunadika aphorism, Ca of Candi is changed into Cha^* . By studying the Vedas a man attains all types of sciences and thus acquires happiness. Therefore the Veda is called Chandas.

The Satapatha Brahmana says:-

(68) "Chandas are verily Devas. They contain (lit.—tied up with) knowledge and Actions. This entire universe is covered by Chandas." (SB. VIII. 2.2.8)

√चिव (म्राल्हादने) + कसुन् (U. IV. 159; 219)

"छन्दत्यर्चित कर्मेति" निघण्टुः । (III. 14)

Sāman : √षो (नाशे) + मनिन्। (U. IV. 153)

Yajur : √यन् (देवपूजा संगतिकरुणदानेषु) + उस्। (U. II. 115)

(68) "छन्दासि वै देवाः—वयोनाधाः । छन्दोभिः हि इदं सर्वं वयुनं नद्धम्" । (SB. VIII. 2, 2, 8)

^{(67) &#}x27;'मन्त्रा मननात् । छन्दांसि छादनात् । स्तोम: स्तवनात् । यजु: यजते: । साम सम्मितमृचा''। (N. VII. 12) * ''चम्देरादेश्च छ:'' (P. III. 3.121) इत्यौगादिकं सूत्रम् ।

(69) "These Devatas are verily Chandas."

(SB. VIII. 3,3.6)

The word "Mantra" is formed from the root Matri to hold confidential consultation. According to the aphorism of (Pānini) "Halas-ca". the suffix "Ghan(a)" is added to it. The Veda is called Mantra because it contains exposition of unknown and mysterious subjects. The individual verses (Mantras) which form the entire Veda are also called Mantras as they (also) contain such topics. The word Mantra can also be derived from the root \(Man \) (to know) with suffix 'Sthan' according to the Unadi aphorism "Sarva dhatubhyahs than" i.e. "The suffix Sthan is added to all Dhatus." Thus it means "where or by which men obtain knowledge of realities)." Thus Mantra means the Veda. Here, the phrase "individual verses" mean the Mantras e.g. "Agnim ile Purohitam" etc. All the metres Gayatri etc. and the verses composed in them are also called Devatas because they explain all matters. Hence Chandas are doubtlessly Devatas. They are Vayo-Nadha i.e. the home of all sciences and actions. This entire universe full of activities is sustained by the Vedas as well as by the individual Mantras.

Because all sciences are contained in the Vedas and the Vedas cover all branches of learning, Vedas are called Chandas and also because the Vedas are studied with concentration of mind they are called Mantra. The words Chandas and the Mantra are synonyms. The Manusmrti says: "The word Sruti means the Veda" ϕ . All questions from the Vedas are styled as Nigamas in the Nirukta. The words, Sruti, Veda, Mantra, Nigama are all synonyms. The Veda is called Sruti because we hear all sciences out of it and (therefore) the Mantras are also called Sruti. Men know and acquire all sciences through the Vedas. Hence the Veda is called Sruti Sruti

In the following quotations from the Astadhyayi, the treatise on grammar, the terms Mantra, Chandas and Nigama are used as synonyms:

^{(69) &}quot;एता वै देवता: छन्दा एसि"। (SB. VIII. 3. 3. 6)

^{*} The root "GAM" means "GATI" which means (1) knowledge, (2) forward movement and (3) achievement. Cf.: "गतेरत्रयोऽर्था: । ज्ञानं गमनं प्रान्तिरवेति"।

ф "अतिस्तु वेदो विश्लेय:" (Manu. II. 10)

(70) "Mantre ghasahvaranasavrdahadavrc-krgamijanibhyo leh."

(P. II. 4. 80)

(71) "Chandasi Lan, Lun, Litah." (P. III. 4. 6)

(72) "Vā şa-pūrvasya nigame." (P. VI. 4. 9)

Thus when the words Mantra, Chandas and Nigama are proved as synonymous, the statement of a person who creates difference without a distinction is not acceptable.

THE VEDAS DEFINED

- Q. What books are meant by the title of Veda?
- A. This title is applicable to the Samhitas, containing Mantraportion only.
- Q. Why do you not accept that "the term Veda is applicable to the Brāhmaņa portion as well?" Because Kātyāyana says that the "Veda is the name of both—of Mantra portion as well as of the Brāhmaņa portion."
- A. This view is not acceptable. The Brāhmanas do not deserve the designation of the Veda; because they have been given the title of Purāna and Itihāsa. They are Vedic glosses and are not the words of God but merely the works of Seers and thus the creation of human intellect and also because the Seers other than Kātyāyana refuse to call them by the title of the Veda.

The worldly narratives, containing names of human beings, are found in the books, entitled as the Brāhmaņas but the Mantra portion does not include such narratives.

- Q. There are statements in all the Vedas containing names of Seers. For instance (the following) verse from the Yajur-Veda mentions such names:—
- (1) "May we attain that triple age which is a (characteristic) of gods; ——the triple age enjoyed by Jamadagni or Kaśyapa."

 (YV. III. 62)

From this it is obvious that as for as the narration of historical events is concerned, both the Mantra portion and the Brāhmaṇas are at par with each other. Why then do you not admit that the Brāhmaṇas can be given the title of the Veda?

^{(1) &#}x27;'ह्यायुषं जुमद्देग्ने: कृश्यपंस्य ह्यायुषम् । यद् देवेषुं ह्यायुषं तन्नों ग्रस्तु ह्यायुषम् ॥'' (YV. III.62)

- A. Be not deluded in this matter. Here the words Jamadagni and Kasyapa are not proper nouns, referring to some particular i.e. embodied human beings. The evidence from the Satapatha (clearly supports it):—
- (2) "Eye is verily the Seer Jamadagni, because the world (people living in the world) with it sees and recognises. Therefore, the eye is Jamadagni Seer." (SB. VIII. 1.2.3)
- (3) "Kasyapa is Kūrma and Kūrma is Prāņa (i.e. vital airs)."
 (SB. VII.5)

It shows that Kūrma and Kasyapa are the names of Prāna (i.e. vital breath). Because its (of Prānas) seat in the navel of the (human) body is of a Kūrma (i.e. tortoise like space. Hence, the above quoted verse contains the following prayer to God:—

"O Lord of the universe, by your grace may our eyes, styled as Jamadagni and our Pranas styled as Kurma last for three (ordinary) terms of human life i.e. three hundred years (i.e. $100 \times 3 = 300$)."

Here "the word eye" implies all senses and the word "Prana" indicates mind &c.

In the phrase "Yed-deveşu etc." the word 'Deva' according to the Satapatha (III. 7) means the "learned men":—

(4) "Devas are verily the learned." (SB. III.7.3.10)

The life of the learned (Deva) is full of powers and influences of learning. May our life be similar to them and last for three terms i.e. for three hundred years—with all our senses including mind—full of all bliss,

This Mantra includes some other lesson also and it is that men can extend their lives three times if they adhere to the good principles of Brahmacarya (i.e. celibacy) &c.

It is, therefore, clear that the words Jamadagni &c. in the Vedas are suggestive and indicate (general) sense only. Hence it must be clearly

- (2) "चक्षुर्वे जमदन्नि: ऋषि: यदनेन जगत् पश्यति । ग्रयो मनुते । तस्माच्चक्ष: जमदन्नि: ऋषि: ।।" (SB. VIII.1.2.3)
- (3) "कश्यपो वै कूर्म: । प्राणो वै कूर्म: ॥" (SB. VII,5.57)
- (4) "विद्वा[®]सो हि देवा: 11" (SB. III.7.3.10) understood that the Mantra portion has not the slightest trace of history. Therefore, all the descriptions of historical events given by Sayana Acarya &c in their Vedic commentaries like Veda Prakasa are based on ignorance (and are erroneous).

Now we proceed to decide that Itihāsa and the Purāṇa &c. are the names of the Brāhmaṇas only and not of those books (which are called) the Śrīmad-Bhāgavata and the Brahma-Vaivarta &c.

- Q. In connection with the enjunctions laid down for performing the Brahma-Yajña in the Brahmanas and in the aphoristic works (Sutras), we come across the statements like this:—
- (5) "The Brahmanas, the Puramas, the Kalpas, the Gathas and the Narasansis (are to be studied)." (TA. II.9)

The origin (of such statements) is also traceable in the Atharva Veda:—

(6) "He proceeded to the direction of Vṛhatī (i.e. speech). The Itihāsa, the Purāṇa, the Gāthās and the Nārāśaṁsīs followed him; He, who knows it thus, verily becomes the coveted abode of the Itihāsa, the Purāṇa, the Gāthās and the Nārāśaṁsīs"."

(AV. XV.30.1.4; AV. XV.6.10-12)

Consequently, why do not you admit that the word Itihāsa means the books other than the Brāhmaņas e.g. the Śrīmad Bhāgavata &c?

A. Do not say like this. These quotations refer to the Brāhmaṇas only and not to the books e.g. the Śrīmad Bhāgavata &c.; because the Itihāsas &c (i.e. historical events) are included in the works called 'Brāhmanas'.

For instance:-

(7) "The Devas and the Asuras were waging war." (तै. सं. 1.S. 1.1.)

- (5) ''ब्राह्मणानि इतिहासान् पुराणानि कल्पान् गाया नाराशंसी इति ।'' (TA. II.9)
- (6) ''स् बृंद्दतीदिश्वसनुद्ध्यंचलत् । तिस्तिद्दासर्श्च पुराणं चृ गायांश्च नाराश्चंसीश्चानुद्ध्यंचलन् । इतिद्दासस्यं च व स पूराणस्यं चृ गायांनां च । नाराशुंसीनां च प्रियं धार्म भवति य पृवं वेदं ॥''

(AV. XV.30.1.4; AV. XV.6.10-12)

(7) ''देवासूराः संयत्ता ब्रासन् ॥'' (तै॰ सं॰ 1.5.1.1)

Such statements are to be taken as Itihāsas (historical events). Similarly:—

- (8) "In the beginning, my dear, this world was just Being (Sat), one only, without a second." (CHU. VI.2.1)
- (9) "In the beginning, Atman (Self, Soul), verily, one only, was here—no other winking thing whatever." (AIU. I.1)
- (10) "In the beginning verily this (universe) was Apah; doubtlessly it was Salila only." (SB. XI 1.6.1)
- (11) In the beginning, this (creation) was nothing." (SB.)

Such statements, occurring in the Brahmanas which depict the state, existing prior to the creation of the world, are to be recognised as Puranas.

The Kalpa refers (to the portions of) the Brahmanas, which describe the power or significance of the Mantras. For instance:—

- (12) "The verse 'Ise tva, urje tva' (the first verse of the Yajur-Veda) is pronounced for rain. The phrase 'Ise tva, urje tva' refers to the food or essence, which springs up from rain." (SB. 1.7.1.2)
- (13) "Savit; doubtlessly is the Prasavit; (i.e. stimulator of life and motion in the world; from the root $\sqrt{S}u$ to stimulate) of the Devas, who are born of Savita." (SB. I.7.1)

Such statements are the Kalpas.

The Gāthās mean the dialogues. For instance, the dialogues between Yājñavalkya and Janaka or the dialogues in the form of questions and answers e.g. between Gārgī and Maitreyī in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa.

- (8) "सरेव सोम्य इवमग्र ग्रासीत् एकमेवाद्वितीयम् ॥" (CHU. VI.2.1)
- (9) "श्रात्मा वा इदमेकमेवाग्र झासीत् । नान्यत् किञ्चन मिषत् ॥" (AIU. I.1)
- (10) "ग्रापो ह वा इदमग्रे सलिलमेवास ॥" (SB. XI.1.6.1)
- (11) "इदं वा अप्रे नैव किञ्चिदासीत्।" (SB) cf. : BU. I.2.10.
- (12) "इषे त्वोजें त्वेति वृष्टचे तवाह, यवाहेषे त्वेत्यूजें त्वेति यो वृष्टादूर्मसो जायते तस्मै तवाह।।" (SB. I.7.1.2)
- (13) "सविता वै देवानां प्रसविता सवित्रप्रमुताः ॥" (SB. I.7.1.4)

"What is Nārāśansī?" Here Ācārya Yāska says:-

(14) "According to Kathakya, Nārāśansī is Yajña. People assemble there and praise (God) there (Nara+śansī). According to Śakapūnī, it is Agni; as it (Agni i.e. God) is eulogised by men." (N. VIII. 6)

Thus stories occurring in the Brahmanas and the Nirukta etc. containing eulogy of men or women are called Gathas and no other thing.

In all the quotations, wherever, these words occur, the Brāhmaņas are the "things named" (Sam jāin) and the words Itihāsa &c., are the "names" (of the Brāhmaṇas). For instance (it is said in the following statement):—

(15) "One should understand that the words Itihāsa, Purāṇa, Kalpa, Gāthā and Nārāsansī are (the names of) the Brāhmaṇas only."*

On this topic, there is another evidence in the commentary of the Nyaya Darsana:—

(16) "The (triple) division of sentences (occurred in the Brāhmanas) had its distinct imports; (hence the Brāhmanas are authoritative evidence)." (ND. II. 1.60)

Vatsyayana comments upon this as follows:-

(17) "The verbal testimony (of the Brahmanical statements) is accepted as in the worldly life. The sentences (i.e. propositions) found in the Brahmanas are divided into three categories."

The idea here is that the words occurring in the Brahmanas are not Vedic (i.e. divine) but they are Laukika (i.e. worldly) only. The three-fold division has been explained as follows:—(They are of three varieties e.g.);

^{(14) &}quot;नराशंसो यज्ञ इति काथक्य: । नरा अस्मिन् झासोनाः शंसन्ति । झिग्निरिति शाकपूणिः । नरै: प्रशस्यो भवति । (N. VIII. 6)

^{(15) &#}x27;'ब्राह्मणान्येवेतिहासान् जानीयात् । पुराणानि कल्पान् गाथा नाराशंसी-श्वेति ।''

The origin of the quotation is not traceable.

^{(16) &#}x27;'वाक्यविभागस्य चार्थग्रहणात्।'' (ND. II. 1.61)

^{(17) &}quot;प्रमाणं शब्दो यथा लोके । विभागश्च ब्राह्मणवाक्यानां त्रिविध: ।" (ND. II. 1,61)

(18) "The Vidhi Vacana (i.e. mandatory statements); the Artha Vacana (i.e. explanatory or laudatory passages); and the Anuvada vacana (i.e. supplementary repetitions)."

(ND. II.1.61)

Commenting upon this aphorism Vatsyayana says:-

(19) "There are three varieties of textual propositions in the Brahmanas e.g. mandatory, explanatary and repetitive.

(ND. II. 1.61)

(20) "The Vidhi (means) injunction."

(ND. II. 1.62)

Vātsyāyana comments upon it:-

(21) "The text (i.e. Vakya) which gives injunction is called Vidhi. Vidhi also means Niyoga (i.e. ordinance) or Anujña (i.e.) consent or permission). For instance, 'One, desirous of Svarga (i.e. bliss) should perform the Fire Sacrifice'." (ND. II. 1.63)

"The Artha Vāda (explanatory text) is either Stuti (i.e. commendatory) or Nindā (i.e. censurous) or Para Kṛti (i.e. to lay down a contrary way of doing a thing by another), or Pura Kalpa (i.e. historically supported injunctions)." (ND. II. 1.63)

Vātsyāyana's remarks upon this are as under :-

(22) "A statement, commendatory to mandatory rule is Stuti. Its object is to create confidence (in the heart of the doer)—so that

(18) ''विष्टपर्थं वादानुवादवचनविनियोगात् ।'' (ND. II. 1,61)

(19) "विधा खलु ब्राह्मणवास्यानि विनियुक्तानि । विधिवचनानि प्रयंवादववनानि प्रमुवादवचनानि इति ।" (ND. II. 1.61)

(20) "विधिविधायक: ।" (ND. II. 1.62)

one may have faith in, what is being praised. On hearing its result one is impelled to do a thing accordingly. The Devas (i.e. the learned) conquered all, by (performing) Sarva-jit Sacrifice. It is performed to obtain every thing and to conquer all. Hence, he, who performs it attains every thing and subdues all, etc. Ninda (i.e. censure) is a statement indicating undesirable result. It is prohibitive. One should desist from doing what is censured. The Jyotisthoma is the first of all Sacrifices. He, who without performing it first, performs another one, falls into a pit, grows old and dies. &c.

"Para-kṛti" is to quote a contradictory mandatory rule of another in doing a thing, e.g. after performing a Homa, they let the clarified butter fall down (upon offerings at the Sacrifice) by drops first. But the Caraka-adhvaryus sprinkle down ghee, mixed with coagulated milk (Pṛṣad-ajyam) by drops and say that ghee-mixed with coagulated milk is the life-breath of Fire. &c. (cf; SB. III. 8.3.24)

"Pura Kalpa" is a mandatory rule, supported by a historical example, e.g. 'The Brahmanas, therefore, glorified the Sama Stoma (i.e. a Sama hymn) called Vahiś—Pavamana with the Mantra "Yone Yajñam Pratanavamahe" &c. Why do you include Para Kṛṭṭ and Pura Kalpa in the Artha Vada? (They are Artha Vadas) because they pertain to praise and censure and also because they throw light on certain topics connected with mandatory rules."

(NDB. II. 1. 64)

(23) "Anuvada (i.e. explanatory repetition) is the repetition of the mandatory ordinance." (ND. II. 1. 64)

Vātsyāyana explains it as :-

- (24) "(It is of two kinds i.e.) repetition of mandatory rule and the repetition of its import. The first is the verbal repetition and the other is the repetition of the sense only." (NDB. II. 1.65)
- (25) "The proofs (Pramāṇas) are not four only because Aitihya (i.e. Historical evidence or tradition), Arthā patti (i.e. Implication), Sambhava (i.e. Possibility) and Abhāva (i.e. Non-existence) are also proofs." (ND. II. 2.1)

Vātsyāyana comments upon it :-

(26) "These four are not the only proofs. What are others then? The other proofs are (1) Historical evidence, (2) Circumstantial presumption, (3) Probability and (4) Nullity. "They said like this" such a traditional (and credible) statement, the author of which is not known is called Historical Evidence (Aitihya)." (NDB. II. 2.1)

On the authority of this evidence, only the Brāhmaņa portion has been assigned the names of $Itih\bar{a}sa$ &c. and not the Mantra portion.

Moreover, the Brāhmaņas are merely the commentaries upon the Vedas (i.e. the Vedic verses) (and they are not the Vedas themselves). Hence they cannot be given the title of the Vedas. (It is shown by the fact that) the Brāhmaņas first quote the Vedic verses e.g. "Işe $Tva \overline{U}rje Tva$ " (SB. 1. 7) and then proceed to explain them.

- (23) ''विधिविहितस्यानुवचनमनुवादः । (ND: II. 1.64)
- (24) ''विष्यनुवचनं चानुवादो विहतस्यानुवचनम् च ।

- (25) ''न चतुष्ट्वम्—ऐतिह्यार्थापत्ति-सम्भवामाव-प्रामाण्यात् ।''
 (ND. II. 2. 1)
- (26) ''न चत्वायेंव प्रमाणानि । कि ताँह ? ऐतिह्यमर्थापत्ति: सम्मवोऽमाव इत्येतानि मिप प्रमाणानि । ''' इति होत् ः'' इत्यनिविष्टप्रवक्तृकं प्रवादपारम्पर्यमैतिह्यम् ।''
 (NDB. II. 2. 1)

Moreover, (the following passage) from the Mahā-Bhāṣya (supports this view):—

(27) "Of which words? Of the words used in the wordly speech and also of the Vedic (language). Among them the words of the common man's speech are: cow, horse, man, elephant, bird, deer and Brahmana. (The instances of) the Vedic words are:—

'Sam-no devîr-abhiştaya' (AV.); 'Işe tvā-ūrje tvā' (YV.);
'Agnimīle Purohitam' (RV.); 'Agna āyāhi vītaye' (SV.).''
(MB. I. 1.1)

(27) ''केषां शब्दानाम् ? लौकिकानां वैदिकानाम् च । तव लौकिकाः तावत् गौरखः पुरुषो हस्ती शकुनिर्मृगो ब्राह्मण इति । वैदिकाः खल्विष । 'शन्नो देवीरिमध्दये । इषे त्वोर्जे त्वा । श्रिम्निके पुरोहितम् । श्रम्न श्रायाहि वीतये । इति ।। (MB I. 1.1)

In this quotation, examples from the four Vedas are given. For this purpose, the author of the Mahā-Bhāṣya has quoted the first verses of the four Vedas. But it is strange enough to find that Patañjali quotes "Śam no Devīḥ" as the first verse of the Atharva-Veda, while all the present printed editions of the Atharva-Veda begin with the verse "Ye Triṣaptāḥ" and not with "Śam-no Deviḥ" as stated by the celebrated author of the Mahābhāṣya. "Śam-no Deviḥ" is found as the first verse of the sixth hymn of the first Kāṇḍa of the Atharva-Veda.

It is a clear evidence that the arrangement of verses has under-gone some modifications after the author of the Maha-Bhaṣya.

From the undermentioned quotation from the Gopatha Brahmana, it is clear again that during the days of the Brahmanas, the arrangement of verses was definitely different from what we find now-a-days:—

"ग्रानिमोळे पुरोहितम्......इत्येवमावि कृत्वा ऋग्वेवमधीयते । इवे त्वोजं......इत्येवमावि कृत्वा यजुर्वे बमधीयते । ग्रान भ्रायाहि...... इत्येवमावि कृत्वा सामवेदमधीयते । शन्तो देवो:.......इत्येवमावि कृत्वा भ्रथवं वेवमधीयते ॥" (Gopatha I. 1.29)

But it is also evident that the difference in the textual arrangement is found only in the case of the Atharva-Veda only.

Had the author accepted the books, called the Brāhmanas, as the Vedas here, he would have given examples from them also. As the author of the Mahābhaṣya recognised that the Mantra portion only could be given the name of the Veda, he cited the initial portions of the first verses of the four Vedas while illustrating the Vedic words. On the contrary, the examples which he has given, of words used in common speech, can be assigned to the Brāhmanas as they are found in them.

Acārya Pāṇini, in the following aphorisms, has clearly shown that the Vedas and the Brāhmaņas are distinct from one another:—

(28) "The object of the root Div in its original sense (i.e. gambling &c) takes the Accustive case-ending in the Brāhmaṇas."

(P. II. 3. 60)

- (29) "The Sixth case (i.e. Possessive case) is used diversely in the sense of the Fourth (Dative) case in the Chandas (i.e. the Vedas)." (P. II. 3.62)
- (30) "In the Brahmanas and in the Kalpa works, proclaimed by ancient sages, the suffix 'Nini' is added to a word which is preceded by a word in the Third case (instrumental) in the sense of 'announced by'." (P. IV. 3.105)

The distinction (between the Vedas and the Brahmanas is further) indicated by the word 'Purana' (used here) in the sense of 'the ancient sages.'

(28) "द्वितीया ब्राह्मणे।" (P. II. 3. 60)

Dīksita explains it-

''ब्राह्मणविषये प्रयोगे दिवस्तदर्थस्य कर्मणि द्वितीया स्यात् । वष्ठच्यप वाद: । गामस्य समायां तदह: दीध्येषु: ।''

(29) ''चतुर्थ्यं बहुलं छन्दिस ।'' (P. II. 3. 62)

Bhațțoji Dīkșita explains it-

"वह्ठो स्यात् । पुरुषमृगश्चन्द्रमसे । दार्वाघाटस्ते वनस्पतीनाम् in the sense of वनस्पतिभयः ।"

(30) "पुराणप्रोक्तेषु बाह्यणकल्पेषु ।" (P. IV. 3. 105) Bhattoji Dīkṣita explains it in the following words—

"तृतीयान्तात् प्रोक्तार्थे णिनि: स्यात् । यत्प्रोक्तं पुराणप्रोक्ताश्चेद् ब्राह्मण-कस्पाः ते भवन्ति । पुराणेन चिरन्तनेन मुनिना प्रोक्ताः । भल्लु, भाल्लिवनः । शाटचायन, ब्राह्मपायनिनः । कल्पे — पिङ्काः पंङ्गी कल्पः ।" The Brāhmaṇas and the Kalpas announced by ancient sages e.g. Brahmā &c are the commentaries upon the Vedas. Hence, the titles of "Purāṇa and Itihāsa" have been assigned to them. Had the author desired to give the name of Veda to the both—Chandas as well as to the Brāhmaṇa—(then) in the above mentioned aphorism of) "Caturthyarthe Bahulam Chandasi" the use of word "Chandasi" would have been meaningless. Because the word Brāhmaṇa will have continuity (Anuvṛtti) here from the (preceding aphorism i.e.) "Dvitîya Brāhmaṇe" (and in that case this term would include the term Chandas).

It is, therefore, evidently established that the name Veda cannot be given to the Brāhmaņas.

Again, the words Brahma and Brahmana (i.e. the name of one of the four Varnas) are synonyms. (The following evidence) supports this view:—

- (31) "Brahma is verily a Brāhmaṇa and Kṣatra is (called) Rājanya." (SB. XIII. 1. 5. 3)
- (32) "The words Brahman and Brāhmana have identical meaning" (Hence they are synonyms). (MB. V. 1.1)

The Vedic glosses, composed by the Brahmans i.e. the Brahmanas who were the (ancient) great Seers and were learned in the four Vedas, are called the Brahmanas.

Moreover, it is also understood that Kātyāyana agreed to assign the name of Veda to the Brāhmaṇas, only conditionally as the Brāhmaṇas have invariable association (i.e. intimate connection) with the Vedas. (It is also in the secondary sense). In this manner, too, it is not justified; because he has not stated so and the other Seers do not hold this view. Thus, the Brāhmaṇas cannot be called Vedas.

In this manner we have proved by quoting a (large) number of evidence that Veda is the name of the Mantra portion only.

- Q. Should we recognise the authrity of the Brāhmaṇas at par with the Vedas?
- A. To this question our reply is nagative. Their authority cannot be accepted equal to the Vedas. Because, they, not being the words of God, are of authority only in as far as they are consistent with the Vedas. They deserve to possess the secondary (or derivative) authority only.

THEOSOPHY (BRAHMA-VIDYA)

- Q. Do the Vedas contain all the sciences or not?
- A. Our answer is that the Vedas do contain the basic principles of all sciences briefly. The foremost of them is the Brahma-Vidyā (i. e. Theosophy) which we explain here concisely:—
- (1) "Him we invoke for aid Who reigns supreme, the Lord of all that stands and moves, Inspirer of the Soul. That Pūşan, may promote the increase of our riches, Who is our infallible Keeper and Guard and also Well-wisher." (YV. XXV. 18), (RV. I. 89. 5)
- (2) "The learned always turn their eyes to the lofty place of Viśnu (the all pervading God), spread like an eye in the heaven."

(RV. I. 22, 20)

The meaning of (the individual words of these) stanzas is :-

The word Isana is from the root \sqrt{Is} to rule or command or master (with suffix 'Anas'). We invoke Him who is the Lord of the whole universe and of all that moves or does not move. In Him (the human) intellect finds solace (Buddheh-Tripti-Karta). He is $P\bar{u}s\bar{a}$ (i.e. giver of strength and vigour). O Supreme Lord, protect our wisdom and riches, which may prosper by Thy grace. Guard and sustain us always without remiss so that we may enjoy all sorts of pleasures.

The stanza "Tad-Viśnoh etc." (RV. I. 22. 20) has already been explained in the Chapter describing various themes of the Vedas under Vijñana portion.

- (1) "तमीशांनुं जर्गतस्तुस्थुषुस्पतिम् धियं जिन्वमर्वसे हमहे वृयम् । पूषा नो यथा वेदंसुमसंद् वृधे रक्षिता पायुरदंच्धः स्वस्तये ।" (YV. XXV. 18); (RG. I. 89.5)
- (2) ''तद्विष्णों: पर्मं पृदं सर्दा पश्यन्ति सूरयं: । द्विवीव चक्षुरात्तिम् ॥'' (RV. 1.22.20)

A detailed note on the interpretation of this verse given already.

(3) "Only an enlightened man can, after studying (Upasthāya) the eternal Vedic lore (Prathama-Jām) (and precisely abiding by it) realise (by sincere efforts from his heart and soul) that Supreme Lord who encompasses all the creatures and all the regions, pervades all the quarters of the universe and is Immanent in the very essence of truth (in mind, speech and deed)."

(YV. XXXII. 11)

- (3) 'पुरीत्यं भूतानि पुरीत्यं लोकान्
 पुरीत्यु सर्वाः प्रदिशो दिशंश्व ।
 जुपुस्थायं प्रथमुजामृतस्या—
 तमनुात्मानेमुभि सं विवेश ॥'' (YV. XXXII. 11)
- (i) Parîtya : (परि + √इण् (गतौ) + हयप्) (P. VII. 1.37) i.e. having pervaded from all sides.
- (ii) Lokan : (√लोकु(दर्शने)+घञ्) (P. III. 3.19)
 i.e. the earth, the sun and the other planets which can be seen.
- (iii) Pradišali : The intermediate quarters.
- (iv) Upasthāya: (उप+√ष्ठा (गतिनिवृत्तो)+ल्पप्) i.e. having studied or practised.
- (v) Prathama-jam: (प्रथम—जा, √जिन + बिट्) (P. III. 2.67 & VI. 4.41) i.e. the first born: the Vedic lore revealed in the beginning of creation. Griffith explains it 'the first born child'.
- (vi) Rtas ya : (√ऋ (গলা)+ছ) i.e. of truth. Griffith connects it with Prathama-jām i.e. the first born child of the Order; thus he means 'the eternal law of the universe, whose first born child is Prajāpati'. But according to Mahîdhara it means Vak, the Sacred Word—the Veda.
- (vii) Ātmanā : (्र' अत् (सातत्यगमने) + मनिच्) (U. IV. 153) i.e. by means of heart and soul.
- (viii) $\bar{A}tm\bar{a}nam$: the essence or source. (Contd.)

The purport is that the Supreme Being encompasses and pervades all the $Bh\bar{u}tas$ e.g. elements, $\bar{A}k\bar{a}sa$ & c. He also pervades all directions and sub-directions (directions—East etc. and sub-directions—South-East etc.) He has also penetrated all heavenly bodies, the Sun &c and knows them completely. He generates the subtle primary substances ($Suksma\ Bh\bar{u}tas$). The enlightened soul which by means of its spiritual power and inner organic faculties ($Antah\ Karana$) realises and attains communion with God Who is All-Bliss and Bondless ($Moksa-\bar{A}khya$) obtains final beatitude.

(4) "He is the highest object of adorations; pervades the universe and possesses the super-most knowledge. He (survives) the dissolution of the world. All the Devas take support in Him as a trunk of a tree upholds all the branches round it."

(AV. X. 7.38)

It will be interesting to read the following translation of this verse offered by Griffith:

"Having encompassed round existing creatures, the Worlds and all the Quarters and Mid-quarters, Having approached the first born Child of Order he with his Self into the Self hath entered."

The idea according to this is that the performer of the Universal Sacrifice is liberated from the bounds of human life. Encompassed round: with the glance of his enlightened mind which shows the universe to be Brahma. He: the performer of the Universal Sacrifice.

- (4) ''मृहद् यक्षं भूवंनस्य मध्ये तपित ऋान्तं संलिलस्यं पृष्ठे । तस्मिन् श्रयन्ते य उक्ते चे देवाः विश्वसम्य स्कन्धं: पुरित इव् शाखाः ।'' (AV. X. 7.38)
- (a) Yakşam : (I) From the root যল্ (X. A.) to honour, worship, adorn. (II) From the root Yakş (I.P.) to stir or to move. (যল্পযানি or যল্পনি). Here it means God, Who is the highest object of worship. (Contd.)

He alone should be known as Supreme Being (Brahman) Who is Mahat (i.e. the greatest of all), and Yakşa (i.e. adorable by all men). He pervades the entire universe and possesses supreme knowledge (Tapas). He survives the dissolution of the effect (i.e. the creation) into causes. All the thirty three Devas e.g. Vasus and others find support in Him and He is their main stay as all branthes of a tree are upheld by its trunk.

- (5) "(This One Immutable God) is called neither the second, nor the third, nor yet the fourth."
- (6) "He is called neither the fifth nor the sixth, nor yet the seventh."
- (7) "He is called neither the eighth nor the nineth, nor yet the tenth."
- (8) "All this power (of supporting the universe) is certainly centred in Him. He is the One, Alone and only One."

In the Pauranika literature, it refers to a class of demi-gods who are described as attendants of Kubera. cf: यक्षश्चक्रे जनकतनयास्नानपुण्योदकेषु, etc. (MD. I) But in Vedic Sanskrit it means anything deserving honour.

(b) Tapasi Krāntam: The Krāntam is a past participle of the root Kram to step forward. "One who surpasses."

The word Tapas is read in the list of words for Jvalata (NTU. I. 17). Dayānanda explains it as Tapasi Vrddham i.e. advanced in knowledge or austerity. Tapas here means knowledge.

Cf: Griffith's rendering:

"Absorbed in Fervour, is the Mighty Being, in the world's centre.

on the waters's surface.

To him, the Deities, one and all betake them; so stands the tree-trunk with the branches round it"

- (5) "न द्वितीयो न तृतीयंश्चतुर्थी नाष्युंच्यते ।"
- (6) "न पञ्चमो न बृहठः संन्तुमो नार्ष्युच्यते ।"
- (7) "नाष्ट्रमो न नवंमी देशमो नाष्ट्रच्यते।"
- (8) "तमिदं निगतं सहः स पुष एक एक्वृदेक पुत ।

(9) "All the Devas have all their being in Him alone."

(AV. XIII. 4.16-18 & 20-21).

These verses clearly show that God is One and One only. There is no second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, nineth and tenth God. The negative particle (Na) used for nine times (in the above verses) beginning with second and ending with Zero (i.e. 10th) clearly establishes (the fact) that God is One and One only. The existence of a second god is emphatically Hence the worship of the other god is positively denied in the Vedas. prohibited. Being the Inner-ruler of the two fold created beings-animate or inanimate—He alone beholds them all and none is able to see Him. He is invisible for all. This entire universe is pervaded by Him and is certainly centered (Nigatam) in Him-there being a close connection between the pervader and the pervaded. He is called (here) Sahah i.e. the All-Sustaining (power). He is definitely One and one only. Here the word 'One' is thrice repeated. This (repetition) indicates that there is no second god equal to or greater than He. It is also implied here that there is no other god of His own or of a different variety and nor there can be division in His absolute essence. The existence of the second god is absolutely denied. He is One and one only. He is Unitary and Intelligent power, the like of Whom does not exist. He is the Sole controller of this universe, and has no assistant (or agent) to help him in creating or supporting this entire world. Because He is Omnipotent. All these Devas-Vasus and others-described above exist in this One Supreme Being Who is Almighty even after the dissolution of the universe.

There are many other verses in the Vedas e.g. "Sa Paryagāt etc. (i.e. He encompasses) (YV. XXXX. 8), which deal with Theosophy. The fear of increasing the bulk of the book does not (permit us) to cite all of them here. We shall explain their purports in our commentary at places of their occurances.

DHARMA AS ORDAINED IN THE VEDAS

(1) "March together, speak together and let the minds of you—the Intelligent ones—be united as in the past, the wise Devas (i.e. the learned) worshipped (harmoniously) the Adorable One (Bhagam).

(RV. X. 191. 2)

(EXPLANATION)

(In this stanza) God ordains:-

"O men, acquire Dharma revealed by Me. It is based on justice-free from partiality and is bright on account of its truthful character. Be united and give up all dissensions for its achievement so that the happiness (in your life) may accumulate and affictions may be anihilated. (Speak together) Assemble together and hold friendly discussions. Discard wrangling controversies and fallacious sophistry. Put questions lovingly and answer In this way you would acquire true knowledge and other noble qualities for ever. (Let your minds be all alike). Make up your minds abodes of wisdom and knowledge. Be vigilent and earn knowledge. Endeavour rightly to fill your minds with eternal joy. You should always follow Dharma and never practise Adharma (unrighteousness). There is a simle here (in the verse). You must practise the Dharma, which was adopted by the learned, wise and the dispassionate men of the past and the present age i.e. dead or living who possessed an urge for preaching the Divine Dharma. They worshipped Me as the Omnipotent Adorable Lord and followed the righteous path (Dharma) ordained by Me. The same righteous path (Dharma) must be adhered to by you. In this way the Dharma laid down in the Vedas would be known to you and you will have no doubts about it." (RV. X. 191.2)

(2) "May the (purpose of) deliberation be common, common the assembly, common the mind and so be their thoughts united.

⁽I) "सं गेच्छ ध्वं सं वेद ध्वं सं बो मनौसि जानताम् । देवा भागं यथा पूर्वं सं जानाना जुपास्ते ।" (RV. X. 191.2)

N.B. Please see a note on it on page 136.

^{(2) &}quot;सुमुानो मन्त्रः समितिः समुानी समुानं मनः सुह चित्तमेषाम् । सुमुानं मन्त्रेमुमि मन्त्रये वः समुानेनं वो दुविषां जुहोमि ॥ (RV. X. 191.3)

N.B. Please see a note on it on page 136.

I lay before you a common aim, and you should worship with your common oblation."

(RV. X. 191.3)

(EXPLANATION)

(Common deliberation) O men, the object of your Mantras i. e. deliberations be true and righteous knowledge and the benefit of the all (created) beings. Let it be universal and without partiality and prejudice. The word Mantra means a deliveration or consultation by which people investigate all things of known or unknown qualities e.g. beginning with God and ending with the Earth—(i.e. all spiritual or material substantives) and acquire their knowledge and then explain to others through conversation and precepts. King's ministers are styled as Mantrin ($\mbox{\ensuremath{\sim}}$ /Mantra+In) because they deliberate and distinguish between the right and wrong.

All persons should assemble together in order to make investigation regarding the objects of which they have no precise knowledge. There the members, may have divergent views at first, but they should adopt a common formula being the essence of all opinions, beneficial for the entire mankind and endowed with all meritorious characteristics. This decision should be adhered to and practised. In this way the happiness of the best type and universal benefit of entire humanity would daily be increased.

(Common assenbly) In order to promote freedom and to supplement the stock of happiness for all men alike, a beneficial, impartial and uniform legislation as well as the harmonious social organisation should be framed by which justice and enlightenment of all men may be achieved. For this purpose a common assembly of the learned, should be constituted which will help the people on acquisition of the righteous qualities e.g. celibacy

Note for Page 135:

⁽a) These and the other verses of this hymn were meant to be recited by the Priest who presided at the opening ceremony of the periodical sessions of a Parliament or a State Assembly.

⁽b) Sāyaṇa gives a different explanation of the second half of the first verse (RV. X, 191.2):

[&]quot;In like manner as the ancient gods concurring accepted their portion $(Bh\bar{a}ga)$ of the Sacrifice."

But I have taken the word "Bhāgam" here as Bhajanî yam i.e. the Adorable one.

and learning. This must be maintained under the state control (and should strive for) the purity of people's conduct, devotion to duty, performance of deeds leading to the highest end of human existence and the development of intellect, health and mental vigour.

(Common minds) Here the word Manas (i. e. mind) has (two aspects e.g.) Samkalpa: desire or wish and Vikalpa: abhorance or avertion. Let there be desire for good qualities and avertion to bad objects. O men, let your minds (having these qualities) be harmonious with one another and should not be hostile to one another. Here the word Citta (mind or heart) means (a thinking faculty) by which the past experience is remembered and God as well as Dharma is meditated upon. This faculty of thinking should also be harmonious with one another i.e. let all your exertions result in termination of affictions and promotion of pleasures of all living beings as they are for your own sake. The word Saha (together) indicates that all united efforts should be directed towards mutual benefit and happiness. I bestow my blessings upon those who regard all other living beings as their ownselves, and are benevolent and extend others' happiness (at the cost of their own).

(I proclaim) I ordain to you to practise the Dharma laid down above. All men must abide by this, so that you may not fail in truth and falsehood may not prevail upon you.

(Commbn oblation) Here the word Havi (oblation) means both, dedication as well as taking. This giving and taking should also be in accordance with the truthful Dharma. I prescribe for you this Common Dharma, endowed with truth. Hence accept the Dharma ordained by Me and no other.

(RV. X. 191. 3)

(3) "May your decisions be unanimous, your minds being of one accord. May the thoughts of all be united so that there may be a happy agreement and union amongst you all." (RV. X. 191.4)

(EXPLANATION)

This is the import. O men, you should concentrate all your powers for the uplift of Dharma, with mutual concord; so that all may strive to increase happiness without any conflict and clash. Here the word Akūti means "efforts or courage or a noble way of doing things." Even these faculties are to be employed by doing good to others, for the happiness of all mankind. Try your best so that this Dharma ordained by Me may not disappear.

^{(3) &}quot;समानी व आर्कृतिः समाना हर्दयानि वः। समानमस्तु वो मनो यथा वः सुसहासति ॥" (RV. 191. 4)

"Samānā Hṛidyāni Vaḥ" (May your minds be of one accord) May your hearts be full of affections and love and may your actions be harmonious and free from illwill to others. "Samānām Astu Vo Manaḥ" (Concordant mind) The word Manas (i.e. mind) (occuring here) is defined in the Śatapatha (XIV. 4.3. 9) as follows:—

(4) "Desire, determination, doubt, faith, disbelief, endurance, nonperseverence, bashfulness, intelligence and fear; all these are (functions of) mind." (SB. XIV. 4. 3. 9)

Discriminate in mind (first) and then you should act. Kāma is a desire for noble qualities. Saṃkalpa is a determined action for its achievements. Vicikitsā is a doubt, which is created with a view to ascertain a doubtful object. Śraddhā is an unfailing faith in God and true religion. Aṣraddhā is the absolute disbelief in atheism and Adharma. Dhṛti is the firm resolve to retain unflinching faith in God and Dharma, under adversity or prosperity. Adhṛti is the impatience never to adopt evil ways. Hri is mental hesitation to adopt evil conduct and also for non-compliance with the dictates of true Dharma. Dhī is an intellectual faculty which promptly and firmly grasps the noble qualities. Bhī (or fear) is the conviction that God detects us every where and therefore to desist from doing unrighteous actions, disobedience to His commandments, and from other sinful deeds.

Such a mind of yours, O men, be harmonious. "Yathā Vaḥ Susahāsati" i.e. May you so co-operate with one another that happiness may continue to increase. Rejoice in your hearts at the sight of the happiness of all men. None of you should delight in the sufferings of others. All men should behave and act in the manner; so that all may be prosperous and free.

(RV. X. 191.4)

(5) "Prajāpati (the Protector of all mankind—God), finding out (through His perfect understanding) various aspects, has discriminated between truth and falsehood: The Lord of all created beings has placed scorn on untruth and faith in truth."

(YV. XIX. 77)

^{(4) &#}x27;'कामः सङ्कल्पो, विचिकित्सा श्रद्धाऽश्रद्धा धृतिरधृतिर्ह्शोधींमीं:, इत्येतत्सर्वे मन एव ॥'' (SB. XIV. 4. 3. 9)

^{(5) &}quot;दृष्ट्वा रूपे व्याकरीत् सत्यानृते प्रजापंतिः । अर्थद्वामनृतेऽदंधास्छूद्धाण सुत्ये प्रजापंतिः ।।" (YV. XIX. 77)

(EXPLANATION)

i.e. God, the Protector of all men, ordains Dharma: -

All men, under all circumstances and at all times should have faith only in truth and scorn over falsehood. God has drawn a line of demarcation, with His Omniscient knowledge, between truth and falsehood i.e. Dharma and Adharma and their known and unknown aspects. What type of line? It is expla:ned by "scorn on falsehood". He has implanted faith in the hearts of all men, in true Dharma, enjoined in the Vedas and the Sastras, which is duly supported by all proofs, including the Direct Cognition (Pratyakşa), is based on justice and is free from prejudice and partiality. He has also put forth want of faith in Adharma, falsehood and injustice. In other words He commands us not to have faith in Adharma. In this way all men should strive and make best efforts to firmly concentrate their minds on Dharma and to abstain from Adharma.

- (6) "O God, Destroyer (of affictions), make me firm (in Dharma). May all living beings look at me with friendly eyes: May I look at all created beings with friendly eye. Let us look at each other with eyes of a friend." (YV. XXXVI. 18)
 - (6) ''वृते वृ⁹⁹हे मा मित्रस्यं मा चक्षेषा सर्वाणि भूतानि सर्माक्षःताम् । मित्रस्याहं चक्षेषा सर्वाणि भूतानि सर्माक्षे । मित्रस्य चक्षेषा सर्माक्षामहे ।'' (YV. XXXVI. 18)

Here the word "Dre" is in Vocative case. Dayānanda translates it as 'destroyer of sufferings'. He derives it from the root \sqrt{Do} to destroy.

In the Nirukta this word " $D_{\underline{r}}ti$ " is read in the list of words indicating Megha i.e. cloud. It is derived from the root $\sqrt{D_{\underline{r}}+Ti}$ to pierce or destroy. In classical Sanskrit it has undermentioned meanings:

- (I) A leather bag for holding water.
 - cf: Manu Smṛti (II, 99) and Yājña-Valkya (III. 268) ''वृति धनुर्वस्तमविम''।
- (II) A fish.
- (III) A skin, hide.
- (IV) A pair of bellows.
 - (V) A cloud (Vedic). cf: Nighanțu (I. 10).

(EXPLANATION)

That is to say: All men under all conditions and at all times should regard others as friends and should have friendly relations. All should accept this Dharma (i.e. Law of Friendship) ordained by God. They should pray to God so that they may be firm in Dharma. O God, the Destroyer of misfortunes (Drti), be gracious unto me that I May comprehend this true Dharma as it is. May all beings always look upon me lovingly with an eye of an impartial friend i.e. become my friends. Make me—who possess this desire—prosperous in all true pleasures and auspicious qualities. I also may look upon all beings with friendly eyes and loving thoughts and regard them as my ownself. In this manner, all of us leaving aside, all feelings of enmity, look upon each others with friendly eyes and should act to promote mutual happiness. This is the only divinely revealed religion which should be accepted by all.

(YV. XXXVI. 18)

(7) "O Agni, (i.e. Self-effulgent, Omniscient God), the Lord of Vows, I will observe the vow (i.e. a vow of truth). May I be able to observe it. Grant me success in that way. Warding off falsehood, I approach (the path of) truth." (YV. I. 5)

(EXPLANATION)

i.e. All men should always ardently desire for the divine help. Without His aid the knowledge of true Dharma and its practice are impossible. O

(Contd. from page 139)

Our author has taken the etymological meaning which is quite appropriate here.

The other word, worth noticing, is Dṛnha.

It is Imperative from the root \sqrt{Drnh} (I. P.) (I) to make firmor strengthen, (II) to make fast, (1II) to fortify, in the Second Person Singular. It is also used in (II. A) in the sense of (I) to be firm (II) to grow or increase. According to Mahîdhara, this verse is addressed to Drti i.e. the Chief earthen vessel, the Gharma, in which the offering is prepared.

(7) "अग्ने वतपते वृतं चेरिष्यामि तच्छेकेयम्। तन्मे राध्यताम्। इदमहमनृतात् सुत्यमुपैमि ॥" (YV. I. 5) Agni (i.e. Self-Effulgent), O Vrata-pati: (i.e. Lord of Vows or Lord of Truth) I shall practise the true Dharma. Here the Śatapatha says:—

(8) "Truth is verily all Devas and falsehood mortal men. This verily is the vow which Devas practise and it is truth." (SB. I. 1)

Truthful conduct makes (us) Devas and untruthful actions make (us) mortal beings. Truthful conduct, therefore, alone is called Dharma. (May 1 be able). Be gracious and grant me strength enough to practise the truthful mode of life i.e Dharma. What is that yow? Here the Mantra says (Idamaham) i.e. "I take a vow to adhere to the truth alone which will be free from falsehood i.e. Adharma." In the pursuit of this truthful conduct, prayers to God and self-efforts are main stay. God shows no favour to a man, who is inactive and lazy-just He makes him to see, who has eyes and not him; who is blind—. Similarly God bestows His favours upon a man who himself resorts to actions, has a keen desire to practise Dharma and has a deep yearning after God's Grace. He favours none else; because God has provided a man with all means of doing a thing successfully even before he has occasion to use them. One must benefit himself with an object as far as it holds good but beyond that one must desire (and pray for) the Divine Favour. (YV. XXXVI. 18)

(9) "A person by observing a vow (Vrata - vow of truthfulness) becomes initiated; by (this) initiation ($D\bar{\imath}k\bar{\imath}a$) he attains $Dak\bar{\imath}ina$ (i.e. reward or psosperity or skill) and thereupon advances to Faith ($\hat{S}raddh\bar{\imath}a$). Through Faith, he attains Truth (God)."

(YV. XIX. 30)

i.e. A man knows the truth when he has ardent desire to know it and to act in accordance with truth. All men should have faith in truth alone and never in falsehood. A man who takes a vow to observe truth, becomes initiated i.e. attains a high rank. When, because of his best qualities, he obtains high worth (and in this way) attains high rank, he becomes the recipient of universal reverence and success. This is his award (Daksinā) i.e. a fruit (of his righteous efforts). The Daksinā (i.e. award) is achieved only through good qualitles and good conduct.

^{(8) &#}x27;'सत्यमेव देवा अन्तं मनुष्याः । एतद्ध वै देवा व्रतं चरिन्त यत्सत्यम् ।।" (SB. I. 1. 4-5)

^{(9) &}quot;बृतेन दीक्षामां नोति दीक्षयां नोति दक्षिणाम् । दक्षिणा श्रद्धामां नोति श्रद्धयां सत्यमां प्यते ॥" (YV. XIX. 30)

By practising truthful vows e. g. Brahmacarya & c, he acquires respect in his own and in others expectation. This creates firm faith in him towards truthful conduct. Because truthful actions alone lead to the (public) reverence. (By faith i.e.) when this faith goes on increasing more and more, a man through this faith, obtains Supreme Lord and final emancipation. It is not possible through other process.

The import is, that a man should improve the (faculty of) faith and enthusiastic action for the (final) achievement of Truth (God). (YV. XIX. 30)

- (10) "Created by toil and holy fervour, found by devotion, resting in Rta (i.e. righteousness)." (AV. XII. 5.1)
- (11) "Invested with truth, enrapped with honour, compassed about with glory." (AV. XII. 5.2)

(EXPLANATION)

The import is:—These verses explain the characteristics (or definition) of Dharma.

God has created men as the possessors of exertion, energy and righteousness (Dharma). Therefore, they should acquire knowledge by studying the Vedas (Brahma) and should know God. (Rte Śrita) i.e. they must take shelter in God and depend upon (their own) hard actions.

(AV, XII. 5.1)

This Hymn (AV. XII. 5) which is partly in prose, is a continuation of Hymn (AV. XII. 4); According to $S\bar{a}yana$, here still more forcibly, the sin and danger of robbing a Brāhmana of his cow are described.

The translation given above by me is literal but Dayananda interprets differently. According to him the path of Dharma is suggested here by describing various qualities of virtuous men. His interpretation would be:—

"Men are created (alongwith the spirit of) action and penance. Let knowledge be acquired through the Vedas (by them) and they are seated in Rta (i.e. Truth or God)." (AV. XII. 5.1)

"They are enrapped in truth, covered by glory and surrounded by fame." (AV. XII. 5. 2)

^{(10) &}quot;श्रमें जुतपेसा सृष्टा बह्म जा वित्त ऋ ते श्रिता।"

^{(11) &}quot;सुरथेनार्वृता श्रिया प्रार्वृता यशंसा परीवृता ॥" (AV. XII. 5.1-2)

May all men acquire truth (through the studies) of the Vedas and $S\overline{a}$ stras and also through all means of cognitions, such as Direct Cognition & c. This truth stands all tests and is invariably changeless. (Enrapped with Sriya i.e. honour). May men strive to achieve the highest honour and glory (Sri)—bright with the light of righteous conduct and meritorious qualities and having the resources of world-empire to its credit. (Compassed about with Yasasa i.e. glory). Men may be endowed with fair fame through the acquisition of supreme merits and truthful conduct and may they enlighten (the world) with its lusters on all sides. (AV. XII. 5.2)

- (12) "Encircled with inherent power (Svadhā), fortified with faith, protected by Consecration, established in Yajña i.e. Sacrifice, having world as the resting place (Nidhanam). (AV. XII. 5.3)
- (13) "The virility and vigour; the forbearance and strength; the speech and organs; the glory $(Sr\hat{i})$ and reighteousness."

(AV. XII. 5.7)

(EXPLANATION)

Let all men be well-wishers and beneficial towards others and find contentment in their own lots $(Svadh\bar{a})$ and in their own virtuous qualities. (Fortified with faith etc.). Let them have abiding faith in truth. Absolute truth alone and not falsehood deserves faith. (By $D\bar{\imath}k\dot{s}a$ i.e. Consecration). May they protect others and be protected by the true teachings of honest and credible learned men. May they have $(D\hat{\imath}k\dot{s}a)$ consecration (i.e. place of honour). (Sacrifice etc.) (According to the Satapatha. XIII. 1. 8. 8) "Sacrifice $(Yaj\bar{\imath}a)$ is verily $Vi\dot{s}nu$ i.e. Omnipresent God." May they depend upon Omnipresent God. May they pursue the activities of universal utility e.g. $A\dot{s}va-Medha$ and attain efficiency in material science and other activities of arts. (Loko Nidhanam). God ordains that all men must realise that they have to perform righteous deeds for the benefit of the entire mankind upto the time of their death. (AV. XII. 5.3)

^{(12) &}quot;स्व्धया परिहिता श्रुद्धया पर्ट्यूंडा दीक्षया गुप्ता युज्ञे प्रतिष्ठिता लोको नि्धनम् ॥" (AV. XII. 5.3)

^{(13) &}quot;ओ तेश्च तेर्जश्च सर्दश्च बर्छ च बाक् चेन्द्रियं च श्रीश्च धमैश्च ॥" (AV. XII. 5.7)

^{*} Note—The author cited these and other verses of the Atharva Veda from the Atharva Veda, edited by Roth and Whiteney.

Moreover, (People must possess the undermentioned qualities) :-

Ojos i.e. prowess to promote justice (in the world). alertness, insistence, fearlessness and uprighteous zeal in truthful conduct. Sahas (or forbearance) must be practised by all and they should not feel pleasure and pain when they are involved for the time being, either in prosperity or adversity, and loss or gain. They should rather undertake supreme efforts to alleviate their sufferings. Balam (i.e. Physical strength) is also to be acquired to drive away all bodily and intellectual diseases by obeying the good rules of Brahma-Carya (i.e. life of celibacy). They should make their intellect firm by which the dreadful deeds may not be feared. Vâk (i.e. speech)—through learning and education their speech should possess all good qualities e.g. truthfulness and sweetness. Indriyam (i.e. organs). Let all men keep their minds and the five other organs of cognition and the five organs of actions, tongue & c. always busy in the search after truth or Dharma. They must keep them aloof from the sinful activities. Here the word $V\bar{a}k$ i.e. speech, stands for all organs of actions. $\hat{S}r\hat{i}$ (i. e. glory) Let extreme efforts be made (in acquiring) glories of imperial rule. Dharma (i. e. righteousness or duty). This alone is the Dharma ordained by the Vedas which is based on justice, free from partiality and endowed with truthful conduct and beneficial to all. This should be practised by all.

What has already been stated and what is going on to be stated is all exposition of the same Dharma. (AV. XII. 5.7)

(EXPLANATION)

God has ordained Dharma in these and other verses for the good of menkind:—

"Brahma (i.e. Divine learning)". The characteristics of a Brahmana are :- attainment of the highest type of learning, good qualities, actions and devotion to propagating good merits. Similarly, the merits of a Kşatriya (Ksatra) are learning, efficiency, valour, fortitude and the association with heroic people. They are also to be developed. "Rastra (i.e. Nation or Country)". Government should strive to provide clean and virtuous administration for the well being of the people though good rules and laws approved by the legislature consisted of noble and holy men. The merchantile community (Viśah) is also to be protected. They should have free access to all regions of the globe, so that they may strive to increase the wealth through trade and commerce. The light of good qualities (Tvisi) and a genuine desire for true conduct should dominate. "Yafa—(i.e. fame.)". Let the highest fame be established based on Dharma (i e. righteous actions). "Varcas (i.e. virility)". Steps should be taken to make proper arrangement for learning, teaching and imparting true knowledge. "Dravinam (i.e. prosperity)". Men must have a desire to acquire by just means what they do not possess. They should preserve what has been acquired. The preserved wealth should be increased and utilized in noble deeds. Through these four-fold efforts wealth provisions and happiness of mankind must be increased.

"Ayus (i.e. life)". The duration of life should be prolonged by leading a self-controlled life, adhering to wholesome laws of diet and dress and thoroughly observing good rules of celibate life. Physical beauty (Rupa) must be preserved by subduing the carnal desires. They should make name (Nama) and fame by performing righteous deeds so that other may feel encouraged to do good actions. "Kîrti i.e. Kîrtana". Let there be (constant) recitation of God's epithets and qualities for the attainment of godly qualities. Let them make themselves (in this way) famous and renowned, "Prana and Apana". They should strengthen and purify the Prana (breath) and Apana (expiration), through (the process of) Pranayama (i.e. the art of controlling breath). The vital airs which are breathed out are called Pranas and the vital airs which are inhaled are styled as Apanas. By living in a sanitary place and by the forcible ejection and the holding up of the breath, the physical and intellectual strength is maintained. Men should achieve precise and complete knowledge through the testimony of Direct Perception (Caksu), Verbal Proof (Śrotra i.e. Śabda) and Inference. The word 'Ca' (in the original verse) stands for Anumana (i.e. Inference).

(Payas and Rasa i.e. Milk and Juice). Here Payas stands for liquids e.g. water & c. and Rasa for juices such as milk, ghee & c. These should be purified properly according to the medical science and then they are to be taken. (Anna and Annadya (i e. Food and diet). They should eat cooked and uncooked edibles after purifying them. They should always glorify God (Rta) and should always speak truth (Satya). This truth stands the test of all proofs e.g. Direct Perception. They should speak exactly as it is felt in their mind and belief.

(Ista and Pūrta t.e. desired Sacrifice (Yajña) or action and charitable deeds or success). The glorification of God and performance of charitable deeds and sacrifices must be adhered to. People should apply their minds, speech and actions for the accomplishment of these objects and should collect necessary material for this purpose. (Prajā and Pašu i.e. progeny and cattle). They should strive to properly educate and train their offsprings and should provide all comforts for them. (Domestic) animals such as elephants, horses & c should also be rightly trained and tamed.

The repeated use of (the particle) 'Ca' (i.e. and) (in these verses) indicates that other good qualities (not specifically enumerated here) are also to be included (and adhered to).

(AV. XII. 5.10)

We shall cite below some extracts from the Taittirîya Upanişad, describing (some aspects of) Dharma:—

(17) "The Right (Rta), and also study and teaching (of the Vedas).

All men (and women) should practise the undermentioned essentials of Dharma:—

One should know Rta e.g. reality (of the world) and should have (clear) knowledge of it. He should act truthfully. The adherence to Rta and Satya with deeds accordingly is a penance. A man should restrain all senses from Adharma (i.e. unrighteousness) and constantly employ them in true Dharma. It is called Dama. Sama indicates that one should not think of doing Adharma. Men must do good to the others by utilising the Vedas and Sastras and also other things of the world e.g. fires (Agnayah) for the development of spiritual knowledge as well as the material science. One should perform all Sacrifices beginning with Daily Fire Sacrifice (Agnihotra) and ending with Aśva-Medha and through them purify the rain-water and the atmosphere, so that all living beings may enjoy happiness. The fully learned and the pious (Brahmanas) people must be associated and respected so that the Absolute Truth may be determined and all doubts may be cleared off. Sciences, concerning humanity (Manusa) and the act of government must be properly accomplished. By begetting children in accordance with Dharma, they are given good education, so that they may know the neal Dharma. Virility (Prajana) must be improved to have (successful) sexual intercourse at the proper time according to the rules of Putresti (i.e. a Sacrifice which is performed for securing sons). Proper and adequate care should be taken for the safety of the child in the womb and at the time of birth so that intellectual and physical development (of the child) may be assured.

Acārya Rāthîtara holds the view that a man must speak truth always. Acārya Pauruśiṣṭi emphasises that a man must abide by and act in accordance with the Dharma and true knowledge by following the path of Rta and Satya. Ācārya Nāka Maudgalya says that the noblest things are Svādhyāya (i.e. study of the Vedas) and Pravacana (i.e. teaching of the Vedas). This is the supreme austerity. There is no other act of Dharma superior to it.

Ācārya (i.e. the preceptor) having taught the Vedas instructs Dharma to the scholar (who is departing on his life's journey):—

O disciple, speak always the truth. Follow the Dharma which has truth as its characteristics. Never neglet the reading and teaching of the Vedas. Serve your preceptor and procreate progeny. Attain efficiency in true Dharma. Preserve, enhance and enjoy your prosperity and attain glory. Strive to gain knowledge from Devas (i.e. the learned), Pitrs (i.e. elders) and the wise and do service unto them. Serve lovingly your mother, father, preceptor and guests. Never for-sake it through negligence".

The mothers, &c. should instruct in the following manner: -

O sons! (and daughters!) abide by our good deeds only. But never follow our sinful acts if per chance we happen to commit. Associate with and have faith in the persons, who may be amongst us learned and possess divine knowledge. Do not associate with others. Men should always offer gifts of such things as knowledge, etc. with love or (sometime) without love, with grace, with modesty or through fear or promises. That is to say that "to offer gift" is always better than to have it from others.

O pupils! should you have some doubt concerning a particular act or deed, you should approach the learned who possess knowledge about God, are impartial and are Yogins (i.e. concentrated saints) who keep aloof from Adharma (i.e. unrighteous conduct), endowed with high learning and other qualities and are lover of virtues. Get your doubts removed by them and act accordingly. Follow the path trodden by them. Let your hearts have this teaching or the instruction. This is the mystic doctrine of the Vedas. All men should give instructions (to their sons or disciples) in this manner. Thus one should worship God Who is Sat (i.e. All Existing), Cit (i.e. All consciousness) and Ananda (i.e. All Bliss) with supreme faith. There is no other way (to worship Him).

(19) "Rta (i.e. right) is penance; Truth is penance; The Study (of the Vedas) is penance; Santam (i.e. tranquility of mind) is penance; Dama (i.e. Self-Restrain) is penance; Sama (i.e. peace) is penance; Dana (i.e. generousity is penance and Yajina (i.e. Sacrifice) is penance. Brahma (i.e. Supreme Lord) Who is Bhuh (i.e. All Existent), Bhuvah (i.e. All Intelligence) and Svah (i.e. All Bliss) should be worshipped; this is the (highest) penance."

Truth (people) never fall from heaven (Bliss); as the Truth is (the mainstay of) the good (people), they rejoice in Truth.

Regarding austerity: No austerity is greater than fast which being a supreme penance is hard to practise; it is really difficult (to achieve). Hence (sages) rejoice in it.

Regarding Self-Control: It is essential for a Brahmacarin. Hence (sages) take delight in Self-control.

Regarding Tranquility (Sama): Sages (observe) tranquility in the forest. Therefore, they rejoice in it.

Regarding Charity (Dana): All living beings praise generousity (charity). Nothing is more difficult to practise than generousity. Therefore, they take pleasure in it.

Regarding Dharma (i.e. the righteous mode of living): This (whole universe) is upheld by Dharma. Nothing is harder to be practised than Dharma. Hence they rejoice in it.

Regarding Procreation: By this (people) grow in number. Therefore (people) find pleasure in it.

Fires: Have been ordained. Therefore (sacred) Fires are to be established. As the Fire-Sacrifice (Agni-hotra) has been enjoined; therefore, they rejoice in it.

Regarding Yajña (Sacrifice): By (performing) Sacrifice, the learned (Devas) attained heaven (Bliss). Therefore, they rejoice by it.

The Mind-Born $(M\bar{a}nosa)$: It means the Learned. Hence the learned derive pleasure from their mental development.

Renunciation (Nyasa) is Brahma; Brahma is the Supreme and the Supreme, Brahma. All these other austerities are inferior to it; renunciation only excells (all).

This is the mystic doctrine (Veda-Upanişat). One should know it." (TA. X. 62)

(21) "Āruni, the son of Prajāpati by Suparnā (mother); approached his father Prajāpati (and said to him); "What do they describe or declare as the Superior Most, Sir." He (Prajāpati) proclaimed to him," The wind blows by Truth; the Sun shines in the heaven by Truth; the mainstay of speech is Truth; every thing is upheld by Truth (alone). Hence they declare Truth as the Superior Most.

Through austerity, Devas in the beginning (of creation) attained divinity. Seers obtained supreme Bliss by austerity; they drove away foes by penance and every thing is established in penance. Hence austerity (penance), they say, is the Supreme thing.

The celibate ward off sin by Self-restraint, Brahmacarins achieve Final Bliss through self-control and this self-control is difficult (to practise) for living beings and every thing is established in self-discipline. Therefore, they regard self-discipline as the Supreme.

Peace loving persons, act in auspicious (manner) through tranquility; the sages obtained (Naka) heaven (i.e. Bliss) by tranquility; tranquility is hard to be won by men and every thing is set in tranquility (Sama). Hence, tranquility has been declared as the Supreme.

Generosity or the Sacrificial act is the crown of all Sacrifices. In this world all living beings live upon the generous person; the rivals are subdued by generosity; by generosity foes, become friends and all things are upheld in charity. Hence charity is the Supreme. Thus they declare that generosity is the Supreme.

The mainstay of the entire world is Dharma; people approach righteous (Dharmiṣtha) person; through Dharma, the sin is averted and every thing is placed in Dharma. Hence they declare Dharma as the Chief Most.

Procreation is (the cause of) the dignified existence in the world; a good person extending the cord of progeny, clears off the debt of his forefathers. It makes him debt-free. Therefore, progeny is a great thing.

Fires are (i.e the following things) Science, given in Trayî (i.e. the three-fold Veda), Bright way (i.e. deva-yāna), Gārhas patya Fire, RK, the earth, Rathantara (Sāma), Anvāhārya-Pacana (i.e. the Southern Sacrificial Fire used in the Anvāhārya Sacrifice), Yajur, the mid-region, Vāma-Devya (Sāma), Āhavanîya (Sāma) and the heavenly region. Hence Fires have been stated (to be) the Supreme.

Fire-Sacrifice purifies houses in the evening as well as in the morning. Sacrificial acts, well - performed and rightly done (lit, offered) bring happiness (Svarga) and it (Sacrifice) is the light of the world. Therefore they regard Fire-Sacrifice as the Supreme.

Regarding Yajña: Devas obtained heaven (Dyaus) through Yajña (i.e. Sacrifice) and expelled (i.e. subdued) demens, and (this) Sacrifice makes the foes fear and every thing is established in Sacrifice. Therefore they regard Sacrifice as the Supreme.

Mānasa (i.e. Mind-born) is verily Prājāpatya (i.e. belonging to Prajāpati) Pavitra (i.e. Sacrificial act on Kuśa grass); a good person beholds with Sacrificial mind rightly; Mind-born (i.e. intelligent) Seers created mankind; this every thing is established in mind. Thus the Mānasa is regarded as the Supreme."

(EXPLANATION)

Now we define the Tapas :-

The word Tapas (i.e. Penance) gives the following senses and nothing else:—

"Rta i.e. Tat-tvam (i.e. thatness, the gross reality), the glorification of God, and a precise and exact knowledge of a thing.

Satya i.e. truthful speech and truthful deed.

Śruta i.e. study and teaching of all sciences.

Śantam i.e. tranquility of mind by fixing it upon Dharma and keeping away from Adharma.

Damali i.e. to employ senses only upon Dharma to keep them aloof from unrighteousness.

Samah i.e. control over mind and to concentrate it on Dharma.

Danam i.e. to make a gift of true knowledge (including other worldly things) to others.

Yajña i.e. the performance of all the above mentioned Sacrifices.

Bhūr-Bhuvas-i.e. O man, worship only that Supreme Soul, Who pervades all regions. It is also a Tapas (austerity). Other than this there is no Tapas.

(TA. X. 8)

There is no other distinctive mark of Dharma than the truthful speech and the truthful conduct; because eternal bliss of Emancipation and happiness in this world are obtained by men only through truth and they are never deprived of them. The distinguishing character of good people is the truthful conduct. Therefore let all men rejoice in Truth.

To act according to the dictates of Dharma of which distinguishing marks are Rta, &c is Tapas. The act of attainment of knowledge through the proper observance of the rules of brahmacarya (i. e. celibacy) is also (technically) called Brahma (i.e. the supreme act).

Similarly the other portions of the extract e.g. Dama &c are also to be interpreted in this manner. The characteristics of the learned are their mental activities (i.e. developments). Thus, the True, (i.e. God) makes the wind blow and the Sun shine. (Similarly) the existence (Pratistha) or honour of a man is due only to truth and to nothing else. The words 'Manasa-Rṣayah' (i.e. Mental or mind-born Seers) in the original text mean Praṇas (i.e. vital airs), Vijñana (i.e. all Kinds of knowledge) &c.

(TA. X. 62.63)

(21) "This Soul (Atman) is obtainable by truth, by austerity (Tapas),

By proper Knowledge (Jñāna), by disciple's life of chastity (Brahmacarya) constantly (practised);

Within the body, consisting of light, pure, is He, Whom the ascetics (Yatis) with all blemishes done away, behold."

(22) "Truth alone conquers, not falsehood.

By truth is laid out, the path leading to the Devas, (Deva-Yāna). By which the Seers, whose desire is satisfied, ascend,

To where is the highest repository of truth." (MUU. III. 1.5 & 6)

The import is:-

The Atman (i.e. The Supreme Soul) is attained by truth and truthful conduct i.e. Dharma and not through falsehood. The meaning of this verse (MUU. III. 1.5) is quite easy (and needs no explanation).

Truthful conduct only triumphs. A man can achieve victory only through it. Falsehood and false actions lead to defeat. Deva-yāna i.e. the path of the learned, which is all bliss and which is also called the path of final Emancipation is enlightened and widened by truth and Dharma. The sages adopt this way, illumined by the true Dharma and truthful deeds and achieve what they desire. They (finally) reach, where there is the final Abode of Truth i.e. Brahma. Having obtained Him, they enjoy the unending bliss of Emancipation which cannot be gained otherwise.

Therefore all should conform to Truth i.e. Dharma and forsake Adharma i.e. falsehood. (TA. X, 62 & 63)

- (21) ''सत्येन लभ्यस्तपसा ह्येष आत्मा
 सम्यग्-ज्ञानेन ब्रह्मचर्पेण नित्यम् ।
 अन्तः शरीरे ज्योतिर्मयो हि शुस्रो
 धं पश्यन्ति यतयो जीणंडोषाः ॥'' (क्षीणवीषाः) पाठोऽपि लम्यते ।
- (22) "सत्यमेव जयते नानृतम्
 सत्येव पम्या विततो देवयानः ।
 येनाकमन्त्यूक्यो ह्याप्तकामाः
 यत्र तत् सत्यस्य परमं निधानम् ॥" (MUU. III. 1.5 & 6)

Moreover (Dharma is defined as under) :-

(23) "Any thing enjoined by (the Vedic Lore) is called Dharma."

(MD. I. 1.2)

(24) "By which prosperity (in this world) and salvation (after death) are accomplished is called Dharma." (VD. I. 1.2)

Significance of these (aphorisms) is that that alone should be deemed as Dharma, which is enjoined by the Vedas, leading to the truthful conduct. What has been prohibited by God, is Adharma and it has no substance or object (Artha).

(MD. I. 1. 2)

The practice, which leads to the much coveted pleasure or prosperity in this world and to the salvation i e. the highest bliss of Emancipation in the next world, (i. e. life after death) is called Dharma. The thing contrary to it is Adharma. (VKD. I. 1. 2)

All these extracts are expositions of the Vedas. This Dharma has been revealed by God for the benefit of mankind in various stanzas (of the Vedas). This is the only (universal) Dharma. There is no second or other Dharma.

^{(23) &#}x27;'चोदनालक्षणोऽर्थो धर्म: ।'' (MD. I. 1.2)

COSMOGONY

All this universe that we see was duly created by God. (The following verses from ths Rgveda clearly describe this fact):—

- (1) "There was not the non existent (Asat i.e. the perishable menifested cosmos), nor the existent (Sat i.e. the earliest stage of matter, evolved out of the primordial matter for creation of the Universe) then; there was not the air, nor the sky, beyond them. What did it encompass? Where? (Kuhu?). Under whose protection? What were the waters, which were unfathamable and profound?" (RV. X. 129.1)
 - (1) "नासंदासुन्नो सदौसीतुदानुीम् नासुविद्यो नो न्योंना पुरी यत् । किमार्वरीवः कुढु कस्य शर्मन् अस्भः किमोसुीद् गर्दनं गर्भुरिम्॥" (RV. X. 129.1)

This hymn is very important and a number of controversies surround it as regard the correct interpretation of this hymn is concerned. The reader will be pleased to read, side by side my translation, which is kept as faithful as possible, the translations of two eminent European scholars by name Mecdonell and Griffith They are given here for the sake of comporative study:

"There was not the non-existent nor the existent then. There was not the air nor the heaven which is beyond. What did it contain? Where? In whose protection? Was there water unfathamable, prefound?" (A.A. Mecdonell)

"Nor aught existed then, nor naught existed,
There was no air, nor heaven beyond,
What eovered all? In whose shelter was it?
Was it water, deep and fathamless?" (R.T.H. Griffith)

- (2) "There was not death, nor the immortality then. There was not the emblem of night, nor of day. That One (God) existed (lit; breathed) without agitation (A+Vâta; from the root √Vâ to move or windless) by His Own Might. Other than He, there was not any thing beyond." (RV. X. 129.2)
- (3) "There was darkness in the beginning, concealed in darkness; indistinguishable, this all was water (i.e. the entire original matter in liquid form or the word Salila may mean Chaos). Whatever came into being was covered with void. The One created the cosomos by His mighty greatness. (Or that one arose through the power of heat)."

 (RV. X. 129.3)
 - (2) "न मृत्युरोसीद्रमृतं न तिह् न राज्या अह्यं आसीत् प्रकृतः । आनीदवातं स्वध्या तदेकुं तस्मोद्धान्यन्न पुरः कि चुनासं ॥" (RV. X. 129.2)

"There was not death, nor immortality then. There was not the beacon of night, nor of day. That one breathed, windless, by its own power. Other than that, there was not anything beyond." (Mecdonell)

"Death was not then, nor was there aught immortal: no sign was there, the day's and night's divider.

That One Thing, breathless, breathed by its own nature: apart from it, was nothing whatsoever." (Griffith)

(3) "तमे आसीत्तमेसा गूल्हमर्थे ऽप्रकृतं सेष्टिलं सर्वमा इवम् । तुच्छयेनाभ्यपिहितं यदासीत् तपंसुस्तन्मेहिना जोवृतैकेम् ॥" (RV. X. 129.3)

"Darkness was in the beginning hidden by darkness; indistinguishable this all was water. That which coming into being was covered with the void, that One arose though the power of heat."

(Mecdonell)

(4) "In the beginning, then Desire came upon that. This (Desire) was the first Seed of Mind. Sages searching in their hearts discovered the bond of the Existent with Non-existent."

(RV. X. 129.4)

- (5) "Their (of sages) cord (Rasmin, i.e. cord of knowledge) was extended across; was there below was there above? There were impregnators (Retodhâ i. e. germs of life), there were mighty forces, there was energy below (i.e. at one place), there was impulse above (i.e. at another place)." (RV. X. 129.5)
 - (4) "कामुस्तवधे समंबर्धताधि मर्नसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । सुतो बन्धुमसंति निर्दावन्दन् इदि प्रतीष्यां कृवयां मनीषा ॥" (RV. X. 129.4)

"Desire in the beginning came upon that, (desire) that was the first seed of mind. Sages seeking in their hearts, with wisdom found out the bond of the existent in the non-existent." (Macdonell)

(5) "तिरुश्चीनो विर्ततो रुश्किरेखाम् अधः स्विदासी३द्वपरि स्विदासी३त् । रेतोधा श्रीसन् महिमाने आसन् स्वधा अवस्तात् प्रयेतिः पुरस्तात् । (RV. X. 129.5)

"That cord was extended across; was there below or was there above? There were impregnators; there were powers; there was energy below; there was impulse above."

(Macdonell)

The significance of the word "Raśmin" is not very certain here. It seems to be an explanation of the word 'Bandhu' (i.e. bond) in the previous verse. The word 'Eṣām' here refers to sages. Thus this whole verse means that "whatever was below or whatever was above was traversed by the light of those sages." Macdonell and others are silent about this point.

- (6) "Who knows rightly? Who shall here declare? Whence it (creation) sprung up? Verily there were shining ones after (the process of this creation). Who knows then from where it came?" (RV. X. 129.6)
- (7) "From Whom this creation came into Existence; whether He supported it or not? Who else can if He does not? Whoever is the Supervisor of this in the highest heaven; He verily knows or does not know. Who else knows it if He does not know?"

 (RV. X. 129.7)
 - (6) "को अद्धा बेंदु क इह प्र वेरिचृत् कुत् ब्राजीता कुर्त इयं विस्टिटः । अविष्ट्रिया अस्य वि्सर्जनेना— या को वेंदु यर्त ब्रा बुसूर्व ॥" (RV. X. 129.6)

"Who knows truly? Who shall here declare; whence it has been produced, whence is this creation? By the creation of this (universe) the gods (came) afterwards. Who then knows whence it has arisen?" (Macdonell)

(7) इयं विस्विष्ट्यंते आ तुभू व यदि वा दुधे यदि वृान । वो अस्याध्येक्षः पर्मे व्योमृन् सो अङ्ग वेद यदि वृान वेदे ॥'' (RV. X. 129.7)

"Whence this creation has arisen; whether he founded it or not; he, who in the highest heaven is its surveyor; he only knows or else he knows not." (Macdonell)

"Whence this creation has arisen, whether It has been made or not; He who surveys This world in the highest heaven, he may be Or, it may be, he knoweth not." (Griffith)

This hymn is referred to, translated and discussed by different scholars. I mention names of the few eminents here:—

EXPLANATION

The central idea of these verses is as follows:

The entire world that we behold was created by God. He preserves it and at the time of the dissolution He disintegrates and makes it disappear (Vināsa). This action is repeated again and again for ever. (There was not Asat) when this effect, i.e. the world, was not in existence; even the void i.e. Akasa (i.e. space) was not before the creation. Because there could be no such convention or designation. (Nor the Sat) i.e. nor was at that time Sat i.e. the invisible causal matter, named as Prakrti, i.e. Pradhana. (Nor was Rajas) nor were there Paramanus (i.e. atoms). Nor was there Vyomā i.e. the second Akāsa, i.e. ether, which fills the Virāt, i.e. the great universe. At that time, there was only the God's Samarthya (i.e. Divine Power) which is the subtlest supreme and ultimate cause of all this world. In the rainless morning, the slight moisture appears as mist or fog. can neither encompass the earth nor is able to make the rivers flow. It is insignificant as it is not deep. Similarly this entire universe which has been created by God with His Sāmarthya (i.e. Super Power) cannot be designated as to be deep in comparison to the Supreme Being—the Most Holy and the All-Bliss. Nothing can cover Him, because the world is finite and God is infinite.

The other (five) verses "There was no death etc." are too easy to be explained here. Their import will be explained in our (regular) commentary.

In some other works also are contained discussions on this hymn. M. Winternitze also discusses it in his History of Indian Literature. This hymn is regarded as the starting point of Natural Philosophy which developed into the Sārikhya system. The aim of this hymn is to denote supremacy of God among the three main causes of this Universe, e.g. Prakṛti, Ātman and Brahman and not to deny the existence of Sat and Asat as is evident from the last verse of this hymn (RV. X.129.7). (See M.D. I.4.12)

I have given here the faithful translation of this hymn alongwith two other renderings from Macdonell and Griffith for comparison. A critical note on it has been given already. (From whom this creation came into existence). This visible multiformed universe was created by Supreme Lord. He alone creates, maintains and dissolves it or does not create it (again during the period of Brahma Ratri). He is the Supreme Supervisor and Lord of all this. The entire creation resides in Him. He, like space, pervades every where. It is absorbed at the time of dissolution again in His Super Power—the final cause.*

(Anga, Veda) O Friend Jîva, he who knows Him, attains supreme bliss. But he who does not understand Him Who is Sat (i.e. All Existence), Cit (i.e. All Intelligence), Ananda (i.e. All Bliss) and Eternal, does not certainly achieve the Supreme Bliss. The particle 'Va' in the text is used in the sense of 'certainty'. (RV. X. 129. 1-7)

(8) "We offer our prayers to Him Who is Blissful (Ka) and Holy, the Self-effulgent Creator (supporter and illuminator) of all luminous bodies (like the Sun); the One Lord of the universe Who existed before creation. He sustains this earth and the vast heavens."

(RV. VIII. 7 3.1), (YV. XIII. 4)

EXPLANATION

Before this creation of this universe, there was Hiranya Garbha (i e. One, possessing all luminaries in His womb) i.e. God. He was the absolute-One; Lord of all this created world. He was without a second. He creates and sustains the entire world from the earth upto the shining firmament. We offer all praise unto Him—Who is All Bliss (Kasmai) and All glory—.

- * cf. : युगान्तकालप्रतिसंहृतात्वनी । जगन्ति यस्यां सविकासमासत ॥ (Magha)
- (8) ' हिरुण्युगुर्भः समेव नृताओं भूतस्यं जातः पतिरोकं आसीत् । स दांधार पृथ्विशे द्यामुतेमां करीने देवार्थ हुविषां विधेम ॥'' (YV. XIII. 4)

An exhaustive and critical note on this verse is given on page 96 of this book. It will be further interesting to add it here:—

- (a) Hiranya Garbha: Lit. it means 'the Gold Germ' or the source of Golden Light i.e. the Sun-god, identified with Prajāpati.
- (b) Kasmai: "Ka" may mean Prajāpati, who is source of all bliss. Europeans translate it as "What God (other than Prajāpati) shall we adore with our oblation?"

(9) "Thousand-headed was the Purusa, thousand-eyed, thousand-footed; He having covered the earth on all sides, extended beyond it the length of ten fingers." (YV. XXXI. 1)

EXPLANATION

In this stanza, the word 'Puruşa' is the substantive, while the words 'Thousand-headed etc.' are its adjectives. The following are the authorities for the interpretation of the word 'Purusa':—

(10) "Purusa is one who sleeps or dwells in a city." (N. I. 13)

Thus Puruṣa is a name of God as He pervades the entire universe (i.e. $Pur\hat{i}$) or fills and exists in the entire cosmos (i.e. $Pur\hat{i}$).*

The All-Pervading Lord is called Purusa because He occupies the entire universe or because He pervades it thoroughly or He resides within or fills the interior of the soul. To support this derivation the Nirukta (II. 3) cites the following authority:—

- (11) "Than whom there is naught else higher,
 Than whom there is naught smaller, naught greater;
 - (9) "सहस्रंशीर्षा पुरुषः सहस्राक्षः सहस्रंपात् । स भूमि सर्वतिस्पृत्वाऽत्यतिष्ठदृशाङ्गुलम् ॥" (YV. XXXI. 1)

Most of the verses of this hymn of Yajurveda occur also in the Rgveda (X. 90) with some variants or without them. For instance:

"सहस्रेशीपुरिष्ठ सहस्राक्षः सहस्रेपात् । स मूर्भि द्विश्वतौ वृत्वाऽत्येतिष्ठहशाङ्गुलम् ॥" (RV. X. 90. 1)

- (10) "पुरुषं पुरिशयम् इत्याचक्षीरन्।" (N I. 13)
 - * The word Puruşa can be derived in the following manner:—
 - (a) From the root \sqrt{Pur} (to go) + Kuṣan. (U. IV. 74)
 - (b) पुरि सीदतीति ; पुरि + षद्ल् (विवरणगत्यवसादनेषु) = पुरिषादः = पुरिषः = पुरुषः ।।
 - (c) पुरि शेते =पुरि+शीङ्(स्वपने) = पुरिशय: =पुरुष: ।
 - (d) From the root \sqrt{q} र (आध्यायने) + कुषन् (U. IV. 74)
 - (e) From the root √प(पूर्ती) + कुषन् (U. IV. 74)
- (11) ''पुरुषः च पुरुषादः, पुरि शयः, पूरयतेर्वा, पूरयत्यन्तर-पुरुषमिन्नेत्य— यस्मात् परं नापरमस्ति किञ्चित् यस्मान्नाणीयो न ज्यायोऽस्ति किञ्चित् । (Contd.)

The One stands like a tree unmoved in the Daus By Him, the Puruşa, this whole world is filled."

(SU. III. 9), (N. II. 3)

Here it is clearly stated that the inner Puruşa i.e. Supreme Lord is the In-dwelling Ruler of all. There is nothing superior to or higher than the Lord, the All Pervading One, who is called the Puruşa. There can never be any thing equal or superior to Him. There was not, is not, and shall never be any thing greater than He. He moves and renders all things unstable but Himself remains unmoved and stable and without tremor. As a tree supports its branches, leaves, flowers and fruits, so does God uphold this entire universe from the earth to the Sun, etc. He is One without a second. There is no second God of the same or different class. As the Supreme Lord fills all this (the cosmos), He is called the Puruṣa. This stanza (Mantra) is the supreme authority for taking the word Puruṣa in the sense of Omnipresent God.

(12) "Sahasra (thousand) means "all". He is the giver of all."
(SB. VII. 5)

According to this statement from the Satapatha, the word Sahasra is the name of this entire universe. God is the Purusa with thousands (innumerable) of heads; because in Him—the All Pervading Supreme Soul—there exist thousands of heads of beings like us. Similarly He is said to possess thousands of eyes as the innumerable eyes of persons like us exist in Him. In the same manner He, in whom thousands of feet of persons like us exist, is styled to have thousands of feet.

The Supreme Being fills the earth (which here stands for all five elements) and the Prakṛti i.e. the entire universe (and its original cause), from all sides, from within and from outside.

(At yatisthat i.e. extended or occupied). Here the phrase 'ten fingers' denotes this universe and the heart. The word 'fingers' is used here to signify limbs or members (i.e. parts of body) and thus firstly denotes the finite world. The entire universe is composed of ten parts, viz., the five gross and five subtle (i.e. ten) elements. Secondly this expression may mean the five Pranas (i.e. vital airs) and four inner senses, the mind (Manas &c.)

वृक्ष इव स्तब्धो दिवि तिष्ठत्येक: तेनेदं पूर्णं पुरुषेण सर्वम् ॥" (SU: III. 9); (N. II. 3)

^{(12) &}quot;सर्व वे सहस्रं सर्वस्य दातासि ।" (SB. VII. 5)

together with the outer senses, and the Soul (Jîva) as the tenth; or again finally it may mean "the Soul's heart", which also measures ten fingers—breadth. God pervades these three and transcends them existing out of or beyond these three as well. This is to be understood that God exists pervading the universe from inside as well as outside. (YV. XXX. 1)

- (13) "Puruşa (creates) this all that has been and that will be. He is the Lord of immortality and of that which grows up by food (i.e. all living beings who are mortal)." (YV. XXXI. 2)
- i.e. Puruşa i.e. God, endowed with these qualities also is the maker of the whole world—past, present and future. The use of the particle 'CA' denotes present tense. Certainly there is no 'other maker of the universe than He'. He is the Controller and Supreme Lord of all and the Bestower of final beatitude. None else has power to bestow this immortality upon others. He is independent of and distinct from the world—this earth—and is free from birth and death. He, Himself being unborn, makes all take birth and creates the world, i.e. the effect, with His Supreme Power, i.e. the first material cause. Moreover, Puruşa is the first efficient (Nimitta Karana) cause of all and the first cause of Him there is none. (YV. XXXI. 2)
 - (14) "Such is His greatness and much more than that is Puruşa (i.e. Supreme Lord) Pada (i.e. a fourth, i.e. a fractional part) of Him is all beings (while) the three fourths of Him are what is immortal in His Self-effulgent Being." (YV. XXXI. 3)
 - (13) "पुरुष पुवेद एसई यद् भूतं यन्ने माध्यम् । डतामृत्त्वस्येशांनो यद्दनेनाति रोहति ॥" (YV. XXXI. 2)

In the Rgveda we find 'Bhavyam' in place of 'Bhāvyam'. (An irregular cadence).

Macdonell wrongly translates 'Annena-atirohati' as 'by means of sacrificial food' i.e. gods living upon sacrificial offerings.

(14) "पुताबोनस्य महिमाऽतो ज्यायाँश्च पूर्वषः । पादोऽहम् विश्वो भूतानि त्रिपादैस्यामृतं दिवि ॥" (YV. XXXI. 3)

'Etavan-asya': This is the example of Vedic Sandhi for Etavām asya' (occurring also in RV. X. 85.45).

'Puruşa': It is metrically lengthened. In the Pada Text we find 'Puruşa' only.

EXPLANATION

If it be said that the past, the present and the future universes are the measures of His greatness, it will become finite and something that can be measured. Hence, it is said here that His greatness is not so much only. His greatness far exceeds all that and it is infinite. To meet this objection it is stated here that the entire cosmos, from Prakṛti (i.e. the Original Cause) to the earth and all the creatures are only a Pada (i.e. a fractional part, lit. one fourth) of the (infinite) greatness of the Almighty Lord. The bliss of final beatitude is in His own Self-effulgence and the three-fourths of the cosmos exists in the regions of light. The portion that illumines the world is three times as much again as the portion that is illumined. He is absolutely free and unhampered, the Ruler of All, Adored by all, All-Bliss and the Illuminator of the whole world.

(YV. XXXI. 3)

(15) "Purusa rises above from Tripad (i.e. what has been described above as the three-fourths). Only a Pada (i.e. one-fourth of Him) is again and again (manifested) here. He pervades the entire world (including) what eats and does not eat (i.e. animate and inanimate world)."

(YV. XXXI. 4)

EXPLANATION

The import of this verse is that the Purusa is above and beyond and distinct from what has been described above as the three-fourths. He is distinct and separate from this world also which has been described above as the one-fourth. The three-fourths cosmos and one-fourth together make up four portions. The whole of this universe exists in the Supreme Being and is again absorbed in the cause—His Super Power—at the time of the dissolution. Even then the Purusa shines above all, free from ne-science (Avidyā) darkness, ignorance, birth, death, fever, disease and other ailments.

^{(15) &}quot;त्रिपादूध्वं उद्दैत्पुरुंपः पादोंऽस्येहाभंवत् पुनंः ।
तत्रो विश्वङ् व्यकामत् साजनानश्चने अभि ॥" (YV. XXXI. 4)

"पृषोदरादित्वात् साधु=अकारस्य उकारः" (P. VI. 3. 109)

Cf: - Macdonell translates it: -

[&]quot;With three quarters, Puruşa rose upward; one quarter of him here came into being again. Thence, he spread asunder in all directions to what eats and does not eat."

The animate world, which moves and eats (i.e. Sāśana) i.e. the living beings endowed with life and consciousness and the inanimate world e.g. the earth &c., which does not eat, i.e. which is devoid of life and consciousness—both (the worlds) are created with His Super Power. He penetrates this two-fold world through and through in many and beautiful ways and having created the two-fold universe, (He) pervades it, altogether and entirely.

(YV. XXXI, 4)

(16) "From Him (as the Efficient Cause) Virāj (i.e. the entire cosmos) was born. From Virāj, the Puruṣa (i.e. individual bodies). When (this Puruṣa) born, He surpasses (all) beyond the earth, behind and also before." (YV. XXXI. 5)

EXPLANATION

From Him was produced Virāţ (i.e. the shining one)—the body of all the bodies, taken together collectively, resplendent with various objects—which is metaphorically described as one whose body is the universe, whose eyes are the Sun and the Moon*, Whose breath is the wind and Whose feet are the earth.

After Virat were formed the individual bodies of all living beings from the various elements of the universe. These bodies cherish growth from the elements and after death return to and are absorbed into them. God, however, remains distinct from all created beings.

He first created the earth and gave it support and then the Jīvas (souls), through His might, have supported their corporeal frames on it. The Puruṣa, the Supreme Being, is distinct from the Jîva also. (YV. XXXI.5)

Please note that having thus (upto this verse), in general terms, described the creation of the universe, the Veda does now, in a special manner, relate the creation of the earth and other objects in their proper order from the following verse.

^{(16) &}quot;ततों विराडंजायत विराजो श्रिष्ट पूर्वषः । स जातो अत्यंरिच्यत पश्चाद भूमिमधों पुरुः ॥" (YV. XXXI. 5)

⁽a) 'Virat': $Vi + \sqrt{Raj}$ to shine + Kvip. (P. III. 2.178)

⁽b) 'Paścat': $Apara+\bar{A}t$. (P. V. 32)

^{*} Cf: "यस्य सूर्यश्चक्ष: चन्द्रमाश्च पुनर्णव: ॥" (AV. X 23.4.32).

(17) "From that Supreme Lord, adored by all came into being the Pṛṣat and Ajya (i.e. ghee mixed with coagulated milk) H: created the beasts of the air, of the forest and those of the villages." (YV. XXXI. 6)

EXPLANATION

The first $P\bar{a}da$ of the stanza (i.e. from that Supreme Lord, adored by all) has been explained in the Chapter on the Revelation of the Vedas.

The word Prsat in the original text is derived from the root ' \sqrt{Prsu} ' to sprinkle or moisten or pour and hence it means that by which food, &c. that pacifies hunger, is moistened. Ajyam means ghee, honey, milk, &c. Prsat (here) stands for food which is masticated and Ajyam for that which is eaten without mastication. All the objects found in the universe were created by God's Super Power and by Him they are upheld, although to some slight extent, the Jîvas (i.e. individual souls) also uphold and maintain them. All should, therefore, worship God alone and none else with an undivided mind.

He alone made the beasts of the forest and the animals that live in cities. God alone created the birds of air and the small living creatures such as insects, &c. The conjunction 'CA' (i.e. and) indicates fish, insects, moths, &c.

(YV. XXXI. 6)

(18) "From that Supreme Lord, adored by all, were produced the Reas and the Sâmans. From Him were produced the Chandas (i. e. Atharvaveda) and from Him was produced the Yajur (veda)."

(YV. XXXI. 7)

(18) ''तस्माद् युज्ञात् सेर्नृहुतः ऋचः सार्मानि जिज्ञरे । छन्दो⁹सि जिज्ञरे तस्मात् यजुस्तस्मोदजायत ॥'' (YV. XXXI. 7)

This verse is translated by Macdonell as: -

"From that Sacrifice, completely offered, were born the hymns and the chants. The metres were born from it; the Sacrificial formula was born from it." How vague and misleading this rendering is.

EXPLANATION.

This verse has been explained in the Chapter on the Revelation of the Vedas.

(19) "From Him arose horses and all such as have two rows of teeth.

Cows were born from Him; from Him were born goats and sheep." (YV. XXXI. 8)

EXPLANATION

Horses were produced through the Super Might of the Puruşa—the Supreme Lord. Although horses, &c. are included among "beasts of the forests" and "domestic animals" mentioned in one of the foregoing verses, they are again mentioned here in order to emphasize their good qualities. (From Him) also were produced animals having two rows of teeth, such as camels, asses, &c. From the Might of the Puruṣa were produced cows, the rays of light and the sense-organs. It should also be understood that in like manner were produced goats and sheep.

(20) "That Adorable Supreme Lord (Puruşa) existing before (this creation) is always placed on Barhi (i.e. in one's mind). By Him (i.e. through His grace) Devas, Sādhyas and the Rṣis perform Yajñas." (YV. XXXI. 9)

EXPLANATION

The learned (Devas), the sages (Sadhyas) and the Vedic Seers and all other men receiving instructions from the Puruşa (God), through the Vedas, worshipped Him (in the past, do worship Him now and shall worship Him in the future) and adore Him in spirit and mind or place Him exalted above all in the space (temple) of their hearts—yea, Him the Puruşa, the Perfect Being, manifest from all times, the Maker of the universe, the Adorable.

The instruction conveyed by this verse is that all men should commence all works and undertakings with praise, prayer and worship of God.

(YV. XXXI. 9)

(21) "Whom (they) postulate as Puruṣa, in how many ways did (they) divide Him? What was His mouth? What were His two arms? What are His two thighs (and) two feet called?" (YV. XXXI. 10)

EXPLANATION

They postulate Almighty God as distinguished by various qualities and powers, that is, they taught, are teaching and will teach about God in various ways as an Almighty Being having multifarious potencies. Questions are: What is the mouth of this Puruṣa? What is that produced by Him with superior qualities? What are the two arms? What is that produced by God with qualities like power, valour, &c.? What are the thighs? What is that produced by Him as possessing middling qualities like business instincts, &c.? What are His feet? What is that created by Him with such low qualities as lack of intelligence, &c.?

(YV. XXXI. 10)

The answer to these questions is given in the following verse:

(22) "His mouth was the Brāhm ma, His two arms were made the warriors (Rājanya), His two thighs, the Vaisya; from His two feet, the Śūdra was born." (YV. XXXI. 11)

In the Rgveda we have variant की बाहू in place of कि बाहू in (X. 90.11).

- (a) Yat: Here it means Yam (i.e. in the sense of the Accusative case).
- (b) Kati+Dha (P. V.3.42) In how many ways?
- (c) Vi+ Akalpayan: i.e. they explain the multifarious powers of God.
- (d) Vi + Adadhur: i.e. describe or postulate. But A.A. Macdonell explains it as "When gods cut up Puruṣa as the victim." He takes 'Yat' in the sense of 'Yadā' i.e. when. This is wrong.

The Brāhmana is said to be produced from the mouth of the Puruṣa i.e. endowed with the best qualities, such as knowledge, &c., and with capability for such acts as truthful speech and the vocation of a teacher and

If the termination Syan is added in the sense of Svārtha (i.e. in the original sense of the word itself) according to the Vartika "चतुर्वणादीनां स्वार्थं उपसंख्यानम ।" (MB), the form Vaisya would simply mean "a common subject or a member of the general public" and not one given to the advancement of nation-building profession e.g. trade and agriculture, which is the sense required in the stanza, Besides, the root Vis does not belong to the चत्रवंगिंदि group which is not an आकृतिगण. Nor can it be applied by the aphorism गुणवचन-ब्राह्मणादिश्यः कर्मणि च।" (P. V. 1.124); since then it would denote only a quality, state or action and the form would be a neuter abstract noun. But to the form thus evolved, the aphorism "अर्श आदिक्योडच" (P. V. 2.127) ean be applied. Vis + Şyañ : Vaisyam, वैश्यं विद्यतेऽस्य इति वैश्य + श्रच् = वैश्य: 1 But this form is futile as it does not give the required sense. preacher. He made the Kṣatriya (the governing or warrior class) and ordained him to possess the qualities of strength, valour, &c. The qualities of agriculture, trade and commerce are of the middling order. The Vaiśya or the trader was produced with these qualities by God's command. The Śūdra, whose distinguishing attribute is the service of and dependence on others, was produced with qualities of the lowest order, like feet, occupying the lowest place in the body such as dullness of intellect, &c.

In this verse the past tense denotes all tenses because according to the grammatical rule, (P. III. 4.6), in the Vedas all the tenses—present, past and future—are used interchangeably.*

(23) "The Moon has originated from the mind; the Sun has been produced from the eyes; from the ears, the air and the vital air; and from the mouth, the fire has been produced."

(YV. XXXI. 12)

EXPLANATION

The Moon was produced from the mind, i.e. the reflective element of the Super Power of this Puruṣa. The Sun was produced from the eyes, i.e. the refulgent portion (of this Virāt-Puruṣa). The sky was produced from the ears, that is, the Akasiya portion; the atmosphere was produced from the atmospheric portion and also were produced the vital air and all the sense organs. Fire was originated from the mouth, i.e. the chief refulgent portion.

 - (a) Nabhi: From the root Nah+In (U. IV. 125, 126).

EXPLANATION

The inter-stellar space or intermediate region was produced from the Navel, i.e. the power of mixing spatial relations of this $Puru \ absoleta a$. The Sun, &c., were produced from the head, i.e. the highest portion of the Super Power, which occupied a place of eminence like the head. God made the earth and waters from the feet, i.e. the terrestrial elements of the Super Power. From the ears, that is, the aural $(\hat{A}k\hat{a}\hat{s}\hat{i}\gamma a)$ elements, He produced the directions. In like manner, God produced all the spheres and the animate and inanimate objects contained therein from the respective elements of His Samarthya (i.e. Super Power). (YV. XXXI. 13)

(25) "Of the Yojña (i.e. Sacrifice), which Devas performed with the oblations (granted) by Puruşa, the Vasanta (spring) was the ghee, Grîşma (Summer) the fuel and the Śarat (Winter) the oblations."

(25) "यत्पुरुषिण हुविषा देवा युज्ञमतंत्वत । वसन्तोऽस्यासीवाज्यं प्रीष्म इष्मः शुरुद्धविः ॥" (YV. XXXI. 14)

Here the word Havi is derived from \sqrt{Hu} (to give or take). It means anything offered into the Fire: oblations or offerings.

Prof. Macdonell translates it as follows: --

"When the gods performed a Sacrifice with Puruşa as an oblation, the spring was its melted butter, the summer its fuel, the autumn its oblation."

He adds the following note to it:-

"Here the gods are represented as offering with evolved Puruşa an ideal human sacrifice to the primaeval Puruşa."

But if we accept this translation, the repetition of the word 'Havih' remains unexplained.

It will be interesting to read another interpretation of this verse, slightly different but beautiful and worth studying, given by Dayananda in his commentary on the Yajurveda. It is cited here in full English translation:—

"Oh men! you should understand that when the Enlightened performed the sacrifice of contemplating on (and teaching about) the

The learned extended, do and will extend the $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ (i.e. the righteous work) from the Agnihotra to Asvamedlia and the learning and teaching of the arts and sciences with the help of the materials given by the abovementioned Purusa.

Now are described the divisions of time which are necessary elements in the production of the world. Vasanta (Spring) is like the ghee in this $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ or in this universe produced by the Purusa. Grisma (the summer season) is like the fuel or fire. Sarat (the winter) is like the Purodasa (i.e. Sacrificial bread) or other oblations thrown into the fire.*

(YV. XXXI.14)

cosmos itself as a huge Sacrifice with God as the Master thereof, the morning time (Vasanta) serves as material for starting the fire of devotion in their souls, the midday becomes the fuel to keep it ablaze and the evening (and night) do duty (so to say), for oblations to be thrown in to diffuse particles of matter, endowed with purifying and health-giving efficacy over all creatures around"

According to this: -

- (a) Haviṣā: means 'fit to be invoked' and goes with Puruṣa.
- (b) Yajña: Sacrifice of contemplation on meditation (समाधि).
- (c) Vasanta: Morning or forenoon.
- (d) Grîşma: Midday or afternoon.
- (e) Sarat: Midnight, evening, all the night.
- * According to Vedic conception, Cosmos or Brahmānda, described here as Virāt, is a real Yajña which is being performed by the Super Power of God. Vedas invariably refer to it. This verse also suggests the same idea. Because seasons, e.g. Vasanta etc., cannot be used as Havi (oblations) in the material Yajñās, e.g. Agnihotra, Ašvamedha, which are symbolic to Universal Sacrifice. Yāska confirms it in "यात्रदेवते पुरुषके !"

(26) "There are seven circumferences of this (universe i.e. the Altar of the Sacrifice), and the sacrificial sticks (to be burnt in it) are twenty-one. The Devas who perform the Sacrifice bind Puruşa, the Creator, and the All Seeing (Pasu) Lord (so to say) by contemplation." (YV. XXXI. 15)

EXPLANATION

The universe has seven circumferences. The (imaginary) line which passes round the outer surface of a sphere is called its circumference (Paridhi). There are seven concentric circles round the universe or the spheres conspired therein, namely (1) the ocean, (2) the atmosphere together with the small particles (the motes), (3) the region of the clouds and the air thereof, (4) the rain-water, (5) the air above it, (6) the air of extreme rarity called Dhananjaya, and (7) the ubiquitous electricity (Sūtra-ātmā, the thread soul). There are thus seven covers or circumferences one within the other.

The constituent elements of this world are twenty-one in number. (1) The subtle elements comprising Prakrti (Primordial matter), Mahat i.e. the internal organs—the intellect, &c., and Jivas (souls); (2-11) the ten organs of sensation and action, viz., the ears, the epidermis, the eyes, the tongue, the nose, the organ of speech, the feet, the hands, the organ of excretion and the generative organ; (12-16) the five Tanmatras (the potential perceptibilia, viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell), and (17-21) the five Bhūtas (i.e. the elements), viz., earth, water, fire, air and ether (Akasa). These twenty-one are to be considered the chief ingredients in the construction of the world, although there are many more sub-ingredients derived from them.

The learned (Devas) fasten with their contemplation, the Puru ga, Who is All-Seeing, the Adorable $(Yaj\tilde{n}a)$ Deity and the Maker of this universe. They do not concentrate their minds upon any other object than God.

(YV. XXXI. 15)

(27) "Devas adored God, the Worshipful (Yajña) with Yajñas.

These were the fore-most Dharmas (i.e. duties). These

- (I) Here the word Yajña stands for God, the Adorable, and also for Yajña, i.e. all deeds of devotion by which a devotee attains God. This word has been etymologically explained by us previously. The Agnihotra and Aśvamedha, &c. are called Yajñas because through them God is glorified. Worship of God is the highest sacrifice in the world.
 - (II) Devas: the enlightened people i.e. shining with knowledge and full of devotion to God. A detailed note (on this word) given already.
 - (III) Dharma : √Dhṛ+Man (cf. U. I.137) 'श्रियते लोकोऽनेन, धरति लोकम् वा"। The following are its meanings :—
 - (a) Religion, the customary observances of a caste, sect, &c.
 - (b) Law, usage, practice, custom, ordinance, statute.
 - (c) Religious or mora! merit, virtue, righteousness, good works (regarded as one of the four ends of human existence).

(Cf. KU. V.38)

- (d) Duty, prescribed course of conduct. (cf. षष्ठांशवृत्तेरिष धर्म एष: 1) (S. V. 4), (MS. I. 114)
- (e) Right, justice, equity, impartiality.
- (f) Piety, propriety, decorum.
- (g) Nature, disposition, character (cf Mal. I. 6)
- (h) An essential quality, peculiarity, characteristic property, (peculiar) attribute.
- (i) Manner, resemblance, likeness.
- (j) A sacrifice (Yajña).
- (k) Good company, associating with virtuous.
- (1) Devotion, religious abstraction.
- (m) Manner, mode.
- (n) An Upanişad.
- (o) Name of Yama, the god of death.
- (p) A bow.
- (q) A drinker of Soma juice.

(worshippers) being exalted in glories, attain Supreme Bliss (i.e. Nākam, i.e. Salvation or God Himself) which (i.e. the highest state of bliss) the learned (who qualified themselves) in the past obtained."

(YV. XXXI. 16)

EXPLANATION

The learned (Devas) have paid, do and will pay always homage to God, Who is $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ (the worshipful) with praise, prayer and worship.

All men ought to begin all actions with these (i.e., prayers) and no one ought to do anything which is not preceded by them. Verily do the worshippers of God, exalted in glory, attain to Him and emancipation in which there is no pain or suffering. The enlightened (Devas) who qualified themselves in the past and those who are qualifying themselves now and those who will qualify themselves in the future obtained and will obtain this highest state of bliss (Nākam) to be enjoyed for a hundred years of Brahmā during which period there is no return to the cycle of births and deaths.

- (r) (In astrology) name of the ninth lunar mansion.
- (s) An "Arhat" of the Jains.
- (t) The soul.

Dayananda has rightly translated the word Dharma as duty here.

- (4) Nakam: Kam means happiness. Its negative is 'A-Kam', i.e. want of happiness, i.e. misery, adversity. 'Na-Akam' would mean an absolute bliss, i.e. Moksa—final emancipation of soul.
- (5) Sādhyāļ: It is an adjective to Devas. Dayānanda explains it as 'Sādhana-vantaļı or Kṛta-sādhanāḥ', i.e. who qualified themselves. The Nirukta (XII. 40) says:—

''साध्या देवाः, साधनात् ।''

This verse has been translated by A.A. Macdonell:

"With the sacrifice, the gods sacrificed to the sacrificce; these were the first ordinances. These powers reached the firmament where are the ancient Sādhyas, the gods."

Here the author of the Nirukta, Yāska, says: -

(28) "Devas worshipped Yajīia with Yajīia i.e. Devas worshipped Agni with Agni. 'Agni is a Pasu (i.e. the All Seeing God). Him they attain to. They glorified Him through Him' (i.e. fire)', it is said in a Brāhmaṇa. These were the foremost duties. Being exalted they obtained 'Nāka' (i e. the Supreme Bliss), where Devas who qualified themselves exist. According to the school of Etymologists, Devas are 'dwellers of the regions of light.' " (N. XII. 41)

This is to say that the learned worshipped God (Agni) with the soul (Agni) and internal organs or they performed the universally beneficial Yajñas (sacrifices) from Agnihotra upto Aśvamedha, with the help of the terrestrial fire. Those who adopted the prescribed means and qualified themselves in former times are enjoying the bliss of emancipation—the highest state. The followers of the etymological school (Nairuktas) call this band of the learned (Devas) the dwellers of the regions of light, i.e. God, who is Self-Effulgent, or because the Devas live in the rays of knowledge by perfect regulation of breath.*

- (29) "In the beginning for making this earth, the attenuated matter was made solid by the Supreme Being and therefrom the earth fashioned: for the whole of this cosmos was, in the beginning, in its ultimate causal form, viz. the material Omnipotence of God which was with Him (under His control).
- (28) "यज्ञेन यज्ञमधजन्त देवाः अन्तिनान्तिमयजन्त देवाः । 'अन्तिः पशुरासीत्, समालभन्त तेनायजन्त' इति ब्राह्मणम् । 'तानि धर्माणि प्रथमान्यासत् । ते ह नाकं महिमानः समसेवन्त । यत्र पूर्वे साध्याः सन्ति देवाः, साधनाः । 'द्युस्थानो देवणण' इति नैरुक्ताः ।" (N. XII. 41)
- * Breath inhaled through the right nostril is called "Sūrya" while that inhaled through the left is termed as "Candra". The phrase means "Yogins who are adepts in the regulation of breathing".
 - (29) "अद्ध्यः सम्भेतः पृथिद्ये रसांच्च विश्वकर्मणः समेवर्त्तामे । तस्य त्वध्दो विदर्भद्भुयमेति तन्मन्थस्य देवत्वमाजानममे ॥" (YV. XXXI. 17)
 - (a) $R\bar{a}sat$: From the root Rasa (to taste) + AC. (P. III.1.134) (Contd.)

The Almighty fashioner fashioned this, the universe, endowed with various forms. That itself, under the hand of the Almighty Architect, assumed the form of the mortal man, whom He made endowed with such potencies as would raise him to the highest position of the enlightened among men (if he followed His Vedic Law)."

(YV. XXXI. 17)

EXPLANATION

The Supreme Being (Purusa) in order to form the earth made the attenuated matter ($\bar{A}pah$) solid and thus made the earth. Similarly He produced the attenuated matter from the igneous matter, the igneous from the gaseous, and the gaseous from ether ($\bar{A}k\bar{a}sa$), and the etheric from the Primordial (Prakrti), which He caused to evolve from His Super Power.

The universe, before the creation, existed (potentially) in its cause, called the Super Power of God. God is called 'Viśva Karman'—the Universal

- (b) Viśva Karman: विश्वं कर्म यस्य । Viśva+Kṛ+Manin.
 (U IV. 145), (P. II. 224)
- (c) Trasta: $\sqrt{Trak su}$ (to sharpen) + $T_{l}n$ (U. II.94, 95). Here the Nirukta says:—
- "स्वष्टा तूर्णमञ्जूते इति (त्वर्+ म्रशूङ्+तृन्) नैरुक्ताः । त्विषेः वास्याद्वीप्तिकर्मणः (स्विष्+तृन्), त्वक्षतेः वा स्यात् करोति कर्मणः (स्वक्+तृन्), त्यक्षतेः वा स्यात् करोति कर्मणः (स्वक्+तृन्), त्यक्षतेः वा स्यात् करोति कर्मणः
- (d) Rupam: \sqrt{Ru} (to make sound) + Pa (U. III.23, 28). Here Mahîdhara says: -

"The earliest performer of the Puruṣa Medha, (Human Sacrifice), who gained thereby the form of the Sun, is glorified in this verse." His rendering is:—

"In the beginning he was formed, collected from waters, earth and Viśva Karman's essence. Fixing the form there of Tvaṣṭar proceedeth. This was at first the mortal's birth and god-head."

As there is no noun in the text, Mahîdhara supplies "Yo Rasah", i.e. the essence which. Trastar, according to him, is the Sun, but I have translated it as interpreted by Dayānanda. Mahîdhara's explanation is wrong.

Architect, because He is the Doer (par excellence) of all actions. At that time the whole of this universe was in the causal state and not such (as it appears to us now). The Tvaṣṭa-the Fashioner—made this universe with parts of that Sāmarthya. Then the whole universe (Viśva) assumed (Eti) a perceptible form (Rūpam, i.e. Rūpa Vattvam). Then also mortal (Martya) universe or man assumed a visible form (i.e. was created). (Ājānam etc.) At the time of revealing the Vedas, God promulgated this commandment for man through the Vedas themselves, "Thou shalt find the desired happiness arising from the contact of the objects with the senses by performing with thy "Action—body" (Karma-Śarira) righteous deeds with attachment and thou shalt obtain the highest knowledge called emancipation by performing works without attachment." (YV. XXXI. 17)

(30) "I know the All-pervading Supreme Being who is exalted above all, glorious like unto the Sun and aloof from darkness. By knowing Him alone, is death conquered. Except this there is no other road leading to Salvation." (YV. XXXI. 18)

EXPLANATION

This verse is answer to the question, "By knowing what can you become wise?" The answer is:—'I am certainly wise because I know the Puruṣa' the Supreme Lord Whose attributes have been described above, Who is the greatest of all, the oldest, Self-effulgent, above and beyond the darkness of ignorance and nescience'.

No one can become wise without knowing Him because by knowing the Puruṣa, the Supreme Lord alone, can a man cross death and attain to that state of the highest bliss (Mokṣa) which is beyond death. There is no other means of reaching that state.

Kṣema Karanadasa says :—खेदार्थकात् तिनर् धातो: औणादिकः असुन् प्रत्ययः or √Tam+Asum (to choke) (be suffocated etc.).

^{(30) &#}x27;'बेदाहमेतं पुरुषं महान्तमादित्यवेणै तमेतः प्रस्तात् । तमेव विदित्वातिमृत्युमेति नान्यः पन्यो विद्युतेऽयेनाय ॥" (YV. XXXI. 18)

⁽a) Mahantam: \(\square\) Mah + Ati. (U. IV.189)

⁽b) Tamas : √Tanu (to expand) + Asun ''तमस्तनोते:'' (N. II. 16)

The use of the word 'only' (Eva) in the text shows that no one should ever offer the slightest worship to any one except God, (as the Deity). That this in fact is the meaning is also apparent from the following words:—

"There is no other way for reaching the goal." There is no other way of obtaining happiness either in the affairs of this world or those concerning the other world. The only road to happiness is the worship of God alone. There can be no doubt that by believing and worshipping another as God man comes to grief. The settled conclusion, therefore, is that the Puruṣa alone is the (legitimate) object of worship for all men.

(YV. XXXI. 18)

(31) "The Lord of creatures pervades in the interior (of this world).

Being Himself unborn manifests (cosmos) in motley forms.

The wise see Him in His True Nature. In Him do all worlds find their stay." (YV. XXXI. 19)

EXPLANATION

Prajapati (the Lord of creatures), the Ruler of all the animate and inanimate world, resides within it as its Indwelling Ruler. He is unborn and increate. By His might alone the whole world is decked out with variegated objects.

(Tasya Yonim etc.) Those who can concentrate their mind upon Him obtain a perfect vision of His nature (Yonim), i.e. they know that the way to realise Him is the performance of righteous acts and the acquisition of Vedic knowledge.

In Him all the worlds find their support. The particle 'Ha' is used here in the sense of certainty. Verily in Him—the Supreme Lord—do the constant and the wise rest satisfied and secure by obtaining the bliss of emancipation.

Who shines forth (in the hearts of) the Devas; He is the Purohita (i.e. Chief Benefactor) of the Devas and Who preexisted all Devas."

(YV. XXXI.20)

EXPLANATION

The All-pervading, the Perfect 'Puruṣa', sheds His lustre into the inner-sense of the learned, but not into that of any one else, in order to illumine them. He is the Chief Priest and the Benefactor of the enlightened because He bestows upon them the bliss of emancipation which contains all happiness. He has been in existence from before the birth of the enlightened because He is eternal.

Our salutations are due to the Lovable Brahma—The Supreme Being and also to His servants who having acquired His knowledge from the learned, love Him, with the love of a child for its parents. (YV. XXXI. 20)

Prajāpati, the Lord of creatures, created the entire threefold universe from His Super Power, i.e. its threefold orders, viz. the highest ones such as Prakṛti &c., the lowest ones e.g. straw, dust, the small creatures like ants, insects, &c., and the middling ones, e.g. the human bodies &c., upon ether $(\bar{A}k\bar{a}\dot{s}a)$. The Supreme Lord (i.e. Skambha), the Prajāpati, pervades this threefold world containing variegated objects. But the universe does not pervade Him. This threefold world which cannot pervade Him is trifling and insignificant as compared to Him, the Supreme Lord. (AV. X. 7.8)

The learned and the regions like the Sun, &c., are called Devas, Pitrs (i.e. the wise), Manusyas, i.e. the rational beings, Gandhorvas, the musicians, the Apsaras, their wives, and all other types of men who are found on the earth or the heavenly bodies, i.e. the Sun &c., were all produced by the Supreme Lord through His Mighty Power. He is called Ut-Śiṣṭa, i.e. Who rules supreme over all. The heavenly shining regions like the Sun, the planets, the earth &c., all were also created by Him.

There are many other verses in the Vedas dealing with this topic, i.e. the creation.

THE REVOLUTION AND ROTATION OF THE EARTH AND OTHER SPHERES

Now we shall discuss (the topic) whether the earth and the other spheres revolve or not. Here our contention is that according to the Vedas and the other Sastras, all the spheres, including the earth, are in motion.

With reference to this, the following evidence supports "the motion of the earth, etc.":—

(1) "This earth (i. e. globe) revolves ($\bar{A}+Akramat$) in the space ($Pr.\dot{s}ni$ i. e. $\bar{A}k\bar{a}\dot{s}a$) and it has (waters of oceans) as mother as it were. The Sun (Svalp) also moves along with (air) as his father as it were." (YV. III. 6)

EAPLANATION

The import of this verse is that this earth as well as the Sun, the Moon and the other spheres are revolving in Pṛśni (i. e. space). Among them the earth, alongwith the waters of the oceans, which are (stated here as it were) the mother, moves round the Sun, who is nothing but a mass of fire. Similarly ether is regarded as mother and the air as the father of the Sun. In the same way, the fire is said to be the father and water to be the mother of the Moon.

According to the authority of Yāska the word 'Gau' means the earth. In the Nighantu of Yāska the word 'Gau' is read in the list of synonyms (numbering 21)* of the earth such as Gau, $Jm\bar{a}$, &c. The word $P_{!}$ 'śni is among the six names of the atmospheric region (Antarikşa).

(N. I. 1 and I. 4)

It is also stated in the Nirukta:-

- (2) "The (word) Gau is a synonym of the earth, because it
- (1) ''आयं गौः वृद्धितरकमीदर्लदन्मातरं पुरः । पितरं च मुबन्तस्वं: ॥'' (YV. III. 6)
- * गौ: । ग्मा । जनाः गोत्रेत्येकविशति पृथिवी नामधेवानि । (Nighantu I. 1)
- (2) ''गौरिति पृथिव्या नामधेयम् । यद् दूरं गता भवति, यच्चास्यां भूतानि गच्छन्ति । (N. II. 5) appears to have gone far off or because the creatures move upon it."

(N. II. 5)

- (3) "The Sun is called Gau (because) he causes the vapours to move or because he (himself) moves in space. 'Dyauh' is called 'Gau' because it extends far and away round the earth or because the luminaries move in it.' (N. II. 14)
- (4) "There is a verse in the Veda, "The Moon is the holder of a solar ray." (RV. XVIII. 40) This solar ray (called Suşumnā) is also called 'Gau'." (N. II. 6)
- (5) "Svah is called Aditya (i. e. the Sun)." (N. II. 14)

The earth is called 'Gau' because it moves on every minute (from \(\mathcal{J}Gam \) to go). In the Taittiriya Upanisad (it is stated) that the earth (was produced) from the waters. The producer of an object is called father and mother. Hence (waters are mother of the earth). The Sun is stated here to be the father of the earth, because here the word Svah is used in the sense of the Sun. It also qualifies the word Pitar (i.e. father). Hence the Sun is her father as it were. The phrase 'Dūram gatā' (i.e. Gone far off) means here that the earth moves round the Sun at a (particular) distance. Similarly, all spheres supported by God's Power, i.e. the force of gravitation, revolve in their orbits. (YV. IX. 6)

(6) "The earth revolves round the Vivasyan (i.e. the Sun) in her prescribed orbit ceaselessly (Avārataḥ) without violating this law (Vrata) and yielding juices (to living beings). She, being the cause of speech (of all living beings), gives to the noble (Varuna) donor and the learned (all comforts) by oblations (Haviḥ)." (RV. X. 66.6)

^{(3) &#}x27;'गौरादित्यो भवति । गमयति रसान् गच्छत्यन्तरिक्षे । अय द्यौः यत् पृथिक्या अधि दूरं गता भवति यच्चास्यां ज्योतींकि गच्छन्ति ।'' (N. II. 14)

^{(4) &}quot;'सूर्यरिश्मिश्चन्द्रमा गन्धर्वः' इत्यपि निगसो भवति । सोऽपि गौरुच्यते ।" (N. II. 6)

^{(5) &#}x27;'स्वरादित्यो भवति ।'' (N. II. 14)

^{(6) &#}x27;'या गौर्वर्त्तीन पृथ्वेंति निष्कृतं पयो दुहाना व्रत्नीर्रवारतेः । सा प्रं बुवाणा वर्षणाय दुाशुषे देवेश्यो दाशद्धविषा विवस्वते ॥' (RV. X. 66, 6) (Contd.)

The earth, which has been referred to above, moves round (Pari+Eti) the Sun ceaselessly (A+Varatah) in her orbit, prescribed by God for her revolution. The earth yields (Duhana) to the living beings various juices and fruits. She never leaves her Vrata (i.e. law of revolution). She supplies all comforts by her bounty (Havi) and generosity to the men of noble deeds and to the learned. She is the cause of the audible speech of all living beings. $(RV. \times .66.6)$

(7) "O Soma (i.e. the moon), you, being well known (Sam+Vidānaḥ) for your nourishing (Pitibhiḥ) qualities move round the earth (and sometimes) appear between the sun (Dyavā) and the earth." (RV. VI. 4.13.3)

(Contd. from page 189)

Here the word Vivasvan is used in Dative case, meaning "for the Sun". But Dayānanda takes it in Possessive or in Accusative case and interprets it as "Sūryasya Sūryam Vā Paritaḥ", i. e. round the Sun. This is in accordance with Paṇini's aphorism 'Supām Suluk'.

(P. VII. 1, 39)

But it will be interesting to cite below the meaning of this stanza as given by Griffith for comparison—

"The cow who yielding milk goes her appointed way hither to us, leader of us, holy rites;

Speaking aloud to Varuna and the worshipper, shall with oblation serve Vivasvān and the gods."

Thus we find that the word 'Gau' is taken here by Griffith in re sense of 'cow'. But according to Sāyaṇa, "thunder" may be meant, and by "milk" strength may be intended.

(7) ''त्वं सोम पितृभिः सं विदानोऽनु द्यावीपृथिवी आतंतन्थ।'' (RV. VI. 4. 13. 3)

According to Sāyaṇa, Soma here means the Moon, who is intimately connected with the Pitrs or Fathers.

Griffith translates it as -

"Associate with the Fathers, thou, O Soma, hast spread thyself abroad through earth and heaven."

This verse specifically states that the Moon revolves round the earth. This Moon, being well known for her nourishing properties, moves round the earth. During the course of her motions, she sometimes happens to come between the Sun and the earth.

The meaning of this entire verse will clearly be explained in our Vedic commentary. (We also come across the phrase in the Vedic literature that) " $Dy\bar{a}v\bar{a}$ $P_{!}thiv\hat{i}$ Ejete" which means that the Sun ($Dy\bar{a}v\bar{a}$) and the earth ($P_{!}thiv\bar{i}$) move.

It is, therefore, established that all spheres and regions revolve in their own orbits (according to the Vedas). (RV. VI. 4.13.3)

GRAVITATION AND ATTRACTION

(1) "As Thy beautiful Two Haris (i.e. charming qualities) shine greater and greater day by day, even then all spheres (or creatures) that had life bowed down to Thee."

(RV. VIII. 12. 28)

The import of the above noted stanza is that all spheres (including the globe) are attracted by the Sun and the Sun alongwith all spheres is upheld by the Attracting Force of God:—

(This stanza, according to Dayananda, has two meanings):-

The first meaning:

O Glorious and Almighty Lord (Indra), when Thou puttest forth Thy marvellous qualities of power and prowess, they uphold all the worlds according to the law (of times).

The second meaning: -

O Indra, (i.e. glorious Sun or air), by putting forth your mighty rays, which possess the qualities of gravitation and attraction—illumination and motion—keep up the entire universe in order through the Power of your attraction.

(RV. VIII. 12.28)

- (2) "O Indra! (God or Sun)! When all the mortal (or aerial) subjects are upheld (or kept firm) (under your law of protection or attraction), then all regions are restricted (Yemire) (to their respective orbits)." (RV. VI. 1.6.4), (RV. VIII. 12.29)
- (1) ''युदा तें हर्य्यता हरी वानुधा तें दिवे दिवे । आदि ने विश्वा मुवनानि येमिरे ॥'' (RV. VIII. 12. 28)

The word Hari may mean as Griffith says "two charming horses".

(2) 'युदा ते मारुतीविज्ञास्तुभ्यमिन्द्र नियेमिरे । आदि ते विश्वा भूवनानि येमिरे ॥'' (RV. VI. 1. 6. 4; RV. VIII. 12. 29)

Here also, like the previous verse, science of gravitation is (explained).

O Indra (Glorious Lord or the Glorious Sun) when thy Mārutîḥ (i.e. mortal in case of God and aerial in case of the Sun) Viśaḥ (subjects or shperes) are governed by Thy law of support (or attraction), then alone all the regions are kept firm. All these spheres or subjects are upheld by God and then (under Him) by the Sun. This is why all spheres move in their fixed orbits.

(RV. VI. 1.6.4), (RV. VIII. 12.29)

(3) "(O God!) When you uphold in the firmament (Divi or in your Self-effulgence) the brightly luminous Sun (under Your law), then only all the spheres are rendered firm."

(RV. VI. 1.6.5; RV. VIII. 12.30)

EXPLANATION

This verse also describes the theme of the previous verse.

O God, You have fashioned this Sun. You possess infinite power and refulgent Self. Thus You are upholding the Sun and the other spheres. All the globes including the Sun are rendered steadfast by Your Power of Attraction. The earth and all other spheres are kept firm by the Sun's attraction. The Sun himself and all other regions are supported by the Divine Law.

(RV. VI. 1.6.5; RV. VIII. 12.30)

(3) "युदा सूर्यममुं दिवि शुक्रं ज्योतिरधारय: । ब्राविते विश्वा भूवनानि येमिरे ॥"

(RV. VI. 1. 6. 5; RV. VIII. 12. 30)

These verses quoted here are capable of denoting two meanings, because the word 'Indra' gives the meaning of God as well as that of the Sun. Dayananda was a real Seer. His interpretations are always original.

Griffith translates these verses:

"When, Indra, all the Marut folk humbly submitted them to thee,

Even then all creatures that had life bowed down to thee''.

"When yonder Sun, that brilliant light, Thou settlest in heaven above,

Even then all creatures that had life bowed down to Thee."

The next verse also describes that God and the solar region uphold the universe by means of attraction and illumination:—

- (4) "The wonderful Mitra (God or the Sun) upholds the Dyāvā—Prithivī (i.e. heavenly regions and the earth) and dispels the internal darkness with His luminous rays. Vaisvānara (God or the Sun) keeps the Dyāvā-Prithivī (Dhiṣaṇe) steadfast (like the hair fixed) in the skin and thus supports the powerful world." (RV. IV. 5.10.3)
- (4) ''व्यस्तक्ष्ताद्वोदसी मित्रोऽद्भुंतोऽन्तुवविदक्कणोज्ज्योतिषा तमः। वि चभैणीव श्विषणे अवर्त्तयद्वैश्वानुरो विश्वमधत् वृष्ण्यम्।।'' (RV. IV. 5. 10. 3)

Here the word 'Mitra' (i. e. friend) means God and the Sun. God is often invoked as mother, father and friend. cf:

"स न: पितेव सूनवेऽने" (RV. I. 1. 9) "स नो बन्धुर्जनिता" (YV. XXXII. 10) "सख्येत इन्द्र वाजिनो मा भेम।" (RV. ?)

As God is friend of all, similarly the Sun benefits all. Hence He is also called Mitra.

The association of Mitra with Varuṇa is so intimate that He is addressed alone in one hymn only in RV. III. 59. According to this hymn the Mitra is the great Aditya. In the Atharvaveda, "Mitra", at the sunrise, is contracted with Varuṇa; in the evening, (and in the Brāhmaṇas Mitra is connected with day), Varuṇa with night.

The conclusion from the Vedic evidence that Mitra means the Sun is corroborated by the Avesta and by Persian religion in general where "Mithra" is undoubtedly a Sun-god or a god of light specially connected with the Sun.

The word Vaisvanara here is taken in the sense of the Sun. It is explained by Yaska in his Nirukta (VII. 22) as:—

"विश्वान् नरान् नयति ।" (i. e. one who leads mankind) or

"विश्वे एनं नरा नयन्तीति वा।" (or which is used by all men in various ways. "Viśva-Nara" gives "Vaiśvanara" in derivative form. (Contd.)

O God! due to Thy Power alone, the above-mentioned Vaisyanara i.e. the Sun, upholds the Dyava-Prithivi i.e. the luminous and the dark regions. Hence, Thou art like a friend, Regulator of all the worlds. The Sun with his wonderful form drives away the darkness by means of luminous rays. He with his power of attraction and support keeps all the dark and bright worlds firm. Similarly the other worlds, i.e. Dyava-Prithivi, with their own power of attraction afford support to others. As the hair are fixed in the skin, so the worlds are established in their respective spaces by the strength and attraction of the Sun.

Consequently it is established that this mighty (Vrşnyam) universe is supported by the solar region, &c. God sustains all the globes including the Sun.

(5) "The Deva Savity (i.e. the Bright Sun) rolling through the Kysna (i.e. attractive or dark) regions, establishing the mortal (i.e. the earth &c.) and the immortal, and surveying (as it were) all the regions, moves on by His golden (i.e. luminous) car." (YV. XXXIII. 43)

(Contd. from page 194)

According to some, it means the "atmospherical fire'. The Yajñikas say that it means the Sun. According to Śākapūņi it means the terrestrial fire. cf.:

"तत्को वैश्वानरः ? मध्यम इत्याचार्याः । अथासावादित्य इति पूर्वे याज्ञिकाः । अयमेवाग्निर्वेश्वानर इति शाकपुणिः ।" (N. VII. 23)

We come across references in the Brāhmaṇas that Vaiśvānara means both, the Sun as well as the fire. cf.:

"आदित्योऽन्निर्वेश्वानरः।" (N. VII. 23)

"पृथिवी वैश्वानरः, संवत्सरो वैश्वानरः, ब्राह्मणो वैश्वानरः ।" (N. VII. 24)

(5) ''ब्रा कृष्णेन रजेसा वर्त्तमानो निवंशयेन्त्रमृतं सत्ये च । हिर्देण्ययेन सर्विता रथेना देवो याति मुर्वनानि पश्येन् ॥'' (YV. XXXIII. 43)

This verse also occurs in RV. (J. 35. 2). Sayana interprets it as follows:—

"Revolving through the darkened firmament, areusing mortal and immortal, the god Savity travels in his golden chariot, beholding the (several) worlds." (Contd.)

Here also the science of attraction is referred to. Savity (Supreme Being or the Sun) is upholding all the spheres with (His or his) glorious (or bright) strength of attraction or with the gift of knowledge (or light) which makes the pleasure-producing activities possible. He (or he) possesses true knowledge (or the mass of rays) for the world of the mortal men or prescribes its exact place for the same. He (or he) grants immortality (emancipation) or rain (Rasa) (which helps the harvest and hence is a source of life) on the earth (i.e. for the dwellers on the earth).

The Self-effulgent (Deva) Lord (or the luminous Sun) supports all the globes and causes all things to be visible and the form $(R\bar{u}pa)$ and colour of all substantives clear and distinct.

By accepting the Anu-vṛtti (continuity) of the words 'Dyubhir-Aktubhiḥ' from the preceding verse here, the interpretation would be that the Sun attracts all the globes days (Dyubhir) and nights (Aktubhilı), i.e. at every moment. In addition to this all regions retain their own power of gravitation but God is the source of infinite power of gravitation and attraction.

Following is the interpretation given by Griffith:—

"Throughout the dusky firmament advancing, laying to rest the immortal and the mortal,
Borne on his golden chariot, he cometh,
Savitar, God, beholding living creatures".

Here we find a literal rendering but Dayananda finds a scientific meaning in the word Kṛṣṇa, which is ordinarily understood to mean "Dark" but etymologically it denotes a person or a thing possessing (charmingly) attractive power. Lord Kṛṣṇa was called so, because he had a wonderful power of attraction. Not only the human beings, even all living beings were kept by him spell-bound, because of his magnetic power of Yoga. The same word, Kṛṣṇa, occurs here also. Dayānanda, therefore, rightly and precisely hinted upon the real import showing that the Sun has power of attraction and gravitation.

The word 'Rajas' (in this verse) is the synonym of the "regions". It is stated by Yāska, the author of the Nirukta (IV. 19), as:—

(6) "The regions are called Rajansi."

(N. IV.19.7)

The word 'Ratha' indicates here knowledge or light, which is the source of pleasure. The Nirukta supports this view:—

(7) "The word 'Ratha' is from √Ramh to go or from √Sthā to stand with letters reversed (i.e. Sthā+Ra=Ra+Thā) or one sits upon it rejoicing. It may be from √Rai to go or from √Ras to taste." (N. IX. 11)

According to the following quotation from the Nirukta the word Vaiśvānara means the Sun!

(8) "Of Viśvanara i.e. of the Sun."

(N, XII, 21)

There are many verses in the Vedas like this which deal with the topic of attraction and support.

Rai Dayananda presented two meanings of this verse under his signature in his written disputation with Panditas in Ahmedabad in January 1875 (A.D.). It is relevant to cite here:—

"(आकृष्णेन) आकर्षणात्मना (रजसा) रक्षोरूपेण वा (रथेन) रमणीयेन (देः) द्योत-नात्मकः (सविता) प्रसवकर्ता वृष्टचादेः (मर्त्यम्) मर्त्यलोकम् (अमृतं) ओषध्यादिकं रसं (निवेशयन्) प्रवेशयन् (भुवनानि पश्यन्) दर्शयन् (याति) रूपादिकं विभक्तं प्रापयतीत्यर्थः (हिरण्ययेन) ज्योतिमंथेन ।।

(सविता) सर्वस्य जगतः उत्पादकः (देवः) सर्वस्य प्रकाशकः (मर्त्यम्) मर्त्यलोकस्थान् मनुष्यान् (अमृतम्) सत्योपदेशरूपम् (निवेशयन्) प्रवेशयन् सर्वाणि (भुवनानि) सर्वज्ञतया (पश्यन्) सन् (आकृष्णेन) सर्वस्याकर्षणस्वरूपेण वर्त्तमानः सन् (याति) धर्मात्मनः स्वान् भक्तान् सकामान् प्रापयतीत्यर्थः ॥ दयानन्द सरस्वती स्वामिनः ॥ (Devendra Nath: स्वामी दयानन्द का जीवनचरित, Vol. I, page 323).

^{(6) &}quot;लोका रजांस्युचयन्ते।" (N. IV. 19)

^{(7) &#}x27;'रथो रंहतेर्गतिकर्मणः स्थिरतेर्वा स्याद्विपरीतस्य । रममाणोऽस्मिन् तिब्ठतीति या । रपतेर्वा रसतेर्वा ।'' (N, IX. 11)

^{(8) &}quot;विश्वनरस्यादित्यस्य ।" (N. XII. 21)

THE ILLUMINATOR AND THE ILLUMINATED

Now we discuss the topic that the Moon, &c., are illuminated by the Sun.

The following verses describe that the Sun illumines the earth and the Moon:—

- (1) "The earth is upheld by Satya (i. e. Supreme Being). Dyau (i. e. the entire light or the shining regions) is maintained by the Sun. The Ādityas (i. e. 12 months) are made by Rta (i. e. the Sun) and the Moon is established in the solar light (Divi)."

 (AV. XIV. 1.1)
- (2) "Adityas (i. e. solar rays) become invigorative through the Moon. The earth takes strength through the Moon. And this Moon is placed amongst the constellations or stars."

 (AV. XIV. 1. 2)
- (3) "Who wanders lonely on his way?
 Who is constantly born anew?
 What is the remedy for cold?
 What is the great corn-vessel called?" (YV. XXIII. 9 or 45)
- (4) "The Sun wanders lonely on its way, The Moon is constantly born anew, Fire is the remedy for cold, The earth is the great corn-vessel." (YV. XXIII. 10 or 46)
- (1) ''सुरयेनोत्तं भिता भूमिः सूर्येणोत्तं भिता छौ:। ऋतेनोदित्यास्तिध्ठन्ति द्वित्र सोमो अधिश्वतः।'' (AV. XIV. 1. 1)
- (2) "सोमेनादित्या बुलिनुः सोमेन पृथिवी मुही । अयो मक्षेत्राणामेषामुपस्थे सोम आहितः ॥" (AV. XIV. 1.2)
- (3) "कः स्विदेकाकी चेरति क उ स्विष्जायते पुन: ।

 कि एस्विद्धिमस्य भेषुजं कि वावर्षनं महत् ॥" (YV. XXIII. 9 or 45)
- (4) 'भूष' एकाकी चरित चुन्द्रमा जायते पुन: । अनिहिंसस्य भेषुजं भूमिरावर्षनं महत् ॥" (YV. XXIII. 10. or 46)

The earth is kept up in space by the eternal Supreme Being, the Sun and the air. The entire light (Dyau i. e. Sarva-prakasa) is upheld by the Sun. Adityas (12 months) owe their existence to Rta (i. e. time). The solar rays (Adityas) are generated from the Sun. The motes and particles are contained in the air. Similarly the Moon is indebted to Dyau i. e. solar light as her illuminator. Such globes, as the Moon, &c., do not have light of their own. The Moon and the other such regions are irradiated with the solar light.

(AV. XIV. 1. 1)

The solar rays coming into contact with the lunar globe are reflected on the earth and become invigorative as they happen to acquire strength—inspiring qualities in the under-mentioned manner. The region of space, unapproached by solar rays on account of the interception by the earth grows rather cold. This region being devoid of the Sun's rays becomes devoid of heat also. (Because of the absence of solar heat and light) the lunar rays attain vigour and strength-inspiring qualities. The earth also becomes strong and invigorated because of the (such) lunar light or herbs called Soma (which are nourished by the Moonlight). For this very purpose the Moon is established very close to the constellations and stars.

(AV. XIV. 1. 2)

There are four interrogative sentences in the verse (XV. XXIII. 9):

(1) Who does wander alone in this universe? (2) Who does shine with his own light and who is illuminated again and again (born again and again)?

(3) What is the remedy for cold? (4) What is the great field for sowing seeds in?

(YV.XXIII. 9)

Their respective answers are :-

- (I) The Sun wanders alone in this universe radiant with his own light and irradiating others.
- (II) The Moon shines with the light of the Sun and she does not retain her own light (she also appears to be born again and again).
- (III) Fire is the remedy for cold.
- (IV) The earth is the great field for sowing seeds. (YV. XXIII. 10)

There are many verses in the Vedas, similar to the above, dealing with this topic.

THE SCIENCE OF MATHEMATICS

- (!) "May my One and my Three, and my Three and my Five, and my Five and my Seven (and similarly upto Thirty-three) prosper by Sacrifice (Yajña.)" (YV. XVIII. 24)
- (2) "May my Four and my Fight and my Twelve (and similarly upto Forty-eight) prosper by Sacrifice (Yajña). (YV. XVIII. 25)

The above-noted two verses reveal the Science of Mathematics, i. e. Arithmetic, Algebra and Geometry:—

EXPLANATION

SCIENCE OF MATHEMATICS

three make six; similarly the numeral four, five, &c., occurring in the verses indicate that the Science of Mathematics is evolved by treating th figures in different ways such as Addition, &c.

Moreover, the frequent use of the conjunction 'Ca' (i.e. and) suggests that there are various other sciences of calculations. We shall not dilate upon this topic here because it is quite evident to all that this science has been dealt with in detail in Jyoti, a, i.e. Astronomy, which is an Anga (limb) of the Vedas. But it must be known (to all) that such verses contain the original germs of the science of Mathematics which is the subject of books on Astronomy. The science of calculation (i.e. Arithmetic) deals with the known and the science of Algebra (Bîja) with the unknown and uncertain quantities. The following verse indicates that the science of Algebra is found in the Vedas as it is hinted upon by the symbols 'A3-Ka3', &c.

(3) "A²gna³ā¹ yā²hi vî³ta¹ye²
 Gṛṇā³no³-ha³vya¹-dāta²ye ;
 Ni¹hotā² satsi ba³rhi¹si²." (SV. I. 1), (YV. XVIII. 25)

According to the maxim that one act serves twofold purpose, the numerals marked on the letters of the above-cited verse, for indicating the accent, contain an illusion to the science of Algebra also.

In the under-mentioned two verses the (science) of Geometry is revealed:—

- (4) "This altar is the extreme limit of the earth. This Sacrifice (Yajña) is the centre of the world. This Soma is the Stallion's genial humour, (and) this Brahmā is the highest region where the Speech resides." (YV. XXIII. 62)
- (3) ''अंग्न आ याहि बीतये गुणानो हव्यदातये। निहोता सत्सि बीहिष्।।'' (SV. I. 1)
- (4) इयं वेदिः प्रो अन्तैः पृथिक्या अयं यज्ञोमुर्वनस्य नार्निः । अयं सोमो वृष्णो अश्वेस्य रेती ब्रह्मायं वाचः पर्मं व्यीम ॥"

(YV. XXIII. 62)

This verse is a good example of figurative or symbolic expression, which has been clearly explained in the original by our author. Mahīdhara wrongly interprets the first foot of the stauza as—

(5) "What was the rule? What was the model and what was the cause? What was the clarified butter, what the enclosure, what was the metre, what was the Pra-Uga (text), when all gods offered worship to God?" (RV. X. 130. 3)

EXPLANATION

The sacrificial altars (Vedis) are made in various shapes, i.e. triangular, quadrilateral, circular shape or in the shape of a Syena (i.e. a hawk or a horse). By means of creating various forms of the altars, the Geometrical Science was expounded.

Paridhi or circumference is a line drawn round the parts of the earth, farthest from its centre. A line drawn from any point on the circumference and passing through the centre is called Vyāsa i. e. diameter or the middle line in Geometry. This is the centre or Nabhi (i.e. navel) of the world (the earth or universe). These lines are so called because all such lines converge to meet in the centre. The word Yajña also means a centre, where all activities or all men meet together. Thus the Soma, i.e. Lunar Region, also has Paridhi, i.e. circumference, &c. The rain-producing Sun, light, heat (fire) and the air all possess their own circumferences; thus they produce (the requisite) velocity. Their (of the Sun, air &c.) energy (Retos) in the form of medicines is widespread.

Brahmā is the circumference of the speech. [Here the words Paramam Vyoma (i.e. the highest region) figuratively mean Paridhi or circumference).

(YV. XXIII. 62)

⁽Contd. from page 201)

[&]quot;the place where gods visit men—the place meant heaven". The Stallion means here Dyaus whose genial humour is the fertilizing rain which impregnates the earth. The Brahmā who is the store-house of the Vedic learning and who recites the texts of the Veda is described here as the Abiding place of Speech.

^{(5) &#}x27;कार्क्ष'त् प्रमा प्रतिमा कि निदानुमाज्ये किमामीत् परिधिः क ग्रांसीत् । छन्दः किमासीत् प्रतिम् किमुक्थं यद्देवा देवमयजन्त विश्वें ।। (RV. X. 130.3)

⁽b) Pratimā: Model, Limitation (Sāyana).

There are following questions (put in this verse):

What is Prama (i.e. correct cognition)? Who is its owner? Wh is the intellect essential for obtaining true knowledge?

What is Pratima (i.e the standard of measurement)? Who do measure and count all?

What is Nidāna (i.e. the cause)? What is Ājya (essence like ghe in this world? What is the Ultimate Reality—the Worth Knowing or tl Destroyer of All afflictions—and all Bliss?

What is Paridhi (i.e. circumference) i.e. the mainstay of the world Paridhi is a line running round a spherical object.

What is Chandas (i.e. independent object) in this world?

What is Pra-Uga (i.e. Praiseworthy)?

The answers to these questions are: -

The Supreme Lord, Whom Devas (i.e. the learned) worshipped, d and shall worship, is Pramā (correct cognition) and He alone know everything as it is. He is the Measurer (Pratimā) of all. In this way th answer should be made applicable to all remaining questions by properl construing the words.

(RV. X. 130.3)

Here also the word Paridhi (i.e. circumference) clearly refers to th Geometrical Science. This science has been expounded in detail in book on Astronomy.

The Vedas contain a number of stanzas dealing with Mathematics

PRAISE, PRAYER AND WORSHIP OF GOD, SUPPLICATION TO HIM AND RESIGNATION TO HIS WILL

The topic of glorification (Stuti) has already been dealt with in the verses commencing with "Yo Bhūtam Ca" etc. and it will be taken later on also. Now, we explain the subject of prayer:—

The following verses deal with the adoration and prayer of God:

- (1) "Thou art splendour, give me splendour; Thou art virility, give me virility; Thou art power, give me power; Thou art energy, give me energy; Thou art wrath, give me wrath; Thou art forbearance, give me forbearance." (YV. XIX. 9)
- (2) "May Indra (Glorious Lord) make my senses strong; may He support us. May Magharan (i.e. Lord of Riches) extend our riches. May our desires be truthful. May our wishes be accomplished." (YV. II. 10)
- (3) "O Agni (Effulgent God)! Make me possessor of discriminative understanding (Medha) by bestowing on me that wisdom which the learned (Devas) and the Protectors of society (Pitaras), by Thy Grace, attain to." (YV. XXXII. 14)

EXPLANATION

O Supreme Lord! Thou art splendour, i.e. Thou shinest forth with Thy qualities of infinite knowledge etc., make me repository of light of unlimited knowledge. O God; Thou art Vîrya (virility), i.e. Thy prowess is infinite, kindly bestow upon me determined vigour and activity of body and mind. O Lord of the Highest Might! Thy strength is infinite, kindly grant me the best and excellent valour. O Lord! Thou art Energy, endow me with the strength of truth and knowledge. O Lord! Thou art Wrath, i.e. in Thee there is righteous indignation towards the wicked, grant by Thy grace that indignation to me also. O Lord of Forbearance! enable me to endure pain and pleasure with equanimity. Be pleased and graciously grant me these virtuous qualities."

O Indra! (i.e. Most Prosperous God) Make my all senses, i.e. ears etc. and the mind the most superior. Most graciously protect us and bless us with all good things of the world. Thou art, O Lord, the Home of all Treasures of the Highest Wisdom, etc. May it be Thy pleasure that the best riches such as the glories of empire be beneficial for us and may we be able to attain them.

God ordains that men should strive to achieve these good qualities. O God! May our desires, through Thy grace, be successful. May our aspirations to participate in the administration of world-empire be never frustrated.

(YV. II. 10)

O Self-Effulgent God! Make me today master of superior and steady discriminative understanding, which is constantly sought after by the learned (Devas) and the wise (Pitaras). The meaning of the word 'Svaha' (occurring in this verse) is explained by the author of the Nirukta under the heading of 'Svahā-Kṛṭayaḥ' as:—

(4) "What is $Sv\hat{a}h\hat{a}$? (Because it refers to a statement) which is rightly spoken. (Su-âhâ, from the root Vad to speak); or because it is spoken by one's own speech (Sva-vâk-âha); or it is spoken to one's own self (Svam-âha); or a rightly refined oblation is offered." (N. VIII. 20)

The meaning of these lines is not very clear. Our author has rightly made an attempt to explain it as above. Durga explains it in the following words—

^{(4) &#}x27;'स्वाहाकृतयः । स्वाहेत्येतत् । सु + आहेति वा, स्वा वाग् आहेति वा, स्वं प्राहेति वा, स्वाहुतं हिवर्जुहोतीति दाः।'' (N. VIII. 20)

[&]quot;सु = सुब्दू + आहेति वा । शोभनमाह । तं स्वा वागभ्यवदत् जुहुधीति । सत्स्वाह्यकारस्य जन्म । स्वं प्राहेति कर्मणि ॥" (Contd.)

According to this, ' $Sv\bar{a}h\bar{a}$, means (Su+aha) that all should always utter sweet and eloquent words which may be pleasant and beneficial; or one should express in words what he intelligently feels or what his inner voice says. ($Sva+Vak+\bar{A}ha$) or they should regard (call) what really belongs to them as their own ($Svam+Prati+\bar{A}ha$) and they should not claim what belongs to others. They should offer oblations into the fire after purifying (refining) them rightly and carefully. (YV. XXXII. 14)

(5) "Strong be your weapons for driving away (your) foes; firm for resistance let them be. Yours be the strength that merits praise; not (the strength) of a treacherous mortal."

(RV. I. 39. 2)

Professor M Winternitz makes the following observations about "such" words—

"Finally, there is yet another kind of 'prayers', as we cannot help calling them, with which we meet already in the Yajurveda, and with which also at later periods, much mischief was done. They are single syllables or words which convey no meaning at all, or whose meaning has been lost, which are pronounced in the most solemn manner at certain places in the act of sacrifice, and are regarded as immensely sacred. There is, first of all, the sacrificial cry 'Svāhā' which we usually translate by 'hail', with which every gift for the gods is thrown into the fire, while the cry 'Svadhā' is employed in the case of sacrificial gifts to the fathers. Other quite unintelligible ejaculations of the kind are Vaṣaṭ, Veṭ, but above all the most sacred syllable "Om". (History of Indian Literature, Page 185)

Mr. M. Winternitz, being a foreigner, seems to have no precise knowledge of Vedic tradition. He maintains that these words "have no meaning at all". The height of it is when he includes the most popular and the most Sacred syllable "Om" in this list.; which has, so widely, clearly and positively, been explained in Vedic and later scriptures.

(5) स्थिरा वं: सन्त्वायुंघा पराणुदें वृोद्ध उत प्रतिष्क में । युष्पाकेमस्तु तविषी पर्नायसी मा मत्यैस्य मायिनः ॥ (RV. I. 39. 2)

- (6) . "Overflow for food (Işe), overflow for strength; overflow for divine knowledge; overflow for warrior-valour; overflow for Heaven and earth. Thou, O Duteous One, art Duty (Dharma). Innocent one, establish in us manly valour; establish the people." (YV. XXXVIII. 14)
- 7. "May that my mind, (the sole) illuminator (of the sense organs) which illuminate the objects of senses, which in the waking state flees far (to various places and different objects) and during sleep returns to the internal sense, be always actuated by righteous resolves." (YV. XXXIV. 1)

- (8) बार्जश्च मे प्रस्वश्चं मे प्रयंतिश्च मे । प्रसितिश्च मे श्रीतिश्चं मे ऋतृश्च मे ० ॥ (YV. XVIII. 1)

The purport of all these stanzas has been explained in detail by our author in the text.

- (a) Regarding the verse (7) it may be noted that the first six verses of the Yajurveda (XXXIV) constitute a Hymn regarded as an Upanişad and called Śiva-Samkalpa (i. e. Right Resolves) from the concluding words in each stanza.
- (b) The book XVIII of the Yajarveda contains the formulas for the performance of the ceremony called "Vasor-Dhara", "the stream or shower of Riches", a sort of consecration Service of Agni, i.e. God as King on the completion of the Fire Altar which is identified with him. The Sacrificer offers an uninterrupted series of four hundred and one oblations of clarified butter poured from a large ladle of Udambara wood, while the Adhvaryu recites the formulas which are to gain for the Sacrificer all the temporal and spiritual blessings therein indicated, Such is the tradition of the Ritualistic school.

This verse (No. 5) contains God's Blessings to mankind. "O men, may your arms and weapons e. g. fire-arms (Agneya Astra), guns (Bhuśandi), and cannons (Sataghnī), bows, arrows and swords etc., through My Grace, be fast and firm. These arms be strong and laudable and may bring about the defeat of your enemies (Parānude). May they be potent enough to resist and paralyse the foes. Let your armies be exceedingly efficient and well equipped and strong. Let your world-wide administration flourish safely. Your foes who perpetrate evil deeds and who resist you be routed (in the battle). But this Blessing of Mine is only for persons who adhere to the truthful conduct and not for them who are addicted to injustice and treachery. The idea is that 1 (God) never bless those persons who commit evil acts and are unjust. (RV. 1. 39. 2)

O God! make us independent, strong and happy so that we may entertain noble and high aspirations (Uttama-Icchā) and acquire most nourishing food (Anna). Endow us always with untiring and unflinching zeal and courage so that we may be able to exert ourselves to the best of our efforts for the attainment of a Brahmana's rank, with a view to achieving the knowledge of the Vedic Lore. Make us bravest of the brave and imbibe us with the spirit of a Ksatriya so that the world-wide empire accompanied by the sovereign power may be achieved. May we be able to obtain efficiency in scientific and mechanical sphere. May we do good to all mankind like the Sun, the fire, etc. which are serving the universe by supplying it with light and contributing to its welfare. O Lord of Justice and Piety, Thou art just, make us also lover of justice and righteousness (Dharma). O Universal Benefactor! Lord! Thou art Ameni (i.e. free from malice or ill will). Make us also friends of all and devoid of feeling of enmity. Bestow upon us O Lord! highly lawful good government and precious things (Nrmnani). Similarly make good Brahmanas rich in Vedic learning, good Kşatriyas possessing administrative instincts and good Vaiśyas, i. e. good citizens. In short make us home of all good qualities and give us strength enough to realize all our desires and aspirations.

(YV. XXXVIII. 14)

The mind of a man flees far (to distant places and different objects) in his wakeful state and presides over all his senses and retains shining qualities of (brilliant) knowledge etc. (In the same manner) in his sleepy state also it takes cognizance of many bright (Daiva) objects. In the state of Suşupti (i.e. deep and dreamless sleep) it experiences absolute and divine (Divya) bliss. By nature it has far-reaching hold (Dūram-Gama). It is a light or illuminator, (Jyoti) of all the sense organs or the Sun etc. (Jyoti)

Sam). This mind is a unitive (force). O God! may this mind of mir—(the basic) instrument of thinking faculty—have righteous, pious an beneficent resolves.

(YV. XXXIV.)

Similarly the verse occurring in the 18th Chapter of the Yajurved "Vajašca me" etc. ordains that the Vedas enjoin that all possessions shoul be surrendered to God. It is therefore, established that for all desire objects including the highest attainments, e.g., emancipation and ordinar things like food and drinks only, God is to be invoked. (YV. XVIII.)

(9) "May life succeed through sacrifice (Yajña). May vital ai thrive by sacrifice. May the eye thrive by sacrifice. May the ear thrive by sacrifice. May the voice thrive by sacrifice. May the mind thrive by sacrifice. May the Self thrive b sacrifice. May Brahmā thrive by sacrifice. May light succeed by sacrifice. May Svar (i.e. happiness) increase by sacrifice May the hymn thrive by sacrifice. May sacrifice prosper by sacrifice; and land and sacrificial text (Yajur), and verse of praise (Rk) and Sāma, the Bthat and Rathantara. O God (i.e. the learned), we have gone (i.e. achieved) to light. We have become the children of Prajāpati. We have become immortal."

with God through $Yaj\tilde{n}a$ (Sacrifice). May we, in order to express our gratitude to Him, surrender to God all what we have e.g., Prani (breath), sight, speech (Vak) (i.e. the senses), mind (i.e. thinking faculty and knowledge), soul, the characteristics of a Brāhmaṇa—the performer of sacrifices and at home in the four Vedas, Jypii (i.e. the light of the Sun etc.), Dharma (i.e. justice). Svah (happiness), the earth—the subsistence and support of all, $Yaj\bar{n}a$ (e.g. Asvamedha etc.) or arts and sciences, Stoma (i.e. collection of praises), the study of the Yajurveda, Rgveda, the Sāmaveda and (the study of the Atharvaveda) which is indicated by the particle 'Ca' (i.e. and), the enjoyment of the fruits of great enterprises and the results of scientific and mechanical activities.

By doing so, the most merciful God will bestow upon us the highest bliss. Thus we shall be shining with (the glow of) pleasures and shall attain the highest bliss of emancipation. N'ay we be the subjects of the Prajap.ti (i.e. the Lord of mankind) and may we never recognise any human being as our king except God. May we always speak truth and gather courage and zeal to abide by the will of the Lord with utmost efforts. May we never transgress Thy will but remain in Thy service with filial love.

WORSHIP

The following verses ordain that God alone is to be worshipped by mankind:—

- (1) "The wise concentrate their minds; they perform sacred rites for the propitiation of the intelligent, great, adorable Savitar (i.e. Creator): he alone, knowing their functions, directs (all); verily great is the praise of the Divine Creator." (RV. V.81.1)
- (2) "Savitā (i.e. the Creator or Impeller), first of all making (the wise) concentrate their minds and thoughts for (the realisation of) reality and showing (them) the light of Agni, bore them up from the earth" (YV. XI.1)

- (1) युञ्जते मर्न उत युञ्जते धियो विशा विश्वस्य बृहतो विपृश्चितः । नि होर्बो दधे वयुनाविदेक इन्मही देवस्य सिवृतुः परिष्टुतिः ॥ (RV. V.81.1; YV. XI.1:)
- (2) युञ्जानः प्रयमं मर्नस्तत्त्वार्यं सिवृता धिर्यम् । अन्नेज्योतिन्वार्यं पृथिन्या अध्याभरत् ॥ (YV. XI.1)

In this and the following verses of the Yajurveda (XI) are contained, according to Mahîdhara, formulas for the construction of Altars or hearths for the various sacrificial fires and first and chiefly for building up with about 10,800 bricks, all laid with special consecrating-text, the Uttara Vedi or High Altar which represents the universe and is identified with Agni himself. This ceremony, called Agni Cayana, requires a year for (Contd)

^{} Note: —It has been my best effort to give the faithful translation of the Vedic verses throughout this work, keeping also in view Dayānanda's rendering given in his explanations in this work. But I have never sacrificed the original sense, which naturally in certain cases resulted in variant rendering.

- (3) "By impulse of God Saritar, we with our mind concentrated upon, strive, with (all our) might to win Bliss (of emancipation)."

 (YV. XI.2)
- (4) "Savita, having impelled Devas (i.e. the wise) to go to light and to win the highest bliss with brilliant thought who create the lofty light (of knowledge in the world), urge them on their way." (YV. XI.3)
- (5) "I yoke with your prayer ancient inspirations: May glory come to you as (to a man) on the way of the wise. Let all Sons of the Immortal One, hear it, who have resorted to the bright regions." (YV XI.5) its completion and is of corresponding importance. The High Altar is constructed in the shape of an outspread bird, probably an eagle or a falcon.

But all this is not admitted by Dayananda whose main consideration is the import of the Vedic words. The Vedas, according to him, are not wedded to the Mīmānsakas (the Ritualist school) alone.

- (3) "युक्तेन मर्नसा वृषं देवस्यं सिवृतुः सुवे । स्वर्ग्यायु शक्तर्या ॥" (YV. XI.2)
- (4) ''युक्तवार्य सिवृता देवान् स्वयुतो श्रिया दिवेम् । बृहज्ज्योतिः करिष्युतः सेविता प्रस्तेविति तान् ॥'' (YV. XI.3)
- (5) 'युजे वां बर्का पूर्व्या नमोभिष्टिकलोके एतु पृथ्येव सूरेः । कृष्यन्तु विश्वे अमृतंस्य पुताऽआ ये धार्मानि दिव्यानि तस्थुः ॥" (1/V. XI.5)
 Also found in RV. X.13.1.
 - (a) Vam: Of you two. According to Mahīdhara it refers to the Sacrificer and his wife. According to our author, Upāsanā-Prada (i. e. the teacher of worship) and Upāsanā-Gṛhitā (i. e. the worshipper), are meant here.
 - (b) Brahma: Inscription. According to Mahīdhara, the vital airs, the seven sages and Brāhmanas who are engaged in the holy work. Dayānanda rightly interprets it as "God". (Contd.)

WORSHIP

EXPLANATION

The idea here is that the wise (Viprāḥ) Yogins— the worship God, fix their minds on and attain communion with the Omniscie who created this whole universe and is Vayuna-vit, i.e., who stands to the good and evil actions or thoughts of all beings and also know created beings. He is one without a second—Omnipresent and All Kno Nothing is superior to Him. He is the light of the whole universe a created it. All men under all circumstances should offer prayers In this way, the individual souls become able to approach Him (i.e. communion). (RV.

Savita (i.e. the inspirer God) very graciously is pleased to (Upa-yunkte) to Himself the minds and intellects of the persons who to realise in meditation (Yuñjanaḥ) the reality of Divine Existence a knowledge, &c. The Yogin (i.e. a meditating worshipper) having the self-effulgent (Agni) and all-illuminating (Jyoti) nature of God (Adhya+Bharat) Him in his soul (i.e. mind). It should always be in mind that this is the distinguishing characteristic of a (real) Yothis world.

May all human beings relish such aspirations as the following:-

May we seek to reside in the infinite glory (Devasya) and li (spiritual) prosperity of the self-effulgent Lord—the bestower of (e happiness and the indwelling ruler of all (Antar-vāmin) with our senses purged (of all blemishes) through Yoga and through developed powers. In this way may we attain the bliss of emancipation. (YV.

His blessings are bestowed upon you when you adore Him, the E Supreme Being, with undivided devotion and earnestness of the soul. your fame go far and wide like that of the learned in the paths of righ ness. Those worshippers who abide by His will and serve Him—the Al and the eternal Lord, are capable of doing virtuous deeds of wisdon

(c) Sayana renders it:

conviction and worship and to make happy regions or births—their abode. May you, the teachers and the learners of worship listen to this carefully. He is accessible to you only when you worship Him in this way. God thus promises to the teacher and the learner of worship. (YV. XI. 3 & 5)

- (6) "The wise, with minds devoted to Devas, the skilful (Sirāḥ) bind the traces fast (with God) and lay (the mental) yokes on (distinctly) separate (aspects) (i.e. keep their minds away from worldly objects)." (YV. XII.67)
- (7) "Lay on the yokes and fasten well the traces: formed in the furrow, sow the seed within it Through song may we find hearing fraught with plenty; near to the ripened grain approach the sickle." (YV. XII.68)

EXPLANATION

The learned (Kavayah) Yogins, who have acquired clear perception ($Kr\bar{a}nta-dar\dot{s}ana$) and whose intellect has become pure and placid and who have had the power of concentration of the mind, seek to subdue their ($S\bar{i}rah$ i.e. $N\bar{a}d\bar{i}s$) the arteries, veins etc, for the glorification and adoration of God through the process of yogic exercises, i.e., they practise to realise the existence of the Lord in them and extend (Vitanvate) their activities in accordance with the science of Yoga. Such persons easily (Sumnaya) achieve the rank among the learned (Deva) Yogins and enjoy the Supreme Bliss. (YV. XII.67)

O Yogins! enjoy fully the supreme Bliss, obtainable at the stage of communion with God through Yoga and the Bliss of final emancipation

According to Mahīdhara, the whole chapter (YV. XII) deals with formulas relating chiefly to the treatment of Ukhya Agni or Agni of the Fire-pan and preparation of $\bar{A}havan\bar{\imath}\gamma a$ Fire-Altar.

The above English rendering is based on the Ritualist school. Dayananda's explanation is quite different from this and is based on the actual text.

and enhance (Vi-tanudhvam) the activities of worship by meditating upon God in arteries (Sirah) etc. which are regarded as the seat of vital air (Prona). Thus having purified the inner senses (Antah karana), sow (Vapat i.e. Vapata) the seeds (Bijam) of Vijnana (i.e. perfect and absolute know ledge) through yogic worship in the Yoni (i.e. in the causal body or soul) where the highest bliss resides by performing yogic worship and making yourself at home in the Vedic lore (Gira i.e. Veda Vani). May the fruition of Yoga be soon (Srusti) achieved (lit. reached) by us through the grace of God, i.e., may the communion with God, through the process of Yogic practices be directed to us fully (A+Iyat). These yogic activities are verify destructive of all pains (Srnyah). Here the word 'It' is used in the serse of 'verily'. These activities are also Sabharah (i.e. endowed with peace and tranquility, etc.

The meaning of the words 'Sruşti' (i.e. soon) and Srni (i.e. destroyer) are supported by the following evidence from the Nirukta:—

- (a) "Śrusti is a synonym of 'soon'." (N. VI. 12)
 - o) "Syni is twofold—destructive as well as constructive."
 (N. XIII 5)
- (8) "Let the propitious and mighty Twenty-e'ght together bring me out my (share of) profit.

 (AV. X-X.8.?)

 Thou, whom all regard." (AV. XIII.4.48)

O Supreme Lord! may the Twenty-eight substantives viz. ten organs of sensation and action, ten Prāṇas (vital airs), the mind, the intellect, consciousness, Ahankāra (i.e. egoism), knowledge, instinct and bodily strength, be beneficial and bliss-inspiring (Śagmani) through Thy grace. My days and nights (Aho-rātra) be elapsed in the (noble) act of Thy glorification. Graciously enable me to acquire Yoga (i.e. security of possession) from Kṣema (i.e. the prosperity already acquired) and from Kṣema to Yoga. May O Lord! you help and succour me. I constantly offer you homage of reverence.

(AV. XIX 8.2)

The (foregoing) and the following verses are from the Atharvaveda: -

O Indra (i.e. Lord of prosperity)! Thou art the Lord of $Sac\bar{\imath}$ (i.e., creatures or speech or activity) and because of Tby Omnipotence and Excellence Thou surpassest $(Bh\bar{\imath}\nu\bar{\imath}n)$ all exceedingly. Thou art the destroyer $(Satru\ i.e., S\bar{\imath}tayit\bar{\imath}a)$ of the harmful speech $(Ar\bar{\imath}t\nu\bar{\imath}h)$ and action. Thou art omnipresent $(Vibh\bar{\imath}u)$ and Almighty $(Prabh\bar{\imath}u, i.e., Samartha)$. May we worship $(Up\bar{\imath}smahe)$ Thee, alone, in the aforesaid way.

The word 'Śacī' is read in the list of synonyms of speech vide Nigbaritu (I. 11). This word also is enumerated in synonyms of Karma (action) vide Nighantu (II. 1) This word 'Śacī' is again read in the list of synonyms of creatures vide Nigharitu (III. 9).*

Thus according to this quotation (referred to by our author above) the word ' $\hat{S}ac\hat{\imath}$ ' means intellect and not creatures as stated above. The (Contd.)

God ordains, "O men! behold (i.e. understand) Me, by means of worship and behave (like a man who) knows Me. Let a devotee understand (this) and say, 'O Lord of infinite knowledge! may I make always obeisance to Thee'.

(AV. XIII.4.47 and 48)

O Supreme Lord! graciously watch over us and for this purpose we adore Thee always. May we always be rich in food (Anna-ādyena) and the glories of empire. May the real fame (Yasa) born of the performance of good and excellent deeds be ours. May we attain glory (Tejas) and never be oppressed and dependent but always (intellectually or physically) powerful and may we acquire complete and full knowledge (Brāhmaṇa-Varcasena).

word Prajña seems to be confused with Praja. Up to the fifth edition we find "प्रजानामसु" reading here but in the Śatābdi edition, it is corrected as "प्रजानामसु" and it continues up to the 9th edition. But our author explains it as "(शच्याः) प्रजाया वाण्याः कर्मणो वा पतिः". This indicates that he accepts प्रजायाः and not "प्रजायाः" reading here, Dayananda must have got a MS of निचण्ड (II. 2) with प्रजायाः reading.

EXPLANATION

O Supreme Being! Thou art all-pervading tranquil as (deep) waters (Ambhah); the life of life, knowledge itself (Amah), the adorable (Mahah), greatest of all, the tolerant. Knowing that Thou art such, we offer adoration to Thee. Here the word 'Ambhah' is derived from the root $\bar{A}phy$ with suffix Asun to it. (AV. XIII.4.50)

The word 'Ambhah' has been explained in (the previous verse) already. Here its repetition is to show respect. Thou art O Lord! Ambhah (i.e. all-pervading etc.), Aruna (i.e. the self-effulgent), Rajata (i.e. lovable and all blissful), Rajas (i.e. Lord of all worldly riches) and Sahah (i.e. bestower of the power of toleration). We offer adorations to Thee, i.e., may we never be separated from you and never worship anyone else. (AV. XIII.4.51)

Thou art O Lord! Uru (i.e. almighty), Prthu (i.e. omnipresent), $Subh\bar{u}$ (i.e. penetrating all objects through and through) and Bhuvali (i.e. being vast as space the abode of all). Knowing this that Thou art such we glorify Thee. The Word 'Uru' occurring here evidently means 'immense' and 'many'. (Vide Nighaṇu III. 1).* (AV. XIII.4.52)

Thou art O Lord! Prathale (i.e. the spreader or creator of the whole universe), Vara (i.e. the best of all), Vyacale (i.e. one who knows this world in all its multiforms), and Loka (i.e. to be realised by all or causing others to perceive). We invoke Thee, O Omniscient Lord! who art of such form.

This verse can be interpreted in the following many ways:

(First meaning): The learned Yogins attain spiritual communion (Yuñ jañti) with the Omnipresent Lord who perfectly knows all thing (Sarvajña) or men (Tasthuṣaḥ), who is A-ruṣa (i.e. one who injures none and hence merciful) and Bradhna (i.e. giver of immense bliss through devotional knowledge and meditation). They shine (Rocante) with the acquisition of the highest bliss and becoming illuminated themselves reside in Him who is self-effulgent and light of the entire creation.

(Second meaning): All the regions and all the objects (Tasthuşah are attached to (and made firm) by the Sun (Bradhna) who is a mass o fire (Aruşa) and moving himself sets others in motion (Carantam). Bein; illuminated (Rocenah) all shine in His light (Divi) (in the bright sky).

(a) Pari-Tasthuşalı: Standing around. Sayana explains it as "The living beings of the three worlds." Probably "Maruts" Indra's constant companions. (Griffith). Thus according to Sayana "people of the three worlds associate with Indra" Here we find three epithets. Of the three first objects, the text gives only the epithets—Bradhna, the mighty, to which Sayana adds Āditya, the Sun; Arusa, the non-injuring, to which Fire is supplied; and 'Carantam' means the moving one, an epithet of Wind.

The last phrase is complete: "Lights are shining in the sky". Sayana's additions are supported by a Brahmana which explains the epithets as equivalent severally to $\bar{A}ditya$, Agn and Vayu,

"स्रसी वा स्रादित्यो ब्रध्नः अग्निर्वा अग्नि वा स्वापुर्वा चरन्।" (SB. XIII. 2) The identification of Indra with the three implies his supremacy—his Parama-ai.śvarya-vattva, but the text says they joir (Yuñjanti); and does not appear exactly whom, for Indra is not named here. Only the succeeding stanzas mention the name of Indra. Dayananda has hinted upon the correct meaning. He beautifully interprets this verse and offers three explanations—all logical and significant. He cites authorities to justify his renderings.

(Third meaning): The devotees unite with the Self-effulgent (Divi) Supreme Lord taking delight (Rocanāh i.e. Ruci-mantah) in Him and their vital breath (Prāṇa) through the process of Prāṇayāma (i.e. control over breath) shines in God (Divi) with the effulgence of the bliss of Moksa. This breath penetrates in all vital parts of the body (Carantam) and causes the growth and development of all limbs.

The following pieces of evidence are cited here to support these interpretations:—

- (a) The word 'Tasthuşah' means "a man", vide Nighantu II. 3.*
- (b) The word 'Bradkna' is enumerated in the (list of) synonyms of 'great', vide Nighantu III. 3.

"The sun verily is Bradhna. This is also Aruşa etc." (SB. XIII. 2)
Thus states the Satapatha.

The Praśna Upanisad says:-

"The Sun, verily, is Prana (i.e. life); matter, indeed, is the moon. Matter (Rayi) verily is every thing here, both what is formed and what is formless. Therefore, material form (Murti) indeed is matter." (PU. 1.5)

There is none greater than God. Hence, the word 'Bradhna' meaning 'great' is taken to mean God, in the first interpretation.

In the second interpretation, it (i.e. Bradhna) stands for the Sun according to the Satapatha.

⁽a) 'मनुष्याः। नराः। धवाः। जन्तवः। विशः''तस्थुषः पञ्चजनाः'' इति पञ्चविंशति मनुष्यनामानि।'' (Nighantu II. 3)

⁽b) ''महत्। ब्रध्नः · · · · बहिषदिति महतः पञ्चिवशित महन्नामानि । (Nighantu III. 3)

[&]quot;ग्रसौ वा ग्रादित्यो ब्रह्नोऽरुषोऽमुमेवास्माः आदित्यं युनक्ति स्वर्गस्य लोकस्य समध्दर्थं ॥" (SB. XIII 2)

^{&#}x27;'आदित्यो ह वै प्राणो रियरेख चन्द्रमाः । रियर्वा एतत् सर्वं यन्त्रतं चामूतं च तस्मान् मूर्तिरेख रियः ।।" (PU. I.5)

In the third rendering it (i.e. Bradhna) is taken as Prana (i.e. breath) according to the Prasna Upanisad. The Bradhna and Arusa are included in the list of synonyms of horse also in the Nighantu but that meaning cannot be accepted here in this Mantra as it would run contrary to the meaning assigned to it in the Satapatha. It is also opposed to the etymological meaning (Mūlārtha) of the words. One word can have various meanings (but all of them cannot be taken at one particular place).

Professor Max Müller takes the word Bradhna only in the sense of 'horse' in his English translation of the Rgveda. It is based on delusion. Acārya Sāyaṇa's interpretation of this Mantra is partially correct, where he takes this word to mean the Sun. But the source of Professor Max Müller's rendering is untraceable in the world (lit.—in the sky or in the antipodes). Hence it is inferred that it is a creation of his own imagination. Consequently it is of no value and authority.*

(RV. I.6.1)

Now we shall write (i e. explain) the method of performing worship or meditation:—

One should find out a place, clean, neat, pleasant and solitary, and then purging the mind (of all impurities), becoming self-composed and quiet, subduing and concentrating all the senses and the mind, and contemplating upon the Supreme Being, Who is All-Existence, All-Consciousness, All-Bliss, the Indwelling Ruler, and Just. and properly offering adoration and prayer unto Him, he should again and again fix his (mind and) soul thereon.

The great sage Patanjali in his aphorisms (on Yoga, i.e., in Yoga Darsana) and Vyasa in his explanation thereon have prescribed the following process of worship:—

(2) "Yoga is a suppression of mental operations (Vrttis)."
(YD. I.1.2)

^{*} This verse has Śleṣa or Paronomasia (double entendre) as a figure of speech. In the commentary on the Rgvela our author gives only two meanings instead of three:—

This verse has also been explained in the Satyārtha Prakāśa (p. 475). The Devatā of this Mantra is Indra and not the horse. Indra nowhere means a horse.

^{(1) &}quot;योगश्चित्तवृत्तिनिरोध: 1" (YD. I.1.2)

At the time of worship and also at the time of secular $(Vyavah\bar{a}ra)$ dealings, all activities (Vrttis) of mind should always be restrained from the objects other than God and from unrighteous affairs.

- Q. What is the seat (resting place) of the suppressed mental operations (V_tttis)?
- A. The answer is:
- (2) "They rest in Seer's own form (self)." (YD. I.1.3)

EXPLANATION

The mind of a devotee, when restrained from all worldly routines (and objects), finds rest in the form $(Svar\bar{u}pa)$ of the Seer, the Omniscient Supreme Being.

- Q. Is the conduct of a worshipper (Yogin) similar to the (ordinary) worldly man or in a way distinct, when he has finished his worship and is engaged in the worldly affairs?
- A. Here (Patañjali) says :-
- (3) "Elsewhere (also), the operations are identical (or co-ordinate)." (YD. I.1.4)
- (2) "तदा द्रब्टु: स्वरूपेऽवस्थानम् ।" (YD. 1.1.3)
- (3) ''वृत्तिसारूप्यमितरत्र।'' (YD. 1.1.4)

The translation of these Sūtras, given above, is in accordance with the original text i.e. Dayānanda's view. These Sūtras can be translated differently as:—

- (a) "Yoga is restraining mind from taking various forms (Vṛttis)." (YD. J.1.2)
- (b) "At that time (i.e. the time of concentration) the Seer (Puruṣa) rests in his own (unmodified) state." (YD. I.1.3)

That is to say—As soon as the waves have stopped and the lake has become quiet, we see its bottom. So with the mind; when it is calm we see what our nature is; we do not mix ourselves but remain in our own selves.

(c) "At other times (other than that of concentration) the Seer is identified with the modifications (Vrtis)." (YD. I.1.4)

For instance, some one blames me; this produces a modification (V_Itti) in my mind and I identify myself with it and the result is misery.

The mode of action of a Yogi-devotee, even when he is engaged in secular affairs, remains tranquil, firmly adhered to righteousness, shining with the light of knowledge and wisdom, based on truthful reality, extremely sharp and quick, extra-ordinary and quite distinct from those of a common man. Such a mental attitude is impossible in the case of a non-devotee and of a non-Yogin.

- Q. How many Vrttis (i.e. mental operations) are there and how are they to be subdued?
- A. To this the author says: --
- (4) "V_fttis are fivefold painful as well as painless." (YD. I.1.5)
- (5) "(They are)—Pramāna (i.e. right cognition or evidence), Viparyaya (i.e. perversion), Vikalpa (i.e. fictitious fabrication), Nidrā (i.e. sleep) and Smrti (i.e. memory)." (YD. I.1.6)
- (6) "Pratyakşa (i.e. perception), Anumāna (i.e. inference) and Agama (i.e. verbal testimony), are Pramānas (i.e. varieties of evidence)." (YD. I.1.7)
- (7) "Viparyaya (i.e. perversion) is false knowledge based on not in real nature or form." (YD. I.1.8)
- (8) "Vikalpa (i.e. fictitious fabrication) is that which follows oral evidence and has no corresponding objective reality."

(YD. I.1.9)

- (4) "वृत्तय: पञ्चतथ्य: क्लिस्टाक्लिस्टा: 1" (YD. I.1.5)
- (5) 'प्रमाण-विषयंय-विकल्प-निद्वा-स्मृतयः ।'' (YD. I.1.6)
- (6) "प्रत्यक्षानुमानागमाः प्रमाणानि । (YD. I.1.7)
- (7) "विपर्ययो निध्याज्ञानमतद्रुपप्रतिष्ठम् ।" (YD, I.1.8)
- (8) 'शब्दज्ञानानुपाती वस्तुशुन्यो विकल्प: !" (YD. I.1.9)

The example of Viparyaya is to take a piece of mother-of-pearl (Sukti) as a piece of silver i.e. mistaking one thing for another.

Vikalpa (i.e. verbal delusion) can be explained:—

A word is uttered; the listener does not want to consider its meaning. He jumps to a conclusion immediately. It is the sign of weakness of the mind. It brings anger and misery to the human beings. The importance of restraint is clearly established by this example,

- (9) "Nidrā (i.e. sleep) is (a mental) activity having the objective substratum the cause of non-existence." (YD. I.1.10)
- (10) "Smṛti (i.e. memory) is to retain (in rememberance) what has been the object of experience." (YD. I.1.11)
- (11) "These Vrttis (i.e. activities) are controlled by repeated meditation (Abhyasa i.e. practice) and non-attachment (to sense-objects)." (YD. I 1.12)
- Q. What is the most helpful means of achieving success in devotion?
- A. (12) "Or by way of (profound) meditation of God." (YD. I.1.23)

Being pleased with the abstract contemplation and specific devotion, God bestows His gracious favour upon the devotee. By mere contemplation and meditation, a Yogin attains soon the state and the fruit of Samādhi (i.e. trance).

- Q. Who is this isvara (God), who is distinct from Pradhāna (i.e. primordial matter) and Furuşa (i.e. individual soul)?
- A. (13) "Iśrara is a special Puruşa (i.e. Supreme Soul) untouched by pains, actions, their results and impressions (Aśaya i.e. desires)." (YD. I.1.24)

EXPLANATION

The afflictions such as Avidya (i.e. illusion or ignorance), efficient (i.e. good) and inefficient actions, their fruits, and $\bar{A} \cdot ayas$ (i.e. subconscious impressions of germ-desires) reside in the mind and are attributed to Puruşa (i.e. individual soul or Jiva) as he is said to be the enjoyer of their fruits (indirectly) as a victory or defeat is attributed to the king although it exists in the warriors. That special (all-pervading) soul is God who is (always) untouched by these experiences or enjoyments.

There are emancipated souls, who have reached the state of absolute unity (Kaivalya). But they, having broken asunder the three bonds, have attained (this goal of) perfect isolation. But God never had nor will have ever this relation (i.e. bondage and liberation from these afflictions mentioned above). No previous state of bondage can be inferred in case of God as it is presumed in the case of a liberated soul. Similarly the subsequent stage of bondage is possible only for a soul which is not bound by Prakytt, but not for God He is always boundless and absolute. He is eternally God,

- Q. Is this superiority of the transcendental power of God with eternal manifestation caused or is it uncaused?
- A. The (sacred) scriptures (i.e. the Veda) are cause and the cause of the Vedas is His transcendental power. The Vedas and the transcendental excellence are inseparably co-related with each other as both of them dwell in the nature of God.

He is, therefore, eternally absolute and eternally Lord (i.e. God). This supremacy and lordship can neither be equalled nor surpassed. His supreme glory excels all other glories. For whatever glory surpasses all is the glory of God. God is, therefore, He, in whom supremacy attains its highest limit. There can be no other glory which can equal His. If we suppose two equalities similar to each other in all respects as existing at one and the same time, we shall have to confess about one as new and about the other as old. Besides, the existence of the one will indicate the destruction of the desired glory of the other. This means the inferiority of either. Complete identity between the two cannot be established as possessing equal qualities, because some distinction or the other must exist between them.

Hence, God is that particular Soul (Puruṣa-Viśeṣa) whose glory is all-surpassing and all-excelling.

(14) "In Him, the seed of the Omniscient is not surpassed (by any thing else)." (YD. I.1.25)

(14) "तत्र निर्रातशयं सर्वज्ञबीजम् ।" (YD. I.1.25)

This aphorism can better be explained as under:-

"In Him becomes infinite that all-knowingness, which in others is (only) a germ." (YD. I.1.25)

Knowledge is only a germ in man, but you have to think of infinite knowledge around it, so that the very constitution of our mind shows us that there is unlimited knowledge and the Yogins call that unlimited knowledge "God".

Though knowledge of the past, present and the future in its totality is beyond the grasp of the senses, it can be described in quantitative terms as being smaller or larger. It is the seed of Omniscient as we go on augmenting it in thought and it must have its highest limit. He is the Omniscient, in whom knowledge reaches its highest limit. Now there is a limit of the seed of the Omniscient, for it is capable of being increased like a measure of weight. That special Puruṣa is such an Omniscient Being.

The inference (Anumāna) thus gives a very general and the most rudimentary conception of God. It has no access beyond this. This can give no specific and complete conception of God. The particular conception about His names or qualities can be drawn from the study of the Vedas. The purpose of His knowledge is not his own benefit but the good of all creatures. It is His will that He should do good to the individual souls during creation (Kalpa), disjunction (of the soul and body) and the great dissolution, by imparting knowledge and righteousness (to them). It is stated:—

- * "The first among the learned, the glorious great sage (the Lord), having decided upon the creation (or revelation of the Vedas) mercifully revealed it to Asuri (i.e. a Jīva) who was yearning for it."
- (15) "He is the Preceptor (teacher) even of the ancients, because He is not delimited by time." (YD. I.1.26)

EXPLANATION

The ancient teachers were subject to the delimitation of time. He in whom this limiting action of time has no bearing is the Teacher of the most ancients. As He was untrammelled in His action in the beginning of this creation even so will He remain in all (preceding or succeeding) creations.

(16) "His appellation is Praṇava (i.e. the sacred syllable OM)." (YD. I.1.27)

^{* &#}x27;'क्षादि विद्वान् निर्माणचित्रमधिष्ठाय कारुण्यात् भगवान् परमविरासुरये जिज्ञासमानाय तन्त्रं प्रोबाच ।''

^{(15) &}quot;स पूर्वेषामि गुरु: कालेनानवच्छेदात्।" (YD. I.1.26)

^{(16) &}quot;तस्य वाचक: प्रणव: 1" (YD. I.1.27)

Pranava (i.e. Om) expresses God. Is this relation between the expressed (i.e. God) and the expression (i.e. the word Pranava) based upon Sanketa (i.e. convention), or is it fixed like the relation between the lamp and its light? It is fixed and eternal. The convention brings to light the constant relation of God with the word Om in the same way as the convention, 'This is his father and this is his son' brings to light the fixed relation of father and son. Even in all other creations the relation between the expressed and the expression is co-related and is based on (eternal) convention (Sanketa) likewise. The Agamins (i.e. the philologists) declare that the relation between a word and the thought (i.e. the expressed and the expression) is eternal because they are always existent. As the Yogins believe in eternal relation between the signified and the signifier, the relation between God and Om is everlasting

(17) "The repetition of this (Om) and meditating on its meaning (is the way)." (YD. I.1.28)

EXPLANATION

The repetition of the word Om, and meditation on God, who is expressed by the word Om, lead a Yogin to mental concentration. It has been said (elsewhere) also:—

- * "One should practise Yoga with the (help) of Svadhyaya (i.e. intelligent repetition of Om) and should repeat Om in the state of Yoga. Through the accomplishment of Yoga and Svadhyaya one obtains the vision of Supreme Self."
- Q. What does a devotee gain by this?
- A. (18) "From that is gained (the knowledge of) introspection, and the destruction of obstacles." (YD. I.1.29)

The word Svadhyaya means the study of Vedas as well as the repetition of God's name intelligently.

All the obstacles, e.g. disease, etc., are warded off by meditation on God (and by the repetition of the word Om) and a vision of his own self is gained. He realises that the Supreme Ruler (God) is pure, all-pervading, holy, calm and blissful, one without a second, absolute, unborn and uncreated Puruşa, and that a knowledge of the individual soul can be achieved with the intellect only.

- Q. What are the obstacles to a Yogin which distract the mind?
- A. (19) "Disease, mental laziness, doubt, lack of enthusiasm (Pramada), lethargy (Ālasya), clinging to sense-enjoyments, delusion, non-attainment of concentration and falling away from the state when obtained, are the obstructing distractions."

(YD. I.1.30)

EXPLANATION

There are nine obstacles which distract the mind. They appear with the (various) mental activities and disappear when the latter cease to exist. The mental activities have already been explained above. (1) Vyadhi (i.e. disease) is the lack of equilibrium of the corporeal elements, juices and organs of the body. (2) Styana (i.e. mental laziness) is that stage when the mind desires to get rid of all actions. (3) Sarpśaya (i.e doubt) is a state when knowledge touches both (the opposite) extremes, e.g., it may be so, it may not be so. (4) Pramada (i.e. lack of enthusiasm) is to neglect the means of Samadhi (i.e. meditation). (5) Alasya (i.e. lethargy) is aversion to all actions due to physical and mental heaviness. (6) Avirati (i.e. want of non-attachment) means the hankering of the mind after carnal (7) Bhranti-Darsana (i. e. false perception) is false gratifications. knowledge. (8) Alabdha-bhūmikatva (i.e. non-attainment of concentration) is a failure to attain the state of meditation. (9) Anavasthitatva (i.e. unsteadiness) is the helplessness to keep the mind fixed on the region of absorption. The mind is steady when the state of absorption is attained.

These are nine mental distractions which are also called as Yoga-malas (i.e. taints of Yoga), and the enemies of Yoga. They are obstacles in the way to trance.

^{(19) &#}x27;'व्याधिस्त्यानसंशयप्रमादालस्याविरतिश्चान्तिवर्शनालव्धमू निकत्वानवस्थितत्वानि चित्तविक्षेपास्तेऽन्तरायाः ।'' (YD. 1.1.30)

(20) "Affliction, mental distress, tremor of the body, irregular breathing are the concomitants of these distractions."

(YD. I.1.31)

EXPLANATION

Afflictions are (threefold), e.g., $\bar{A}dhy\partition{A}dhy\partition{a}tamika$ (i.e. relating to one's own self or mind), $\bar{A}dhibhautika$ (i.e. caused by animate beings) and $\bar{A}dhidaivika$ (i.e. caused by divine agencies, or proceeding from the elements). The living beings when afflicted by these strive to destroy them. Mental distress ($Daurmanasya$) is caused by the frustration of desires and results in mental upset. Bodily tremor is so called as it makes the limbs (of the body) quiver. $\bar{S}vasa$$ (i.e. in-breathing) is that in which external air is inhaled. $Prasvasa$$ (i.e. out-breathing) is that where the air within the body is exhaled. These co-existents of distractions befall a person whose mind is distracted. A balanced mind is not affected by these.

These distractions are the enemies of absorption. They can be warded off by constant practice and non-attachment.

Now the author (of the Yoga Sūtras) sums up the topic of Abhyasa in the following aphorism:—

(21) "To prevent them, the (constant) practice of one subject (should be made)." (YD. I.1.32)

EXPLANATION

In order to ward off these mental distractions a man must practise to concentrate his mind on one subject only. The man, whose mind receives momentary perceptions and wavers off from object to object, cannot be regarded as having concentrated the mind. His mind is absolutely distracted and unbalanced. It can become concentrated if it is withdrawn from all other objects and is fixed only on one subject. Hence it cannot be fixed on all objects.

He, who holds that the mind remains concentrated (in spite of the fact that it wavers from one object to another) because there is a current of similar perceptions, can be refuted. (We ask here) Is this concentration, the attribute of the flowing (i.e. wavering) mind? If it is so, then the mind cannot be regarded to be one as the flowing mind lasts for a moment only. If that concentration is regarded to be the attribute of the perceptions (and not of the flowing mind) which are parts of the current, then we shall ask if this flow is the flow of similar perceptions or that of dissimilar perceptions. If it be accepted that such a mind is concentrated because it is fixed on one object at that particular time, then there can be no distracted mind. Hence it is concluded that the mind is one which can be focussed on various objects. If it be said that perceptions are inherently distinct from each other and they are produced without any relation to the mind which is one, then the things seen by one perception, will be remembered by another perception and the fruits of actions gathered by one perception will be enjoyed by another. Even if it be possible for such a mind to become concentrated, the objection denoted by the maxim of "cow-dung" and milkrice" will apply. The position that there are different minds involves the falsification of one's own experience. In that case, how will one be able to say: 'I am touching that which I saw and I am seeing that which I touched.' How will the perception of the "I" (I am) existing in minds altogether different from one another be referable to one perceiver. experience teaches one that the perception '1 am' denotes one single self. Now the strength of direct perception cannot be overcome by any other proof; for other proofs depend for their utility on the strength of direct perception. Therefore the mind is one, although it is applied to many objects and this treatise (Yoga Darsana) sets forth the means of purifying that mind.

^{(20) &}quot;दु:खरीमंनस्याङ्गमेजवत्वश्वासप्रश्वासा विक्षेपसहभुवः ।" (YD. I.1.31)

^{(21) &}quot;तत्प्रतिषेघार्थमेकतत्त्वाभ्यासः ।" (YD. I.1,32)

(22) "Friendship, mercy, gladness and indifference, being thought of in regard to subjects, happy, unhappy, righteous and evil, respectively, pacify the Citta (mind)." (YD. I.1.33)

In the last aphorism a general advice was given. In this and in the following aphorisms it is expanded and particularised. As one practice cannot suit all, various methods will be advanced and every one by actual experience will find out that which helps him most.

A person was served with rice cooked in milk. On his asking he was told that it was prepared by cooking rice in Gavya (i.e. a produce of cow, i.e. milk). He thought that cow-dung was also a Gavya, i.e. a produce of cow. He, therefore, began to cook rice in cow-dung. The maxim is applicable when a man disregards his own experience and acts contrary to it.

We must have friendship for all those who are happy and endowed with prosperity. We must be merciful towards those who are in misery We should be delighted over the righteous persons, and to the wicked we must be indifferent. Such attitude of mind (towards different objects) generates white (pure) Dharma and the mind becomes peaceful, happy and concentrated on the object.

(23) "By throwing out and restraining the Breath." (YD. I.1.34)

EXPLANATION

Pracchardana means the ejectment of internal air through the nostrile with particular efforts. Vidhārana is its stopping outside. It is called Pranayama. Through these two processes steadiness of mind is secured This ejectment of internal air is like the vomiting of the food which one has eaten. Steadfastness of mind should be achieved by throwing out air within the body with great force and also by keeping it restrained outside as long as possible.

(24) By the practice of the different parts of Yoga, the impurities being destroyed, knowledge becomes effulgent upto discrimination."

(YD, I.1,28)

EXPLANATION

The impurity (of mind and body) and ignorance go on dwindling day by day by practising various parts of Yogic devotion and knowledge goes of accumulating till the attainment of (final) emancipation.

(25) "Yama (i.e. restraint), Niyama (i.e. observance), Asana (i.e. posture), Pranayama (i.e. breath-control), Pratyahara (i.e. abstraction), Dharana (i.e. concentration), Dhyana (i.e. meditation) and Samadhi (i.e. absorption) are the eight limbs o Yoga." (YD. I.1 29)

(YD. I 2.29)

^{(23) &}quot;प्रच्छवंनविधारणाभ्यां वा प्राणस्य ।" (YD. 1.1.34)

^{(24) &}quot;योगाङ्गानुष्ठानादशुद्धिक्षये ज्ञानदीष्तिराविवेकस्यातेः।" (YD. I.2.28)

^{(25) &}quot;यमनियमासनप्राणायामप्रत्याहारधारणाध्यानसमाधयोऽज्टावङ्गानि।"

(26) "Ahimsā (i.e. non-killing), Satya (i.e. truthfulness), Asteya (i.e. non-stealing), Brahmacarya (i.e. continence) and Aparigraha (i.e. non-receiving) are the Restraints (Yamas)."

(YD. 1.2.30)

EXPLANATION

Here non-killing (Ahimsa) means the total absence of harmfulness towards all beings by all means and at all times. The other restraints (Yamcs) and observances (Niyamas) have their origin in non-killing (Ahimsa). Their success lies in its success and they are practised for the purpose of acquiring it. They are adopted simply for the accomplishment of its bright success. (It is said:) "As a Brāhmaṇa (i.e. seeker of Brahma) goes on practising as many vows as he likes, he goes on purifying himself from the sins of Himsā (i.e. killing others) and Nindā (i.e. censure of others) committed by him through negligence or ignorance and in this way he goes practising the pure and bright type of non-killing or harmlessness to others.

Truthfulness (Satya) is the absolute concordance between speech and mind. The speech and mind should be in accordance with what has been perceived, inferred and heard. The purpose of speech is to express (exactly) to others what one feels or knows. Truthfulness of speech lies in (the fact) that it must be free from deception, does not create misapprehension or delusion and is not too weak to convey (the desired) meaning. The purpose of its use is the universal benefit of all living beings and not their injury. If the speech being employed results in injury to living beings, it is not truthful but sinful. Such a speech, though it is apparently virtuous, has no truth as it possesses only the external form of virtue. It will surely lead to the direst calamity. Therefore one must carefully examine and only then he should utter what is really beneficial for all living beings.

Steya (i.e. theft) is the acceptance of objects belonging to others by illegal means. Non-stealing is abstinence from theft. The real non-stealing is to give up even the desire (for another's belongings).

(26) "अहिसासत्यास्तेयब्रह्मचर्यापरिग्रहा यमाः ।" (YD I.2.30)

A man who wants to be a perfect Yogin must give up the sex idea. The soul has no sex: why it degrades itself with sex ideas? The mind of the man who receives gifts is acted on by the mind of the giver; so the receiver is likely to become degenerated. Receiving gifts is prone to destroy the independence of the mind and makes us slavish. Therefore receive no gifts. (Vivekānanda)

VORDIN

Continence (Brahmacarya) is the (perfect) control of the generationgans.

Aparigraha (i.e. non-acceptance) is to renounce all objects (of carn desires) (when offered) with a clear conviction, that their hoarding, prese vation and destruction involve injury (Hiṃsā) (to others).

There are (five) Niyamas.

(27) "Sauca (i.e. purity), Santoşa (i.e. contentment), Tapas (i.e. austerity), Svādhyāya (i.e. study) and Īsvara-pranidhāna (i.e. worship of God) are the Niyamas (i.e. observances)."

(YD. 1.2.3;

EXPLANATION

Purification (Śauca) is both internal as well as external. Externa purification is secured by (means of) water, &c. The internal purification is obtained by renouncing attachment, enmity and falsehood, &c. Santos (i.e. contentment) is accomplished by rightly practising righteousnes (Dharma). Austerity is to perfectly adhere to Duty (Dharma). Svadhyaya means the (repeated) reading and teaching of the Vedas and other truscriptures or repetition of Om. Iśvara-pranidhana (i.e. worship of God indicates the complete surrender of all belongings including the Self to the Great Teacher and Supreme Lord.

These five Niyamas (i.e. observances) are the secondary limbs o worship.

Now (the author writes) the advantages of Non-injury :-

(28) "Ahimsa (i.e. non-killing) being established, in his presence all enmities cease (even in others)." (YD. I.2.35)

The fruit of truthfulness is :-

(29) "By the establishment of truthfulness, an action and fruition become dependent." (YD I.2.36)

This aphorism is obscure. I have translated as it was possible for me. Swamī Vivekananda translates it:—

"By the establishment of truthfulness, the Yogi gets the power of attaining for himself and others the fruits of works without the works." (Contd.)

^{(27) &#}x27;शौचसन्तोषतपःस्वाध्यायेश्वरप्रणिधानानि नियमाः ।'' (YD. I.2.32)

^{(28) &}quot;अहिंसाप्रतिष्ठायां तत्सिन्नधी वैरत्याग:।" (YD. I.2.35)

^{(29) &}quot;सत्यप्रतिष्ठायां क्रियाफलाश्रयत्वम् ।" (YD. I.2.36)

The fruit of Non-stealing is :-

(30) "By the establishment of Non-stealing (Asteya), all jewels (i.e. riches) approach (a Yogi)." (YD. I.2.37)

What is gained by the practice of Brahmacarya is explained : -

(31) "By the establishment of Continence, energy is gained."
(YD. I.2.38)

Following is the benefit of Non-receiving:

(32) "When he is fixed in Non-receiving (Aparigraha), he gets the memory of past life." (YD. I.2.39)

He further explains it :-

"When this power of truth will be established with you, then even in dream you will never tell an untruth. You will be true in thought, word and deed. Whatever you say will be truth. You may say to a man, "Be blessed", and that man will be blessed. If a man is diseased and you say to him, "Be thou cured", he will be cured immediately."

(Works of Vivekananda, Part I)

The following verse from Bhavabhūti further illustrates what is meant by "Action and Fruit become dependent":—

"लौकिकानां तु साधूनावर्षं वागनुबर्त्तते । ऋषीणां पुनराद्यानां वाचमर्थोऽनुष्ठावति ॥"

I.e., the great sages say whatever they like and the same comes out to be true.

- (30) ''अस्तेयप्रतिष्ठायां सर्वरत्नोपस्थानम् । (YD. I.2.37)
- (31) "ब्रह्मचर्यप्रतिष्ठायां वीर्यलामः t" (YD. I.2.38)

The efficacy of Brahmacarya is without any doubt and is proclaimed with one voice by all great men of the world. The chaste brain has tremendous energy and gigantic will-power. Without chastity, there can be no spiritual strength. Continence gives wonderful control over mankind. The spiritual leaders of the world have been very continent and this is what gave them power. Therefore the Yogin must be continent. Dayananda's entire life was a living example of Brahmacarya.

WORSHIP

Now the purpose of purity (Sauca):-

(33) "By (internal and external) cleanliness arises disgust for or own body and non-intercourse with others." (YD. I.2.4)

Moreover: -

- (34) "There also arise purification of Sattva, cheerfulness of mind, concentration, conquest of organs, and fitness for realisation of the Self." (YD. I.2)
- (35) "From contentment (Santoşa) comes superlative happiness."
- (36) "The result of austerity (Tapas) is bringing powers to organs and the body by desrtoying the impurity." (YD, I.2.4)
- (37) "By Svadhyaya (i.e. study of Vedic lore or the repetition Om) comes the communion with the Beloved Deva (i.e. God (YD. I.2.
- (38) "By contemplation of God (or by sacrificing all to Iśvara) state of absorption is accomplished." (YD. I.2.
- (39) " \overline{A} and (i.e. posture) is that which is firm and pleasant." (YD. I.2.

EXPLANATION

For instance, the postures are Padma-Āsana, Vīra-Āsana, Bhaa Āsana, Svastika, Danda-Āsana, Sopāsraya, Paryanka, Kraunca-Niṣada Hasti-Niṣadana, Uṣṭra-Niṣadana, Sama-Samsthana, Sthira-Sukha, Yat Sukha, &c. One may adopt any posture like Padma-Āsana or any otl according to one's desire or taste.

(40) "By that (posture i.e. seat being conquered) dualities do not obstruct." (YD. I.2.48)

EXPLANATION

By controlling the posture one is not overpowered by the dualities, e.g., heat and cold and all other pairs of opposites.

(41) "On that (being established) controlling of the motion of the exhalation and the inhalation follows." (YD. I.2.49)

EXPLANATION

When posture has been conquered, then the motion of the Prana is to be broken (and controlled). Inhalation of the external air into the body is called Śvāsa, i.e., in-breathing. Exhalation of the air from within the body is called Pra-śvāsa, i.e., out-breathing. Control of the breath is the absence of motion of both of them. This is called Prānayāma. This succeeds the control-posture. When posture has been completely controlled one is strong enough to regulate the Prāna. This is the conquest over the air that goes into and comes out of the corporeal structure by will and graded exercise. This cessation of the movements of air by making it motionless and calm is Prānāyāma.

(42) "Its modifications (Vṛṭtis) are either external or internal or motionless (Stambha) regulated by place, time and number, either long or short." (YD. I.2.50)

Ordinarily, Praṇa means breath. But it is not so, though it is usually so translated. It is the sum-total of the cosmic energy. It is the energy that is in each body and its most apparent manifestation is the motion of the lungs. This motion is caused by Praṇa drawing in the breath and it is what we seek to control in Praṇayāma. We begin by controlling the breath, as the easiest way of getting control of the Praṇa.

(Vivekananda)

^{(41) &#}x27;'तिस्मन् सित श्वासश्रवासयोर्गतिविच्छेदः प्राणायामः ।'' (YD. I 2.49)

The cessation of movement preceded by exhalation is called external Prana vāma; the cessation of movement succeeded by inhalation is called internal Pranavama; and the third one is total restraint, where both movements are stopped. This is acquired by regular exercise. As a (drop of) water thrown on (extremely) hot stone shrinks from all sides simultaneously so there is cessation of both motions (in this Prānāyāma) at one and the same time. The wise people should discard that type of Pranayama in which men of immature wisdom (lit. men of childish intellect) cause (the cessation of movements of breath) by stopping their nostrils with the fingure and thumb. But in both of these Pranayamas all limbs externally as well as internally should be kept tranquil, unagitated and relaxed. When all limbs are in their natural state (as they ought to be) one should perform the first Pranayama, i.e., the External one, by stopping the ejected air outside the body as long as is (easily) possible; the second is internal which is performed by restraining the inhaled air within the body as long as one can and the third, i.e., the 'total cessation', by stopping both the movements simultaneously, when both the Prāṇāyāmas have rightly been practised.

(43) "The fourth is acquired when the domains of the external and the internal have been crossed over." (YD. I.2.51)

This aphorism can be better explained in the following manner:

"The three sorts of motion of Praṇayama are, one by which we draw the breath in; another, by which we draw it out and the third action is when the breath is held in the lungs or stopped from entering the lungs. These again are varied by place and time. By place is meant that the Praṇa is held to some particular part of the body. By time is meant how long the Praṇa should be confined to a certain place and so we are told how many seconds to keep one motion and how many seconds to keep another. The result of this Praṇayama is Udghatana, i.e., awakening the Kunḍalinī."

(43) "वाह्याभ्यन्तरविषयाक्षेपी चतुर्थः।" (YD. 1.2.51)

This aphorism has been translated above according to Dayananda's

(Contd.)

That Prāṇāyāma which depends upon the (success) in both (the internal and the external) is called the fourth. It is as follows:—

(The first is) when the air within the body proceeds to go out into the outer region at the first instance one should concentrate (one's efforts) to eject and keep it out in the outer space. After that when the air commences to come from the outer region into the body at the first moment, one should inhale it (slowly and slowly) and restrain it within the body as far as possible. This is the second Pranayama. The cessation of both the movements (internal and external) by gradual and constant practice is called the fourth Pranayama. The third Pranayama does not depend upon the internal and external ones. Here the breath is stopped in whatever region it happens to be at the moment. In it the action is similar to a person who feels startled at the sight of a wonderful object.

(44) "From that, the covering to the light (of the Citta) is attenuated." (YD. I.2.52)

EXPLANATION

The veil of ignorance which eclipses the glow (light) of true knowledge about the indwelling Supreme Ruler, by the practice of Pranayama is removed.

Moreover:

(45) "The fitness of the mind (is attained) for Dhāraṇā (i.e. concentration)." (YD. I.2.53)

view. This can be translated as :-

"The fourth is restraining the Prāṇa by reflecting on external or internal object."

Vivekananda explains this in the following words:—

"This is the fourth sort of Praṇā yāma, in which the Kumbhaka is brought about by long practice attended with reflection, which is absent in the other three."

- (44) "ततः क्षीयते प्रकाशावरणम् ॥" (YD. I.2.52)
- (45) 'धारणास योग्यता मनसः ।'' (YD. 1.2.53)

By the practice of Praṇayāma in the form of (Pracchardana and Vidhārana, i.e. ejectment and retention), the ability of concentration is acquired. A particular efficiency is accomplished by a devotee for the contemplation of God in his mind.

- Q. What is Pratyahara?
- A. (46) "Pratyahara (i.e. the drawing in of the organs) is the detachment of senses from their objects and assuming the form of the mind-stuff, as it were." (YD. I.2.54)

EXPLANATION

Pratyāhāra (i.e. the restraint of senses) is that when the Citta (i.e. thinking principle) is brought under control and it does not move or distract from the contemplation or shelter of God. As the Citta is concentrated in the essence of God so the senses, i.e., with the conquest of mind is attained the conquest of senses, &c.

(47) "Thence (arises) supreme control of the senses." (YD. I.2 55)

EXPLANATION

Then, when the senses become detached from their (respective) objects and cease to have any attraction for them, there is a complete and supreme control over the organs. Whenever such a devotee proceeds for contemplation of God, his mind and senses are instantly restrained.

(48) "Dharana (concentration) is holding the mind on to some (particular) object." (YD. I.3.1)

EXPLANATION

Dharana (i.e. concentration) is the fixity of mental operations on some external or internal objects, e.g., the navel, the plexus, the heart-lotus, the aperture in the crown of the head, the tip of the nose, the tip of the tongue, &c. [External objects, e.g. Om or a Bindu (zero).]*

(49) "An unbroken flow of knowledge in that (object) is Dhyana (i.e. meditation)." (YD. I.3 2)

EXPLANATION

Dhyāna (i e. meditation) is that where there is a uniform and unbroken flow of the knowledge of what has been accepted as the support of the object of meditation and which is untouched by other knowledge.

(50) "The same (meditation) when shining with the light of the object alone and devoid, as it were, of its own form, is Samādhi (i.e. absorption)." (YD. I.3.3)

EXPLANATION

The distinction between the Dhyana and the Samadhi is that in meditation (Dhyana), modifications of the mind (Vrttis) exist in the form of meditator, the act of meditation, and the object of meditation, but in Samadhi (i.e. absorption) the mind ceases to experience its own existence of form, as it were, and becomes absorbed in the essence of God and His bliss.

(51) "(These) three (when practised) in regard to one object together are called Samyama." (YD. I.3.4)

EXPLANATION

Dharana, Dhyana and Samadhi (i.e. concentration, meditation and absorption) exercised together are called Samyama. These three are the means towards the same end and are collectively styled as Samyamas. This is the technical term for all the three. This Samyama is the ninth limb of worship.

(49) ''तन्न प्रत्ययैकतानता ध्यानम् ॥'' (YD. I.3.2)

The mind tries to think of one object, to hold itself to one particular spot, as the top of the head, the heart, etc., and if the mind succeeds in receiving the sensations only through that part of the body, and through no other part, that would be Dhāraṇā and when the mind succeeds in keeping itself in that state for sometime it is called Dhyāna (meditation).

The import of all these (verses) will be explained in Hindi.

Thus the worship of God is twofold, viz., Saguna (i.e. qualified) and Nirguna (i.e. qualityless). For instance, in the verse 'Sa Paryagat etc.' (i.e. He encompasses etc.) (explained already—YV. XXXX.8) the epithets 'Sukra' (i.e. Bright) and 'Suddha' (i.e. Pure) refer to the worship of God as possessor of qualities and the epithets Akayam (i.e. Bodiless), Abranam (i.e. Scatheless), Asnaviram (i.e. Sinewless) &c. denote a worship of God as qualityless. Similarly (in the following verse):—

(8) "God is one, hidden in (the hearts of) all creatures. He is All-pervading and is the Inmost-self of beings. He is Master of all; the (ultimate) resort and abode of all. He is the (pure) witness (of all). He is the absolute and devoid of qualities." (Śvetaśva. VI.11)

EXPLANATION

The words 'Eko Devah' (i.e. God is one) &c. refer to the worship of Saguna (i.e. qualified one) and the words 'Nirguna' (i.e. qualityless) &c. denote worship without qualities.

(Contd. from page 242)

they who in this life are slaves to the dictates of desire like the slaves of a ruler, will continue unchanged in the hereafter.

Whitney in American Journal of Philosophy (Vol. II, p. 429) explains it differently:

"For just as here subjects (of a kind who leads them into a new territory) settle down according to order (and) whatever direction their desires take them to, what region, what piece of ground, that same they severally live upon—so, we are to understand, is it also in the other world; one's desires determine his conditions there."

(8) ''एको देव: सर्वभूतेषु गूढ: सर्वध्यापी सर्वभूतान्तरात्मा। सर्वाध्यक्ष: सर्वभूताधिवास: साक्षी चेता केवलो निर्गुणश्च ॥'' (Śvetaśva VI.11)

God is Saguna (i.e. possessor of qualities) when He is (described as) possessing attributes of Sarvajña (i.e. All-knowingness) &c. He is Nirguna (i.e. qualityless) also, when He is stated to be devoid of qualities as free from afflictions such as Avidva (i.e. ignorance) &c., free from quantity such as Parimana (i.e. measurements), numberless, two, &c., and from such qualities as sound, touch, form, taste and smell. When God is eulogised as all-pervading, the ruler of all, the lord of all, this (type of) worship is called Soguna (i.e. qualified). When God is (described as) unborn, the scatheless (Abrana), formless and without body, and when He does not possess the attributes of form, taste, smell, touch, number and measure, this (kind of) worship is styled as Nirguna (qualityless). The assumption that God becomes Saguna when He assumes body and He becomes Nirguna when he leaves the body is false and is based on ignorance. This (interpretation of the words Saguna and Nirguna) runs counter to the scriptures, the Vedas, and other authorities. It is also opposed to the (practical) experience of the learned. The wise should discard it as preposterous.

EMANCIPATION

The $J\bar{\imath}va$ (i.e. the individual Soul) attains final liberation by worshipping God (in the manner described above), purging himself of delusion and sinful conduct and by the (spiritual) development through righteous deeds. Now the aphorisms from Yoga Śastra on Emancipation (are cited below):—

The idea is that he attains Absolute Aloneness or independence and becomes free. I.e., When one gives up even the ideas of omnipotence and omniscience, then comes entire rejection of enjoyment. When a Yogin has seen all these wonderful powers and rejected them, he reaches the goal. What are all these powers? Simply manifestations. They are no better than dreams. Even Omnipotence is a dream. It depends on the mind. So long as there is a mind it can be understood that the goal is beyond even that mind.

(10) ''सत्त्वपुरुषयोः शुद्धिसाम्ये कैवल्यम् ॥" (YD. I.3.56)

I.e., Kaivalya is attained when the mixture of purity and impurity called Sattva has been made as pure as the Puruşa itself; then the Sattva reflects only the unqualified essence of purity, which is the Purusa.

Now the aphorisms from the Nyāya Śāstra:-

- (13) "Emancipation (Apavarga) results, when among afflictions, birth, attachment, defects and false knowledge, the destruction of that which follows, leads to the destruction of that which precedes." (ND. I.1.1)
- (14) "The frustration (of hopes) is the characteristic of affliction (Duhkha)." (ND. I.1.2)
- (15) "Absolute Independence is Apavarga (i.e. final liberation)."
 (ND. II.21.22)

Now the Vedanta Texts: -

(16) Badari says: "There is absence (of body and organs) (in the state of liberation) because it is thus (described in the Scriptures)." (VD. 1V.4.10)

This is to say :-

"Nature's task is done, this unselfish task which our sweet nurse, Nature, had imposed on herself. She gently took the Self-forgetting Soul by the hand, as it were, and showed him all the experiences in the universe, all manifestations, bringing him higher and higher, through various bodies, till his lost glory came back. and he remembered his own nature. Then the kind mother went back the same way, she came, for others who also have lost their way in the trackless desert of life. And thus is she working, without beginning and without end. And thus, through pleasure and pain, through good and evil, the infinite river of souls is flowing into the ocean of perfection, of self-realization.

Glory unto those who have realised their own nature: may their blessings be on us all." (Vivekānanda)

- (14) "वाधनालक्षणं दु:खम् ॥" (ND. I.1.2)
- (15) "तदत्यन्तिवमोक्षोऽपवर्गः ॥' (ND. II.21.22)
- (16) "ग्रभावं बादरिराह होवम् ॥" (VD. IV.4.10)

(Contd)

(17) Jaimini says: "There is existence (of the subtle body), because option has been ordained in the Scriptures)."

(VD. IV.4.11)

(18) Therefore, the Son of Badari (i.e. Vyasa) says: "There are both (i.e. existence and non-existence of a body) as in the Dvadasaha (i.e. a sacrifice to be completed in 12 days and to be performed by a Vanaprastha)." (VD. IV.4.12)

(Contd. from page 247)

I.e., In the previous Sutra, it was told that if one attains final liberation, by his mere wish, things come to pass. This shows that soul possesses a mind. The question naturally arises whether it possesses a body or not. Badari says that it does not, for the scriptures say so. "And it is by means of this divine eye of the mind that he sees the desires and rejoices" (CHU. VIII.12.5).

This shows that it retains only the mind and not the organs, etc.

(17) "भावं जैमिनिविकल्पामननात् ॥" (VD. IV.4.11)

The following evidence is meant by the above-mentioned question:

"स एकधा मर्वात पञ्चधा मर्वात, सप्तधा भवति नयधा मर्वात" (छान्दोग्य), i e.,

"He being one becomes three, five, seven, nine" (CHU. VII.26.2)

This testimony says that a released soul can assume more than one form which clearly indicates that it possesses body or bodies, the mind and the organs. This is the view of Jaimini.

(18) "द्वादशाहबद्भयविधं बादरायणोऽत: ॥'' (VD. IV.4.12)

From the above Badarayana (son of Badari) sums up that the released soul is of both kinds like the "Twelve Days' Sacrifice" (हाबजाहबत).

The idea is that from the twofold declaration of the scriptures, this can be concluded that a released soul can exist both ways—with or without body—according to its liking. It is like the Twelve Days' Sacrifice, which is called a Satra as well as an "Ahīna" (अहीन) Sacrifice.

This can be better explained in the following words:—

'The question is whether soul retains body in the state of final liberation or not. According to Bādari, the body does not remain in Emancipation. Contrary to this view, Jaimini holds the view that the body exist even at that stage; because he says that it is declared in the Scriptur that an emancipated soul can assume body at his option.

Thus the son of Badari (Vyāsa) contends that there are both, i.e. presence of body as well as absence of body, as in the Twelve Day Sacrifice, enjoined for a Vānaprastha. He is allowed to take only a ve limited quantity of food by taking that hunger is present as well as abse as the Performer of Sacrifice is not allowed to take full meals. Therefo he cannot be said hungry, nor that he is not hungry.

''तां योगमिति मन्यन्ते स्थिरामिन्द्रियधारणाम् । (20) अप्रमत्तरता भवति, योगो हि प्रमवाप्ययौ ॥" (KTU. VI.11)

Here, the word 'Yoga' literally means 'yoking'; both a 'yoking', i., subduing, of the senses, and also a 'yoking', i.e. joining or 'union' wit the Supreme Soul.

The word 'Apramatta' has been translated by us as 'undistracted'. is a technical Yoga-term.

The words 'Prabhava and Apya' in this verse literally mean 'the origi and the end'; perhaps, of "the world" of beings and experiences.

is: 'the world' becomes created for the person when he emerges from the Yoga state, and passes away when he enters into it. According to Sinkara, the translation should be: "An arising and a passing away", i.e., is transitory. But according to our author "Prabhava" means "illumination of pure and true qualities" and "Apyaya" denotes "end of impurities and falsehood." The Yogin attains these Guṇas, through 'Upāsanā-yoga'.

(YV, XXXII.10)

The (text) beginning with 'Avidyā' etc. (YD. I.2.3) and ending with the words 'Adhyairayant' describes the state of final release. It is to be (clearly) understood. The meanings of the (last two verses) have been given in our Hindi rendering.

(32) ये युज्ञन् दक्षिणया समेक्ता इन्द्रेस्य सुख्यभेष्ठतुत्वमीन्श । तेश्या भुद्रमिद्धिरसो वो अस्तु प्रतिवृश्णीत मानुवं धुमेधस: ॥" (RV. X.62.1)

A faithful translation of this verse has been given above. Our author has not commented upon this verse in its Sanskrit text. An explanatory note on this verse has, however, been given by him in Hindi which in no way can be taken the paraphrase or literal rendering. It gives only the import which can be summed up:—

"The emancipated souls (i.e. Angirasas) live in the bliss of final beatitude, performing sacrifices of knowledge and surrendering themselves to God by way of Dakṣiṇā. All happiness is meant for them who by the friendship of God have got final Release. The other released souls, who have attained that stage earlier to them, admit them in their blissful association. They receive them with loving eyes and sweet words."

Griffith interprets the word 'Mānava' as 'son of Manu', i.e., Nābhānedista Mānava. But according to the Nirukta, Angirasas mean "vital airs in the body" which are sons of cosmic energy (i.e. Agni). (cf: RV. VIII.2.105)

(33) "स नो बन्धुर्जनिता स विधाता घामानि वेद भूवनानि विश्वा । यत्र देवा अमृत्रमानशानास्तृतीय घामन्त्रधरैयन्त ।। (YD. XXXII.10) Cf. RV. X.82.5.

THE ART OF BUILDING SHIPS AND AERIAL CARS

- (1) "Tugra (i.e. a man of mighty aspirations) desirous of riches (Rayim) and prosperity (Bhujyum) should cross (frequently) oceans (and thus amass the wealth) in ships (Aśvinā) (running with the help of) water, fire and energy. Such a man never dies (Mamrvān). The Aśvinas (i.e. the water and fire) provide for him boats, ships and aerial cars (Antarikṣa-Prudbhiḥ) unwetted by the billows." (RV. I.116.3)
- (!) तुत्रों ह भुज्युमंश्विनोदमेघे रुपि न कश्चिन्ममृवां अवाहाः । तम्हयुनौंभिरात्मन्वतीभिरन्तरिक्षप्रदृष्णिरपोदकाभिः ॥" (RV. I.116.3)

This verse is differently understood and interpreted by all the Eastern and Western scholars. They have traced here some historical events, where Tugra and Bhujyu are proper nouns. Sāyaṇa, the well-known commentator, explains the word "Tugra" as 'Rājā or King'. He had a son by name Bhujyu. Tugra, it is said, was a great friend of the Aśvins. Being much annoyed by enemies residing in a different island, Tugra sent his son Bhujyu against them with an army on board ship. After sailing some distance, the ship encountered a storm, in which his ship was lost. Bhujyu applied to the Aśvins who brought him out and his army back in their own ships, in three days. It is evident from this and the two following verses. Sāyaṇa translates this verse as:—

"Tugra, verily Aśvins, sent (his son) Bhujyu to sea, as a dying man parts with his riches; but you brought him back in vessels of your own, floating over the ocean, and keeping out the waters."

Griffith who followed Sayana explains this verse as :-

"Ye, Aśvins, as a dead man leaves his riches, Tugra left Bhujyu in the cloud of water.

Ye, brought him back in animated vessels, traversing air, unwetted by the billows." (Contd.)

(2) "These three types of cars should possess means of comforts and should be able to run (at such a swift speed) that they may cross the watery ocean, the land, the upper region in three days and three nights as if they were provided (with) hundreds of feet, possessing six mechanisms, five chambers causing swiftest speed."

(RV. I.116.4)

(Contd. from page 25.4)

Griffith also adds :-

"Bhujyu: a Rajarsi, son of Tugra, rescued when in danger of drowning."

Readers will mark here the evident difference between Sayana and Griffith.

According to Dayānanda, the Vedas contain no historical events or names of the persons. The Vedic words denote only the general meaning. Yāska also held this view and says "तत्रोपमार्थेन युद्धवर्गा मवन्ति।" The followers of the Nirukta school take only the etymological interpretations of the Vedic words. Therefore, Yāska says:—

"तत्को बुद्धः ? मेघ इति नैरुक्ताः । त्वाब्ट्रोऽसुर इत्यैतिहासिकाः ॥"

Here, the words 'Tugra' and 'Bhujyu' (taken as proper nouns by others) mean only 'a seeker of riches' and 'the enjoyable articles' respectively. The grammatical explanations of these words are given by our author in the original text.

(2) ''तिस्रः क्षपुस्त्रिरहाति वर्जद्भिः नासंत्या भुज्युमूह्युः पतुङ्गैः । समुद्रस्य धन्वन्नाईस्यं पारे तिभी रथैः शतपद्भिः षडश्वैः ॥ (RV. I.116.4)

H. H. Wilson says here, "This is a rather unintelligible account of a sea voyage, although the words of the text do not admit of any other rendering." He translates it:—

"Three nights and three days, Nāsatyās, have you conveyed Bhujyu, in three rapid revolving cars, having a hundered wheels, and drawn by six horses, along the dry bed of the ocean, to the shore of the sea." (P. 197)

Griffith renders it :-

"Bhujyu, ye bore with winged things, Nāsatyās, which for three nights, three days full swiftly travelled,

To the sea's farther shore, the strand of ocean, in three cars, hundred footed, with six horses."

EXPLANATION

The purport (of these stanzas) is as follows:—

The stanzas, e.g. "Tugro ha etc." describe the (various) arts of building (ships etc.). The word 'Tugra' is derived from \(Tuj' \) to kill, to strengthen, to accept, to live in a house' with the suffix 'Rak' occurring in Unatis. Thus Tugra means a person desirous of wealth. He, being desirous of riches (Rayim) and things of enjoyments (Bhujyu), e.g. necessities of life, comforts and victory, should accomplish his desires with the aid of physical and material science. He by constructing ships of wood, iron &c. and by using fire and water (Aśvinā) (for producing steam) may make voyages in the ocean for export and import and thus amass riches. By adopting this practice none can die of starvation aud without assets, for he has laboured so much. Hence ships must be launched (Avahāh) in the ocean for going and coming from one country to another by water. How can ships be constructed? Ships are to be constructed with metals, e.g. iron, copper, silver, or with wood, &c., and by the use of heat and light-producing energy. These substances (Asyins) when rightly used enable men to go from one country to another with all comforts. Here the verb ' \overline{U} hathuh' (conveyed) is in the Second Person. This Person is to be converted into the Third Person. The ships which take men on their forward and homeward voyages on the sea must be strong (Atmanvatibhili) and able to remain steady. The officials and the traders should voyage by means of ships whenever emergency requires. Similarly conveyances of many other kinds e.g. aerial cars, &c. can be constructed with the above-mentioned materials and means. All men should amass the highest type of wealth with the help of aerial cars traversing the upper regions (Antariksaprudbhih). Ships and aerial cars should be so smooth and polished that they become water-proof (Apodaka) and water does not enter into them. In this way men should travel in the three regions, e.g. land, water and air, by means of land vehicles, ships and aerial cars. (RV. I.116.4; X.62.1)

The following evidence (from the Nirukta supports our interpretation of the word Asvins):—

(3) "Now the Devatās of the bright firmament. Among them, the Aśvins are the first to come. The (two) Aśvins are so called

^{(3) &#}x27;'म्रथातो द्युस्थाना देवताः । तासामश्विनौ प्रथमागामिनौ मदतः । अश्विनौ यद् व्यश्नुवाते सर्वम् । रसेनान्यो, ज्योतिषाऽन्यः । अश्वैः—अश्विनौ—इत्यौर्णवामः । तत्कौ अश्विनौ ? द्यावापृथिव्यौ इत्येके । अहोराबौ—इत्येके । सूर्याचन्द्रमसौ —इत्येके ।''

as they pervade all. One (pervades all) by juice and the other by light. According to Aurnavābha, they are called Asvins because they possess Asvas (i.e. horses). Now what are Asvins? According to some (they are) the bright region and the earth. According to others, (they are) day and night. According to (still) others, the sun and the moon." (N. XII.1)

(4) "Similarly Aśvins are Jarbharī (i.e. protectors) and Turpharī (i.e. destroyers). They are Udanya jevet yudaka je-Iva, i.e. waterborn as it were, i.e. like the two ocean-born gems." (N. XIII.5)

From these citations it is proved that three types of cars can be prepared by mechanical devices with the help of gases (Vayu), fire, water and earthly substances.

Three kinds of vehicles, the ships, &c., (Tribhir-Rathaiḥ) should contain all sorts of comforts (Ramaṇīya Sādhana) and they should have a speed as fast as to cross the ocean, the land and the upper region in three days and three nights (Tisraḥ Kṣpaḥ-Tri-aha) rushing on their ways as if they were equipped with countless feet (Śata-Padbhiḥ). These cars should have Ṣaḍ-Aśvas (six mechanisms), i.e. five chambers for swiftest speed.

What material is used for the successful operation of these cars?

These cars are to be operated with the help of the Nasatyas, i.e. the above-mentioned Aśvins. Hence, the statement: "Nasatyas, i.e. Dyau and Prthivi (i.e. the bright region and the earth) set the cars move."

In the stanza the verb ' \overline{U} hathuḥ' is used in the Second Person in the sense of the Third Person as is obvious. The (following aphorism from) the Aṣṭādhyāyī is an evidence in support of this interchange:—

(5) "Interchange is very common."

(P. III.1.85)

On this the author of the Mahabhasya says :-

(6) "The author of the Śāstra means to approve the interchange (in the use of) case, verbal suffix, Padas, gender, person, tense,

^{(4) &#}x27;'तथाश्विनो चापि भर्तारो, जर्भरी च मर्त्तारो, तुर्फरी तु हन्तारो । उदन्य-जेवेत्युटकजे इव, रत्ने समुद्र ॥'' (N. XIII.5)

^{(5) &}quot;व्यत्ययो बहुलम् ॥" (P. III.1.85)

^{(6) &}quot;सुष्तिङ्गपप्रहलिङ्गनराणां कालहलच्स्वरकर्तृयङां च । व्यत्ययमिच्छति शास्त्रकृदेषां सोऽपि च सिद्धचित बाहलकेन ॥" (MB.)

consonants, vowels, accent, Kartr and Yan; this object is accomplished here with the word 'Bahulaka', i. e. very common." (MB.)

Thus the meaning is: "Those very Nastyas, i.e. Asvins, move rightly the cars." The past perfect tense is here in the sense of present indefinite. They alone are the principal means and helps in building these (three kinds of) cars.

By following this way and not otherwise men can obtain Bhujyu, i.e. the best comforts and enjoyments. (RV. I.116.4)

- (7) "Asvins move (the three kinds of) cars endowed with hundreds of cars or propellers (Sata-Aritra) in the ocean of water and the air where there is nothing to give support, nothing to rest upon, nothing to cling to, for the accomplishment of pleasures and comforts." (RV. I.116.5)
- (8) "The Asvins (i.e. water and fire) generate the white steam (Śveta-Aśva) for swift locomotion (Aghāsvaya) bringing always all comforts. This gift of Asvins is meritorious (Mahi) and to be celebrated. Such a swift car (Vajī) should be procured (Havya) by the merchants (Arya)." (RV. I.116.6)
- (7) 'अनार्म्भुणे तर्दबीरयेथामनास्थाने अग्रमुणे संमुद्धे । यदेश्विना ऊहर्थुभुष्युमस्तं शतारित्रां नार्वमातस्थिवांसंव् ॥'' (RV. 1.116.5)

Griffith translates it :-

"Ye wrought that hero exploit in the ocean which giveth no support, or hold or station,

What time ye carried Bhujyu to his dwelling, borne in a ship with hundred cars, O Asvins."

Sāyana explains :-

"This exploit you achieved, Asvins, in the ocean, where there is nothing to give support, nothing to rest upon, nothing to cling to, that you brought Bhujyu, sailing in a hundred-oared ship, to his father's house."

(8) यमंश्विना बुदर्थुः श्वेतमश्वमृयाश्वाय शश्वित्त । तद्दां दु।त्रं महिं कृत्तिंन्यं भूत् पढि वाजी सद्मिडक्यो अर्यः ॥'' (RV. I.116.6) (Contd.)

EXPLANATION

O men, you should travel in the ocean full of water or in the upper region where there is nothing to $(An\bar{a}rambhane)$ give support, nothing to rest upon $(An\bar{a}sth\bar{a}ne)$ and nothing to catch at by hands (Agrabhane) for the success in your undertakings by preparing ships and aerial cars through the methods described above. The phrase 'Aśvina $\bar{U}hathuh-Bhujyum$ ' (i.e. Aśvins carry Bhujyu) is to be interpreted in the above-mentioned manner. Such cars when driven by the properly used Aśvins (Astan, i.e. launched or driven; from \sqrt{A} s 'to throw') bring success to the efforts. What type of ship (or aerial car) should be launched in the ocean (or in the air)? (Here it is stated that) it should be Śata-Aritram, i.e. it should have hundred cars, made of steal for supporting, steering and for taking the bearings. Such

- (a) Aśvins: i.e. water and fire.
- (b) Śvetam-Asvam; i.e. white steam.
- (c) Vaji: i.e. a car moving at very fast speed.
- (d) Havya: i.e. worth having.
- (e) Arya: i.e. a trader.

Dayānanda cites a number of evidences to support these meanings in the original text. His vision is $\bar{a}rsa$ (i. e. Seer's observations).

But H. H. Wilson interprets it :-

"Aśvins, the white horse you gave to Pedu, whose horses were indestructible, was ever to him success; that, your previous gift, is always to be celebrated: the horse of Pedu, the scatterer (of enemies), is always to be invoked." He adds the following note:—

"It is said, Pedu was a certain Rājaṛṣi, who worshipped the Aşvins. They gave, therefore, him a white horse, through the possession of which he was always victorious over his enemies."

Griffith says :-

"The white horse, which of old ye gave, Aghāśva, Aśvins, a gift to be his wealth for ever.

Still to be praised is that your glorious present, still to be famed is the brave horse of Pedu.'

cars are to be used on land, in water and in the air. These three types of cars should be constructed with hundred mechanical fittings, fastenings and regulating apparatus (for keeping them joltless and steady). Such cars procure lasting and abiding (Tasthivamsam, i.e. Sthiti Mantam) happiness and prosperity.

(RV. I.116.5)

As this practice yields all enjoyments, all men should make efforts in The expert scientists produce white steam (Syetam Asyam) by this wav. properly employing the above mentioned Aśvins, i.e. water and fire, which make the aforesaid cars run at the swiftest speed. Such cars always (Sasvat) are source of happiness (vasti). These perfect cars are provided by Asvins and men should take (best) advantage (Guna) of them. Here the word 'Vām' (i.e. yours) is in the sense of 'their' by the interchange of person. The power of Asvins is described here as Datram, i.e. a gracious present as it is conducive to happiness. It is 'Mahi', i.e. highly meritorious and is to be celebrated (Kirtenyam). The word 'Kirtenyam' is formed by adding the suffix 'Kenya' according to the aphorism of "Krtyarthe Tavaikena-Kenya-Tvanah' (P. III.4.14). This means, "highly glorious." It gives excellent good to others. Here the word 'Bhūt', i.e. Abhūt (i.e. was), is in the sense of 'Bhavati' (i.e. is). Here past tense is used in the sense of present tense (by interchange). This swift horse by name Agni (i.e. fire) is Paidva and it causes these cars to run rapidly on their ways. According to the Nighantu (I. 14):-

(9) "Paidva and Patanga are the synonyms of horse."

(Nighantu I.14)

Thus we should employ this fire, the cause of swift locomotion, (Sadam-it) to our use. Arya (i.e. a merchant) particularly should use this type of horse. According to the following aphorism of Panini the word 'Arya' means a merchant or a Vaisya: —

(10) "Arya in the sense of Svāmī (i.e. master) and Vaiśya (i.e. a merchant). (P. III.1.103)

In the other sense we get the word "Āryaḥ", i.e. approachable.

The following words deserve notice:

and three nights."

- (a) Madhu-Vahane: "मधुरगतिमति रथे।" i.e. a car with a smooth an graceful motion.
- (b) Pavayalı: A 'Vajra-like' set of wheels.
- (c) Somasya-Venām: for the realisation of Soma, i.e. pleasure and peace. Dayānanda explains the word Venām a 'desirable'. But Sāyaṇa and others find here a historica reference which according to Wilson is never traceable in the Purāṇas. He says:—

"The Asvins are said to have filled their Ratha or car with all sort of good things when they went to the marriage of Vena with Soma—legend not found in the Puranas."

He translates the stanza :-

"Three are the solid (wheels) of your abundance-bearing chariot as all (the gods) have known (it to be) when attendant on Venā, the beloved of Soma; three are the columns placed (above it) for suppor and in it thrice do you journey by night and thrice by day."

Griffith translates :-

"Three are the fellies in your honey-bearing car, that travels after Soma's loved one as all know.

Three are the pillars set upon it for support, thrice journey ye by night, O Asvins, thrice by day."

Griffith here adds that :-

"Soma is here the Moon. His darling is Jyotsnā or Kaumudī: Moonlight, identified with Sūryā, is the light borrowed from the sun."

EXPLANATION

For the creation of smooth, (and graceful) motions (Madhu-Vāhane), in a car and for the speediest locomotion, there should be attached three Vajra-like solid sets of wheels mechanically prepared. Similarly the artisans erect three Skambhas, i.e. supports, to keep the car firm and steady and to preserve the various mechanical devices firm in their respective places. Viśve, i.e. all (the mechanics) know that such cars lead to peace (Soma) and prosperity and the realisation of desires (Venām). Such cars can be achieved and got prepared with the help of Asvins alone because their proper use can bring success, in constructing such cars which make us travel the greatest distance in three days and three nights. (RV. I.34.2)

Now what type of cars for travelling in the air, and upon the water or land should be constructed? Here it is said:

(12) "It should be prepared with Tri-Dhātu, i.e. three metals, e.g. iron, copper and silver. How much speed should it have? The Asvins, i.e. air and fire (gases, heat or electricity) may by means of mechanical devices move it forward and backward as fast as move the mind and the soul (Atmeva Vātaḥ)."

(RV. 1.34.7)

(13) "(Now the cars are further defined as)" Aritram, i.e. provided with apparatus for keeping it steady and retaining its balance. It should be 'Prthu', i.e. spacious enough. Such a car yoked with a horse, i.e. fire (Asva), is strong enough to cross (Tirthe) the great oceans (Sindhu-Mahā samudras) at the fastest speed. All the three cars should be equipped with waters (Indavah) for generating strong steam so that the cars may run at the swiftest speed.

(RV. I.48.8)

Here the word 'Indu' means 'water' as it is read in the synonyms of water in the Nighantu (I.12). This word is formed from the \sqrt{Undi} by converting its initial 'U' into 'I' according to the following aphorism from U_{1} adi:—

(RV. I.34.7)

^{(12) &#}x27;'त्रिनों अश्विना यज्ता दिवे दिवे परि विधातं पृथिवीमंशायतम् । तिस्रो नौसत्या रथ्या परावर्तं आत्मेन् वातः स्वसराणि गच्छतम् ॥"

- (14) "The first (letter of the root) Undi is converted in It." (U. I)
- (15) "O men, employ air, water, &c. rightly in the above mentioned three cars which are as swift as mind (Mano-Javaḥ) for the purpose of locomotion. These—air, fire, etc., in conjunction with water, produce steam which gives swift speed to them."

(RV. I.6.9.4)

(16) "For the purpose of traversing the entire distance (Pārāya Gantave) cars should be created which can move upon land, water and in the air. May our ships be as best as those of the intelligent people (Matīnām), whose profession is voyage. As these wise people employ (Ā-Yuñjāthām) fire and water (for generating steam) in their cars, so we use them in ours. Similarly let all people make efforts to prepare such cars for traversing all routes in oceans as well as elsewhere."

(RV. I.3.34.7)

The word 'Matoyah' has been included in the list of synonyms of 'Medhavin' (i.e. the wise) in the lifteenth Khanda (in the third chapter) of the Nighantu.

(17) "O men, when the fast moving mechanised horses (Harayaḥ) are moved by kindling fire under a container full of water with wood and other burning material, and when thus the machinery is set working with mechanical devices, then the particular car (Ni-Yānam) made of earthly substances (Pṛthvī-Vikāras) glide up (Ut-Patanti) high into the bright firmament."

* Some critics observe that Rsi Dayananda, having seen the scientific achievements and discoveries made by Europeans in his time which were unknown to Vedic India, has wrongly tried to establish, by interpreting Vedas in his own way, the fact that ships and aerial cars (Vimānas) were fully known to ancient Bhārata and that Dayānanda's attempt is wrong. But I cannot agree with them. These critics are not fair to him. They forget that the West saw the first "Air-Flight" only in 1901 and our author wrote this book much earlier in 1876. Dayananda's contention is not based on his intensive (deep) study of Vedas only but he also read the entire post-Vedic and classical Sanskrit literature. Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata, Raghuvamsa, and even Jātakas have numerous descriptions in this context. The well-known work "Samarangana-Sutradhara" of King Bhoja (1100 A.D.) deals with this topic also. Svāmī Brahma Muni recently discovered an old manuscript entitled Vimana Sastra" of Bhāradvāja and published it. It is a specific treatise on this topic. Rsi Dayananda also saw such a treatise and declared in his speech at Pune in 1875 that "मैंने विमान बनाने की पुस्तक देखी है।" (i.e. He saw a book dealing with the manufacturing of "Aerial cars"). Hence, Dayananda had a firm and positive knowledge in this matter.

The translation given above is based on the original explanation given by Dayananda in the text. He was a real Seer who without her tation deserves to be placed in the category of the Seers to who Yaska refers in his book Nirukta as "Sākṣāt Kṛta-Dharmaṇah". It we be interesting here to compare and contrast the translations of oth scholars.

electricity. It should also have qualities of the Aśvins. It (telegraphy) has a number of good advantages and therefore most of the learned use it. During the military operations (Pṛtanāsu), it is (Duṣṭaram) not to be transgressed or overcome (i.e. it is unavoidable). It should be used frequently (Car-Kṛtyam, i.e. Vāram Vāram Sarva Kṛiyāsu) in all matters. What qualities are there in it? Being repeatedly struck (Punaḥ-Punaḥ Hanana) it transmits What is it for? It brings success (Pedave) in all great and good matters. It is most advantageous in vanquishing jealous enemies (Spardhān) and in ensuring victory to the home-forces. It helps in performance of duties by men in the army (Carṣaṇī-Saham). It reveals seven occurring at great distance like the sun (Indram-Iva). (You should) make the best use of the Aśvins, i.e. the terrestrial substances and electricity and use also the telegraph-apparatus (Yuvām Duvasyathaḥ).*

In 'Yuvam Duvasyathaḥ' there is interchange of the Person (i.e. Second Person in the sense of Third Person). (RV. I. 119.10)

I.e., the system must have a direct link of at least 20 thousand miles and must not take more time than a day.

I advise the reader to refer to Ramayana (I.56.9) and Nirukta (VII.23) indicating the use of electricity in Vedic India,

^{*} Some occidental and oriental scholars do not accept the existence of telegraphy in ancient India. According to them, the assertion of Rsi Dayananda in this context is based on prejudice. They hold that there was no telegraphy or telecommunication system (whatsoever) in ancient India. But the fair-minded scholars who have studied Vedas and other Sanskrit works with open mind do not accept this. Like air-flights, telecommunication system was very well known to ancient India. infer from Bhagavad-Gitā, which is a part of Mahābhārata, that television as well as telecommunication of very high order was available to Sanjaya who saw and heard all events or all talks of the heroes of the Kuruksetra war. This science was known to Vyāsa and a reliable system of this sort was then in actual practice. We have a specific injunction for kings in the "Sukranīti", enjoining upon the rulers to set up an unfailing system of telecommunication and telegraphy which must have a direct link with the centre:-

THE SCIENCE OF MEDICINES

(The under-mentioned verse refers to the origin of the medical science):—

(1) "To us let Apas (i.e. waters or vital airs) and herbs be friendly; let them be unfriendly to him who hates us and whom we hate."

(YV. VI.22)

EXPLANATION

The purport (of this verse) is as follows:

Here the origin of the medical science is referred to. O Supreme Healer Lord! May the medicines, e.g. Soma, &c. be friendly to us. Here the word $Sumitriy\bar{a}$ (i.e. friendly) is formed by replacing suffix 'Jas' by ' $Diy\bar{a}c$ ' according to the $V\bar{a}rtika$ (i.e. a supplementary aphorism) that " $Iy\bar{a}$, $Diy\bar{a}c$ and 'I' should also be included."* (M.B.)

May these medicinal herbs be friendly, promote our pleasures and destroy our diseases through their precise knowledge. May the 'Apas' (i.e. Prāṇas), i.e. vital airs, be our good friends. May they be unfriendly, i.e. source of pains and inimical, to the unrighteous persons or lust or anger and the diseases who or which oppose us or whom we oppose. That is to say that medicines are benevolent like friends to them who follow a precise regimen and are malevolent like enemies to, and thus inflict afflictions on, them who transgress it.

Thus we come across many verses in the Vedas which contain original principles (of the medical science. It is needless to cite all of them here. We will explain them in their respective places (in our regular commentary).

RE-BIRTH

- (1) "Grant us O Asu-Nīti (i.e. Prolonger of life) our sight again; grant us again our breath and our enjoyment in this world; long may we behold the rising sun; O Anumati, favour us with prosperity." (RV. X.59.6)
- (2) "May Earth restore to us our vital spirit; may the bright (Devī) firmament and mid-air restore it. May Soma restore the body to us; may Pūṣan show us again the path of peace and comfort." (RV. X.59.7)

The above-mentioned stanzas reveal the doctrine of the past and the future births.

(1) "अर्धुनीते पुनेर्स्मासु चक्षुः पुनेः प्राणिस्ह नो घेहि भोर्गम् । ज्योक् पेश्येम् सूर्यमुक्वरंन्तमनुंमते मृळवां नः स्वृह्ति ॥" (RV. X.59.6)

Here the word 'Asu-Nīti' means God who is bestower of long life.

Griffith comments upon this word as "a personification of the favour with which the gods regard the sacrifices and prayers of the pious." Wilson says, "Gracious (goddess)." Asu-Nīti literally means conductress of life, i.e. who prolongs life'.

(2) "पुनेर्नो अर्षु पृथिवो देदातु पुन्छोँदेवो पुनेर्न्तिसम् । पुनेर्नु: सोमस्तुन्वै ददातु पुने: पूषा पृथ्यां वे या स्वस्ति: ॥" (RV. X.59.7)

Here the word 'Dyau' (according to our author) means 'the shining sun'. Others take it as the firmament. Sāyaṇa takes 'Pathyām' as that which is in firmament, i.e. speech which is derived from Ether (λk āśa). Wilson says:—

Svasti may be a synonym of Vāc (speech). "May she give us articulation." Pathyām Vācam, 'good speech'.

EXPLANATION

Here the word 'Asu-nītt' is in the vocative case and is formed from Asu (i.e., vital spirit) by adding the root $N\bar{\imath}$ 'to take away', i.e., one who takes away life, i.e. God. O God, may we be happy whenever we may assume another body after death.

Here the 'Cakşu' (i.e. eye) is an indication of the self and all other senses. Thus it means, "Give us, O Lord, the eyes and all other senses when we may assume another body after leaving the present one." Restcre to us all senses in our rebirths. The word 'Prāṇa' indicates vital airs as well as inner organs. Give us again, i.e. in our next birth, the vital airs and all inner organs. O God, grant us in our re-birth all enjoyments (Bhogas) for ever, so that we may behold the rising sun and (have) in-coming and out-going vital airs.

O Anumati (i.e. giver of honour i.e. God) make us happy (Mrdaya) through Thy grace and com'ortable in all our re-births. This prayer is offered here.

(RV. X.59.6)

O Lord, be gracious to grant that in our re-births the earth may give us Prana, i.e. food and strength. May the bright $(Dev\tilde{\imath})$ Dyau (i.e. the light of the Sun) give us life-breath. May the middle region give us life again in our next birth. May the Soma, i.e. the juices of herbs, grant us body (i.e. corporeal health and strength). O $P\bar{u}\bar{s}an$, the giver of vigour show us the path of righteousness in our re-births. We pray that we may attain happiness through Thy grace in our re-birth for ever. (RV. X.59.7)

- (3) "The mind (i.e. thought) and life have returned to me; my breath and soul have come again; and the eye and the ear I have gained again. May Vaiśvānara Agni (i.e. the Self-effulgent Leader of mankind) who is our bodies' guard and unscathed preserve us from calamities and dishonour." (YV. IV.15)
- (4) May sense return to me again and may Soul, spiritual power and riches (come to me again). Let the sacred Fires again aflame on altars, each wisely stationed, here succeed and prosper."

 (AV. VII.67.1)

^{(3) &}quot;पुनुमंनः पुनुरार्युमें आगृन् पुनेः प्राणः पुनेरात्मा म् ग्रागृन् पुनुश्वक्षुः पुनुः श्रोत्रं म् आगेन् । वैश्वानुरो अदेव्धस्तनूपा अग्निनैः पातु दुरितादेवृद्यात् ॥'' (YV. IV.15)

(5) "He, who practised righteous course (Dharma) first (i.e. in his previous birth) assumes multifarious human forms (according to his previous acts). This Dhasu (i.e. a person having previous acts to his credit) who understands the unspoken (revealed divine) speech (i.e. the Vedas) enters his birth place first."

(AV. V.1.2)

EXPLANATION

O Lord of Universe; may the mind endowed with knowledge and other good merits and may the (full term of) life come again to us in our rebirth through Thy grace. May the pure thought (or soul) come to us in our re-births. May the sight and hearing be restored to us. God who is the director and leader of the universe (Vaisvanara) has no defect such as

(5) ''श्रा यो धम⁸णि प्रथमः सुसाद् ततो वर्ष्ष कृणुवे पुरुषि । धृत्सयुर्योनि प्रथम श्रा विवेशा यो वाचुमनुंवितां चिकेते ॥'' (AV. V.1.2)

The last half of the verse (4) has been rendered by Griffith as "Again let fires, aflame on lesser altars, each duly stationed, here succeed and prosper."

But the stanza (5) has quite differently been translated by our author. Griffith himself admits that this verse is not clear to him. He remarks, 'This very obscure introductory verse."

I cite below his English rendering :---

"He, who, the first, approached the holy statutes, makes, after, many beauteous forms and figures.

Eager to drink, his birth place first be entered —who understands the word when yet unspoken."

Here the word "Dhāsu" is rendered by Griffith as 'Eager to drink'. He perhaps takes it from the root Dhait 'to drink'. But Ludwig interprets it as: "Eager to form or create."

Dayananda explains this word as "Dhasyati-iti-Dhasyu, i.e., a soul who bears the consequences of righteous or unrighteous acts committed by him in previous birth."

The phrase "Anuditām Vācam" also deserves notice. Griffith takes and confines himself to the literal meaning of the word 'An-uditām' (i.e. not spoken). Dayānanda goes still further and takes the suggested meaning, saying: "An-uditām, i.e. revealed, i.e. the revealed words of the Vedas," deception (Adabdha) and He is the preserver of our bodies $(Tannp\bar{a})$. God is Agni, i.e. all wisdom and all bliss. May He keep us aloof from Durita, i.e. evil deeds. He may give us shelter in all our re-births so that we may be free from all sins and be happy in our re-births. (YV. IV.15)

O God, may we get again in our re-births all senses and the power of spirit which sustains the Prānas (i.e. vital energy). The noble wealth (Dravinam) of knowledge and firm devotion to Supreme Power (Brāhmaṇam i.e. Brahma-niṣtha) may be restored to us. May we assume human form so that we may be able to kindle the fires (Agnayaḥ) i.e. Ahavanīya. &c. All these come to us again and again in all our re-births. O Lord of the universe! may we be endowed with retentive intellect (Dhiṇnyā), good bodies and sound senses in our re-births again as we had them in our previous birth in this world so that we may be able to discharge all our duties (rightly) and may not feel deficient on any account. (AV. VII.67.1)

A man, who has performed righteous (Dharmani) deeds in his previous (Prathamah) birth, assumes good bodies (Vapus) in his successive birth on the strength of those virtuous deeds. But if a man has done evil actions, he would never get human body. He suffers afflictions and is (condemned to be) born into the body of an animal, &c. God suggests this in the (first) half of this verse. The word Dhasyu means one who bears. Thus the individual soul, whose nature is to bear the consequences of righteous or evil actions, done by him in his previous birth is Dhasyu, i.e. the bearer. Such a soul, having left the old body, enters $(\bar{A}$ -vivesa) such substances as the air, water, medicinal herbs, &c., and then through them it enters into a new body in accordance with the fruits of its former good or evil deeds. A man, who having accomplished the complete knowledge of the Vedic Lore—a speech which has been revealed by God and thus is unspoken (by man, i.e. An-Uditām) is awarded a body of a learned man like his former body and enjoys happiness. But a man, who acts countrary to (the Vedic teaching), obtains the body of the lower beings and suffers pain.

(AV. V.1.2

(6) "I have heard of two pathways—way of the Fathers and god and that of the mortals. On these two roads each moving creature travels; each (creature) between the Father and the Mother." (YV. XIX.47

^{(6) &#}x27;'द्वे सृती श्रेष्ट्रणवं पितृणामुदं देवानांमुत मत्यौनाम् । ताभ्योमिदं विश्वमेजुत्समेंति यदंन्तुरा पितरं मातरं च ॥" (YV. XIX.47) (Contd.)

We are told here that there are two separate ways for the human beings. One is the way of Devas (i. e. the unselfish learned) and the other that of the mortals. Our author explains this. According to him, there are two Yanas, i.e. one by name is Pitryāna and the other is called Devayāna. One, i.e. Devayāna, leads to Final Emancipation and the other to re-births through father and mother and thus the second is called Pitryāna, i.e. the path of Fathers. But the Western interpreters explain this verse differently. For instance, Griffith says, "Two several pathways; the way to the other world and the way back regarded as distinct." He explains the phrase 'Pitaram Mātaram Ca' (i.e. Father and mother) as heaven and earth. This interpretation is obviously wrong and contrary to the import of this stanza.

The Bhagavad Gītā clearly corroborates the interpretation of Dayānanda:—

टां. यत्र काले त्वनावृत्तिमावृत्ति चैव योगिनः ।
 प्रयाता यान्ति तं कालं वक्ष्यामि भरतर्षभ ॥
 शुक्लकृष्णे गती ह्येते जगतः शाश्वते मते ।
 एकया यात्यनावृत्तिमन्ययावत्तंते पुनः ॥" (VIII.23.26)

These two paths are called by two different under-mentioned names:—

- (8) "I have relished many kinds of food and have sucked many kinds of breasts. I have witnessed various mothers, fathers and friends."

EXPLANATION

There are two (separate) paths in this world for experiencing the fruits of righteous and evil deeds. One is the Path of Pitaras and the other is that of the Devas, i.e. the learned and the wise. The former includes those persons who are devoid of knowledge and wisdom. One is called Pitryana and the other Devavana. That where a soul assumes human form through (the agency of) the father and mother and experiences pleasure and pain (as the case may be) as the fruits of his good and evil deeds again and again, i.e. where the soul is subject to past and future births, is called the The other Path, following which the soul obtains the stage (Pada) of Mokşa (i.e. Emancipation) and is liberated from the world, i.e. the cycle of birth and death, is called the Devayana. In the former (the Jīva) having enjoyed the fruits of his accumulated righteous deeds is born again and dies again. In the latter he is not born again, nor does he die again. I have heard these two Paths. Through these two Paths the moving (E jati, i.e. transmigration) all (Visva) souls pass and repass. When the Jiva, leaving his previous body and wandering about in the air, water or vegetable kingdom, enters the body of the father and mother, he becomes an embodied soul.

^{(8) &#}x27;'आहारा विविधा भुक्ताः पीता नानाविधाः स्तनाः । मातरो विविधा दृष्टाः पितरः सुहुदस्तथा ॥'' (N. XIII.19)

^{(9) &}quot;अवाङ्मुखः पीडचमानो जन्तुश्चैव समन्वित: ॥" (N. XIII.19)

In the Nirukta, we find these verses bearing accent-marks.

It indicates that originally all works—Vedic and non-Vedic—contained accent-marks which disappeared later on.

The author of the Nirukta also (shares this view and clearly) supports (the doctrine) of transmigration in the verses (noted above). (N. XIII.19)

The great sage Patanjali in his "Yoga Śastra" and his commentator Veda Vyāsa have also established the fact of transmigration of souls:—

(10) "Flowing through its own nature, and established even in the learned, is 'Abhinivesa' (the clinging to life)." (YD. I.2.9)

EXPLANATION

The fear of death, prevailing upon all living beings since the very birth, clearly establishes (the fact that) there are births and re-births. Even a very recently born insect fears death. A learned has also a similar feeling. This shows that soul assumes many forms. Without experience of death in a previous birth there can be no impression of the same in the (next birth). Without impression there can be no memory. In the absence of memory, how can there be fear of death? As we witness fear of death (being exhibited) by all living beings, we conclude that past and future births do take place.

(10) 'स्वरसवाही विदुषोऽपि तथारूढोऽभिनिवेश: ॥" (YD. I.2.9)

This clinging to life (Abhi-niveśa) we see manifested in every Upon it many attempts have been made to build the theory of future life, because men are so fond of life also. Of course it goes without saying that this argument is without much value, but the most curious part of it is that in Western countries the idea, that the clinging to life indicates a possibility of future life applies only to men, but does not include animals. In India this clinging to life has been one of the arguments to prove past experience and existence. instance, if it be true that all our knowledge has come from experience, then it is sure that we cannot imagine or understand that which we never experienced. As soon as chickens are hatched, they begin to pick up food. Many times when ducklings have been hatched by ducks, it has been seen that as soon as they come out of the eggs they rush to water and the mother thinks that they will be drowned. If experience be the only source of knowledge, where did these chickens learn to pick up food or the ducklings, that water was their natural element? If you say it is instinct, it means nothing—it is simply giving a word, but is no explanation,

This all indicates that there are past and future births.

Similarly the highly learned Seer Gautama, in his Nyāya Śāstra, and its commentator Vātsyāyana share this view of re-birth:—

(11) "Pretya Bhava (i.e. existence after death) is re-birth."

r

(ND. I.1.19)

EXPLANATION

Pretya Bhava is a technical term which means to leave an old body and to assume a new body. The word 'Pretya' means 'having died' and 'Bhāva' means 'coming into existence' (again). Thus a Jīva having left this world (i.e. birth) is born again and assumes a (new) body.

Here the protagonists of the one-birth theory say, "Why do we not remember it if there was any former birth?" (To meet this objection) we reply, "O (my friend), open your intellectual eyes and behold. There is no memory of the pleasures and pains, experienced even in this life for five years since our birth, now; nor (we) remember ALL those events which transpired in our waking and sleeping moods. Not to speak then of the remembrance of events of the past life."

- Q. If God destines for us prosperity or adversity as the fruits of our righteous or unrighteous deeds performed by us in our former existence, God becomes unjust, because their perception is unavailable and also because (this blind award) does not reform us.
- A. Here our contention is that knowledge is of two kinds. One is perceptional and the other, inferential. Suppose a medical man and a layman fall ill. Here the medical man, on account of his (technical) knowledge, taking into consideration (the cause and effect), infers the cause of his disease. But not so in the case of the layman; but he also, though being devoid of technical knowledge of the medical science, understands quite well that there can be no effect without a cause and as there is an effect (in the form of his disease) which he experiences, he comes to the conclusion that he must have committed formerly some causative irregularity in his diet, etc. Similarly, God, whose (characteristic) is to administer justice, cannot give pleasure or pain to any one without his having done previously good or evil acts. As we find in this world the higher and lower grades of prosperous and miserable people, we infer that (the same is the result of) good or evil deeds committed in their former births.

^{(11) &}quot;पुनरुत्पत्तिः प्रेत्यभावः ॥" (ND. I.1.19)

There are many other similar objections advanced by the holders of one-birth theory. They can be met with duly considerate replies. The intellectual people need not have a detailed account of every thing in black and white. They understand much more by only a few suggestions. Hence we refrain from writing more so that the book may not become too bulky.

THE MARRIAGE

The following (two verses) ordain the sacrament of marria (institution):—

(1) "I take thy hand (in mine), for happy fortune, that the mayest attain old age with me, as thy husband. Bhase Aryaman, Savity, Purandhi (and) the Devas (i.e. the learne have given thee (unto me) to be my household's mistress."

(RV, X.85.3

(2) Abide here together; may you never be separated; enj the full span of (human) life, sporting with sons an grandsons, and rejoicing in your own home."

(RV, X.85.4

(1) "गृक्ष्णाभि ते सौभग्त्वाय हस्ते मया पत्यो जुरदेष्टियंथार्सः । भगो अर्थुमा सेविता पुरेन्धिर्मह्यं त्वादुगिहिपत्याय देवाः ॥" (RV. X. 85.36

The bridegroom addresses the bride here. Here the words Bhage Aryaman, 'Savitr and Purandhi stand for the various qualities of God, i.e they respectively mean 'Glorious one, the Just, the Creator and the Suppos of the universe.'

Sāyaņa explains the second half of this verse as :--

"The gods (Devāḥ), Bhaga, Aryaman, Savitr and Purandhi have give thee to me that I may be the master of a household.

(2) "इहैव स्तं मा वि यौंध्टं विश्वमायुक्धेश्नुतम् । क्रीडेन्तो पुत्रैर्नर्षृपिरमोंर्समानौ स्वे गृहे ॥" (RV. X.85.42)

When the bridegroom reaches home with his bride and offer Agnihotra there, the priest addresses the wedded pair and showers blessing upon them by this verse.

EXPLANATION

The meaning of these two verses is as follows:-

O Virgin! O Young Maiden! I take thy hand, i.e., I marry thee and thou marriest me for the accomplishment of the purpose of begetting progeny. Mayest thou, O Lady! reach the old age with me as thy husband and may I reach old age (likewise) with thee as my mistress. In this way may we perform harmoniously our duties and rejoice with each other. God, who is All glory (Bhaga), the Ordainer of justice (Aryaman), the Creator (Savitr) and the Mainstay of the universe (Purandhi), has given thee to me for household duties (Grha-Karya) and all the learned (Devas) assembled here are our witnesses. If any of us ever transgresses and does not abide by this pledge, he or she would be punishable by God and the learned. (RV. X.85.36)

God ordains the mutual conduct of the husband and the wife, after their marriage:—

O wife and husband! abide here happily together for ever as house-holders and may you never be separated on account of enmity or migration to the foreign land. May you both by My blessing always perform righteous deeds, do good to all, be devoted to Me and enjoy the full span of human life, full of all joys. May you live happily in your own home, sporting and playing with sons and grandsons and enjoying all pleasures. May you remain engaged in the performance of righteous deeds. (RV. X.85.42)

(It is also ordained here) that one woman should have only one husband and one man should have only one wife. Consequently this verse, prohibits the marriage of one man with more than one woman and likewise the marriage of one woman with more than one man because in the entire text of the Vedas only the singular number is used.

There are many such verses in the Vedas dealing with the topic of marriage.

THE NIYOGA

(1) "Where are you, O Aśvins, by night? Where are you, by the day? Where is your halting place? Where do you rest for the night? Who does bring you homeward, as the widow draws bedward her Devara (i.e. appointed husband or husband's brother), as the bride attracts the groom?"

(RV. X.40.2)

(1) "कुह स्विट्दोषा कुह वस्तीर्थिवना कुहाभिष्टितं करतः कुहाँषतुः । को वा शयुत्रा विद्यवेव देवरं मर्थ्यं न योषां कृणुते स्धस्य आ ॥" (RV. X.40.2)

The word Aśvins, occurring here, has fully been explained already and on the authority of the Nirukta and the Brāhmanas, it means "a pair" of natural phenomena, e. g., day and night, the Sun and the Moon, morning and evening twilight, and also water and fire. Here our author takes this word in the sense of married pair. According to him, the word "devara" in this verse, on the authority of the Nirukta, means 'a second husband':—

"देवरः कस्मात् ? द्वितीयो वर उच्यते ॥" (N. III.15)

i. e., devara is so called as he is the second husband. Ordinarily it means 'husband's younger brother'. According to Hindu law books, husband's brother is entitled to marry a widow, who is Akşata yoni (i.e. a virgin):—

"यस्या िम्रयेत कन्याया वाचा सत्ये कृते पितः ।
तामनेन विधानेन निजो विन्देत देवरः ।। (MS. IX.69)
असत्सु देवरेषु स्त्री बान्धवैर्या प्रवीयते ।
सवर्णाय सपिण्डाय सा तृतीया प्रकीत्तिता ।।"

(NS. and also MR. 153)

Durga, the commentator of the Nirukta, also supports this view :—

"सा हि भर्तुः स्नाता नित्यमेव तथा स्नातृभार्यया देवनार्थं वियते इति देवरः इत्युच्यते ।।"

(2) "Choosing her husband's Loka (i.e. family or world or company), O man, this woman has fallen down (out of sorrow) beside thy lifeless body. Faithfully she adheres to the Ancient Law. Bestow upon her riches and offsprings."

(AV. XVIII.3.1)

(3) "Rise up, O woman! and come unto the world of life; (in vain) you are clinging (lit. laying yourself down by the side of) to one who is lifeless. Wifehood with this, thy husband, who took thy hand and wooed thee as lover, was thy lot."

(AV. XVIII.3.1; RV. X.18.8)

- (2) "ह्यं नारी पतिलोकं वृंणाना नि पद्यत् उप त्वा मत्यं प्रेतेम् । धर्मं पुराणमेनुपालयंत्ती तस्यै प्रजां द्वतिणं चेह धेहि॥" (AV. XVIII.3.1)
- (3) "उद्गिष्वं नार्धिम जीवलोकं गृतासुंमेतमुपंशेष एहिं । हस्तृग्रामस्यं विधिषोस्तवेदं पत्युंर्जन्त्वमृभि सं बंभूथ ॥ (AV. XVIII.3.1; RV. X.18.8)

A faithful translation of these verses has been given above. But the explanation given by Dayananda differs greatly. He maintains that these verses establish the theory of Niyoga (i. e. appointment). According to him, a widow (after her husband's death) or a widower is not entitled to remarry as monogamy on either side has been ordained. In case they need procreation, the Niyoga should be adhered to, i. e., under the mutual understanding a pair of widow and widower can beget children, under certain restrictions for the benefit of a widow or widower. It is quite clear from, "Bestow upon her both riches and offsprings".

(AV. XVIII.3.1)

The word 'Didhişu'. means a second husband. The word 'Devara' according to Yāska also means a second vara. But the Western interpreters find a reference here to the Satī system, which according to them was in vogue in pre-Vedic times. Griffith explains the phrase 'Puranam

EXPLANATION

The above-mentioned verses enjoin Niyoga (i. e. a marria; appointment) between a widow and a widower.

O married pair! where do you abide by the night, where do yo the day, where do you make your earning (Abhi pitvam, i.e. $Pr\bar{a}ptim \ Kw$ where is your halting place and where is your sleeping chamber (Śaj Śayana-Sthānam)?

These questions are put to the husband and the wife. The number here denotes that one man should marry one wife only. Sin one woman should have one husband only. Their mutual love shoulasting with the result that they should not forsake each other and should be no adultery. (A bride should approach the groom) as a accedes her second husband. (For the interpretation of the word L following is the evidence:—

(4) "A Devara is so called because he is the second (D husband (Vara)." (N.

A widow is permitted to make appointment (Niyoga) with a husband and a widower with a widow. A widow should contact her Niyoga with a widower only for begetting children and not with a bac Similarly a bachelor should not enter into Niyoga with a widow. purport is that a bachelor and a virgin should marry only once.

Dharmam' as 'ancient custom'. He says :-

"There is reason to believe, by the Aryan immigrants in the e times, but not generally observed, when these funeral hymns composed. Old Northern poetry contains many instances of the obse of this 'ancient custom'. Nanna was burnt with Baldr; Brynhild orders that she should be burnt with Sigurd; Gunnhild slew h when Asmund died; and Gudrun was reproached with having surviv husband.'

But according to the Gihyasūtras both these views are not able because the Aśvalāyana Gihyasūtra (IV.2) states that "the second (2) is spoken by the busband's brother, a foster son or a family servant, who makes the widow leave the body of the dead."

(4) "देवर: कस्मात् द्वितीयो वर उच्यते ॥" (N. III.15)

the circumstances (described above) Niyoga is ordained. A second marriage is never allowed among the Twice-borns (Dvijas). Second marriage is permissible only in the Śūdras as they are devoid of education and the culture (of the learned).

How should a man and a woman duly contacted by Niyoga behave towards each other? Here the Mantra says (as follows):—

"Like a bride towards bridegroom." As a married woman draws bedward her husband for begetting offsprings, even so should a widow and widower behave after entering into Niyoga, like wife and husband for the purpose of procreation.

(RV. X.40.2)

(Iyam Nārī etc.) This widow, renouncing her dead (Preta) husband and desirous of her husband's happiness approaches thee, O man! according to the Niyoga ordinance as a (second) husband. Accept her and produce offsprings by her. The widow is qualified further as 'following the ancient law' ordained by the Vedas she accepts thee as her husband under Niyoga. Do thou also accept her and make her produce offsprings at this time in this world, i.e., conceive and make her pregnant."

(AV. XVIII.3.1)

(Rise up, etc.) O widowed woman! leave thy deceased husband (Gata+Asum) and approach (Ehi) thy living second husband (Devara) and live with him for begetting children. Thy offsprings (obtained through Niyoga) shall belong to thy (dead) husband who took (Hasta Grābha) thy hand (in marriage). If the Niyoga has been undertaken for the (benefit of) the appointed (second) husband, then these children shall go to him. The widow can have such offsprings. O widow! rise up if thou desirest to enter into Niyoga contract after the death of your married busband; approach a widower for procreation and enjoy happiness.

(RV. X.18.8; AV. XVIII.3.2)

(5) "O Indra, the showerer! make her (the mother) of good sons and fortunate. Vouchsafe in her ten sons and make (her) husband the eleventh (or husbands eleven)." (RV. X.85.45)

This verse has been cited above to prove that a woman is allowed to have eleven husbands, i. e., one 'married one' and ten after his death (in case she needs offsprings) by way of Niyoga. The word 'Indra'

^{(5) &}quot;हुमां त्विमन्द्र मीढ्व: सुपुत्रां सुमगां कृणु । दशांस्यां पुत्राना धेहि पतिमेकादृशं कृषि ॥" (RV. X.85.45)

(6) "Soma gets her first; Gandharva wins her next; Agni is the third Pati (i.e. Guardian or protector) and the fourth one is human being." (RV. X 85.40) has been interpreted here by Dayānanda as a "man (husband) who is capable of conceiving and making her pregnant." The word 'Mīḍhvaḥ' (i.e. showerer) is significant here. The last sentence of this verse "Patim Ekādašam Kṛdhi" (RV. X.85.45) is again translated by our author as "Let her have eleven husbands". But the word "Ekādaša" (also) means as "eleventh" as we have translated this verse above. Dayānanda differs and takes it in the sense of 'eleven' instead of 'eleventh'. I agree with S. Dayānanda but to accommodate others' view, I have given here alternative explanation for comparison.

I take the word 'Indra' here in the sense of "God". This Mantra is a prayer to Indra, "the Bestower of all boons". The maximum number of offsprings is fixed here ten. And in this way the husband's number in the family would be naturally "eleventh". It shows the maximum (total) number of members of the family. It does not enjoin that a woman should marry eleven times one after the other. It is a Vedic Family Planning.

(6) ''सोर्म: प्रथमो विविदे गन्धुको विविद् उत्तरः । तृतीयो अभिन्दे पतिंस्तुरीर्थस्ते मनुष्यकाः ॥" (RV. X.85.40)

The following note from Grassman deserves notice here:

"As the typical bride "Surya" was first married to "Soma", so the young maid originally belongs to him, then to the "Gandharva", as the guardian of virginity, then to "Agni" as the Sacred fire round which she walks in the marriage ceremony and fourthly to her human husband."

Here I offer another interpretation, which may differ from the one given by our revered author, for the consideration of scholars:

The word 'Soma' here means 'the moon'. We know from the following verse that the Moon is the Lord of herbs and her nourishing rays make the young maid healthy:—

"Soma Oşadhīnām-Adhipatih". (Pāraskara 1.8.12) (Contd.)

(7) "Be not hostile to Devara or to thy lord; prosper here (O bride); be tender to animals, be self-controlled; be very glorious. Bring forth heroic offsprings. Love the Devr (i.e.

The word Gandharva here means the Sun. Colebrooke always renders 'Gandharva' in this hyma as the Sun. (See Colebrooke's Essays, Vol. I, p. 210). One more point here deserves serious consideration that only four names, e.g., "Soma, Gandharva, Agni and Manusyaja," are enumerated here and not "eleven".

Here the first three names, i. e. Soma, Gandharva and Agni, respectively may mean, the Moon, the Sun and the Fire and they are evidently not human beings; only the fourth one is described as "manborn" (Manuşya+Ja, i. e. human beings). In this way Soma, Gandharva and Agni (the Moon, the Sun and the Fire) are the protective divine forces which cause three stages of pre-youth period of a girl (e. g. infancy, childhood and teenage, i. e. Śaiśava, Bālya and Kaumāra). The word "मनुष्यजाः" is (in Singular Nominative case) derived from "मनुष्य+ √जन् + विट् according to aphorism "जन्मन्खन्यमा विट् (P. III.2.67) by changing "न्" into "ग्रा" under Rule "विड्"- वनोरनुनासिकस्यान्" (P. VI.4.41). हिरण्यकेशी reads "नुरीयोऽहं मनुष्यजाः" for "नुरीयस्नु मनुष्यजाः ।"

Thus this verse allows. only "one man" to be married by a woman. In this way, the verse may not refer to the idea of Niyoga.

Cf.: "सोमो दहद्गन्धर्वाय गन्धर्वो ददद्गनथे। र्याय च पुत्रोश्चादादिग्नर्मह्मभयो इनाम्।।" (RV. X.85.41)

Here also we find Soma (the moon), Gandharva (the Sun) and Agni (the Fire) described as the guardians (Patis, Pa 'to protect') of the girl. Rsi Dayananda also accepts this meaning in the Sanskāra Vidhi (p. 165). He writes, "वश पुत्र और खारहवें (एकादशम्) पति को प्राप्त होकर सन्तीय कर।" [SV. p. 165, Vedic Yantralaya, Ajmer edition, 1975 (V E.)].

(7) ''अदेवृष्टन्यपंतिष्टनोहैधि शिवा पृशुक्ष्यः सुवम्। सुवचीः । प्रजावती बीर्सुर्देवृक्षामा स्योनेममृग्नि गाह्वपत्यं सपर्यं ॥'' (AV. XIV.2.18) (Contd.) Devara i.e. husband's brother). Tend well this sacred (household) fire; be soft and pleasant."

(AV. XIV.2.18)

EXPLANATION

Now (by these verses) the number of Niyogas and the offsprings is restricted, i.e., how many times should Niyoga be undertaken, or how many children can be begotten?

O Indra! i.e., O married husband! thou art showerer (lit. giver) of the semen virile. Make this bride pregnant by giving her seed. Make her the mother of good sons and extremely happy. Vouchsafe in this, thy married woman, ten offsprings only but not more than this. God has

Here the word " $Adev_! + Ghn\bar{\imath}$ " which means 'be not hostile to Devara' has a variant reading as " $Adeva + Ghn\bar{\imath}$ " which means 'be not hostile to Deva, i.e. father-in-law."

Similarly there is another reading for Davr-Kāmā (i.e. loving thy Devara) as Deva-Kāmā, which means "be devoted to thy husband's father."

Cf.: ''श्रघोरचक्षुरपतिघ्न्येषि शिवा पशुभ्यः सुमनाः सुवर्ताः । बीरसः देव (व) कामा स्थोना शन्तो भव ····· ।।' (RV. X.85.44)

The formulae contained in this and three successive verses in the Rgveda (X.85.44) are repeated when the bridegroom has returned with his bride to his home, and offers Fire Sacrifice there. In this verse the bride is addressed:—

"(Look at thy husband) with no angry eye; be not hostile to thy lord; be tender to animals; be amiable, be glorious; be the mother of heroic sons; be devoted to Deva (i.e. God or Father-in-law) (or to Devr, i.e. husband's brother) etc."

In all such verses we find the word Deva which means God or father-in-law. The alternative reading Devr (cited here by our author) is found only in the 'Ajmer edition'. It indicates that the bride should respect her father-in-law or should have regard for her husband's brother. This may not be a (positive) proof to establish the theory of Niyoga with Devara. How can a priest bless and curse the bride at the same time (i.e. on her marriage) that she should have second husband if her husband dies? It will prove a curse rather than a blessing.

ordained that a man should beget ten children only. O woman, have only eleven husbands including married husband. The idea is that if a rarely dire calamity happens to come and that the husbands die one after the other (without begetting a child) the woman is permitted to contact Niyoga with ten persons only for procreating offsprings, Similarly the man when his married wife ceases to exist, can contact by Niyoga with one after the other widow upto the number of ten only in case no issue is available. But if there is no desire on the part of a widow or a widower to have Niyoga, he or she is free not to do so.

(RV. X 85.45)

The following verse enumerates the names of the different husbands:

O woman! thy first husband by marriage is called Soma (i.e. gentle) because he is endowed with qualities of gentleness, &c. The second husband obtained through Niyoga when you have become widow is called Gandharva, because he understands what sexual intercourse is. The husband with whom thou contractest Niyoga third time is styled as Agni, because all his corporeal substances burn as if they were on fire when he finds himself contracted by Niyoga with thee who hast had already sexual intercourse with two men. O woman! all thy husbands from the fourth upto the tenth are termed as Manusyaja because they have ordinary strength and potency. Similarly the woman also gets the names of Somya, Gandharvi, Agneyi and Manusyaja because of the respective qualities.

(RV. X.85.40)

O woman! thou servest thy husband by marriage as well as thy second husband (by Niyoga). Be tender to (domestic) animals. Acquire auspicious virtues. Regulate all household affairs rightly. Attain best knowledge and noble grace. Be devoted to the bringing up of children. Produce heroic sons. Be desirous of having second husband by Niyoga. Enjoying all bliss be pleasant to the other. Tend domestic and sacrificial fires devotedly, and perform all duties at home."

(AV. XIV.2.18)

Here the institution of Niyoga in times of dire calamity is sanctioned for men and women both.*

^{*} The curious reader is advised to read the relevant portion of the Satyartha Prakāśa of Swamī Dayānanda where many examples from the Epics (Mahābhārata etc.) have been cited as historical evidences, supported by Smrtis and other scriptures.

THE DUTIES OF THE RULER AND THE RULED

The following stanzas deal with the regal duties: -

(1) "(Like the Sun and the Moon the enlightened and just acts of the rulers) embellish the three state assemblies. (Through them people get victory) in Vidathas (i.e. wars). (These assemblies serve) multifarious (Purūni) and universal (Visvāni) purposes. I ordain (Apasyam) that men of mental progress (Manasā-Jaganvān), high administrative efficiency and knowing the system of secret spying (should return to them)."

(RV. III.38.6)

(1) ''बोणि राजाना विद्धे पुरूणि परि विश्वानि भूषयः सदांति । अपश्यमत्र मनेसा जगुन्वान् वृते गेन्ध्वां अपि वृायु-केशान् ॥'' (RV.III.38.6)

Our author has cited this verse from the Rgveda in order to prove that the Vedas throw light on the duties of the ruler. He has his own rendering and his own free and original explanation. The meaning is not very clear. No other translator, Indian or European, has derived this sense from this verse. In order to rightly understand our author we should take into consideration the following words which I reproduce here along with their meanings as given by our great author:—

(a) Trīni : Three.

(b) Vidathe : In the battle-field.

(c) Puruni : Multiformed.

(d) Viśvani : Of universal (benefit).

(e) Rājānā Sadānsi: State Assemblies, (f) Vrate: In their duties.

(g) Gandharvān : Men having efficiency in administration.

(h) Vayu-Keśān : Keśas mean solar rays, i.e., persons having access every where through "air like" invisible spies, (Contd.)

- (2) "(O God!) thou art the birth-place of the princely power: thou art the centre of the princely power. May none of us desert (lit. harm) Thee: do me no harm." (YV. XX.1)
- (3) "I deem that world holy, where Devas, with Agni dwell and where priestly rank and princely power move together in coordination." (YV. XX.25)

This interpretation is wholly original and logical. I cite below the English rendering of Sāyaṇa's paraphrase of this verse for comparison:—

"Royal Indra and Varuna, embellish the three universal sacrifices (and make them) full (of all requisites) for this celebration: thou hast gone to the rite, for I have beheld in my mind, at this solemnity, the Gandharvas with hair (waving) in the mind."

According to the Scholiast, Gandharvas are the guardian of the Soma, i.e. Soma-Rakşakān.

Griffith translates it :-

"Three seats ye Sovarans, in the holy synod, many, yes, all ye honour with your presence.

There saw I, going thither in the spirit, Gandharvas in their course with wind blown tresses."

He explains the three seats as heaven, the firmament or mid air, and earth. Griffith agrees with Dayānanda in accepting Gandharvas to mean guardians. They are, according to him, 'sun beams'.

Professor Wilson remarks, "This stanza is singularly obscure and is very imperfectly explained by the commentators."

Shri Dayananda quotes this verse in the Satyartha Prakasa also where he explains it a bit differently.

- (3) ''यत् बहा चे क्षुत्रं चे सुम्यञ्चा चरंतः सृह । तं लोकं पृथ्यं यहीपं यत्रे देवाः सहागिनता ॥'' (YV. XX.25)

EXPLANATION

In these verses duties of the ruler are ordained. As the bright (Rājānā) Sun and the Moon illuminate all corporeal objects, so the just and enlightened deeds of the sun-like and the moon-like virtues adorn (Bhūṣathaḥ) the three assemblies (Trini Sadānsi). People derive, from these assemblies, many pleasures and joys, e.g., victory in the war (Vidathe). By these State Assemblies men adorn all the things and all living beings of the world and thus obtain happiness. That is to say, one of them is the Rajarya Sabhā, where only the administrative and executive (business) is transacted. The second is the Arya Vidya Sabhā, working for the advancement of education and learning. The third is the Arya Dharma Sabha whose function is to propagate by (oral or written) precepts morality and righteousness and to (adopt measures) for prevention of unrighteousness and corruption. But all these three Assemblies in general matters should work unitedly and should (strive to) promote good conduct among the masses. Wherever the righteous and the learned (members) in these assemblies (after due deliberation) distinguish the good from the evil and encourage people to perform righteous actions and to restrain from doing what they ought not to do, there all the subjects remain always happy. It is certain that in a country where there is (absolute) monarchy, subjects are oppressed. I know (lit. have seen) it. God ordains that only there the masses enjoy all happiness, where the Government is run by the (State) Assemblies. Only that man, and none else, is eligible for (the membership of) these assemblies who has an access (Jagan-Vān) (to the right understanding of) justice, truth, various sciences (Vi jñana) and righteous conduct. It is a divine commandment and it must be obeyed, that only such persons, and none but them, should be made members of these assemblies as are 'Gandharvas' (i.e. expert in land administration and Government) and 'Vāyu Keśān' (i.e. well versed in knowing all world events by employing spies who go every where like the invisible air). These members like the rays of the sun (Kesali, i.e. solar rays) shed the light of truth and justice and are inspired by an urge to do good to all. These members must be righteous in their inner heart.

(RV. III.38.6)

O Supreme Lord! Thou art the origin of the Kṣatra, i.e. the state-crafts. Thou art the centre of the administrative power, i.e. the promulgator of the laws of government. Graciously grant us the capability of running the government so that we may be good administrators and (experts in) state-crafts. None of us may disregard Thee and be a non-believer. May we not be the victim of Thy wrath so that we may be efficient to run the administration rightly in Thy creation. (YV. XX.1)

Here the word "Brahma" means God, Veda and God-knowing, i e. Brāhmana. The Ksatra indicates persons possessing qualities of valour and fortitude. That country where Brahma and Ksatra move together in coordination possessing adequate knowledge is to be regarded as sacred and it inspires the people there to perform the $Yaj\tilde{n}as$. Subjects are happy in that country alone where the learned (worship) God and perform the sacrifices, e.g. Agnihotra. (YV. XX.2)

- (4) By the self-effulgent Savitar's (i.e. creator's) impulsion, with (two) arms of Asvins, with (two) hands of Pūṣan, with the (medicinal) herbs of the Asvins, I besprinkle Thee for splendour, for a spiritual (Brahma) lustre; by special power (Indriyeṇa) of Indra, I besprinkle Thee (O President) for strength, for prosperity and for fame." (YV. XX.3)
- (4) ''देवस्य स्वां सित्तुः प्रसृत्तुःश्विनीबृहिश्यी पूष्णो हस्तांश्याम् । अश्विनोभेषेण्येन तेत्रेसे ब्रह्मवर्चसायाभि विञ्चामि । इन्द्रंस्येन्द्रियेणु बलाय श्वियं यशेसुःशि विञ्चामि ॥" (YV. XX.3)

The literal translation of the verse needs some explanation. This verse is addressed to the president of the state or state assemblies. When a king or president of a state assumes powers, he is to undergo some sacred ceremonies. One of them is "Abhişcka" (i.e. besprinkling with sacred waters). This verse refers to it.

Dayananda explains some of the technical words:

(a) Savituli : Of God, the Creator.

(b) Asvins: The sun and the moon. Their two arms being the strength and power.

But it would be better if we take them as progress (Sun) and peace (Moon).

- (c) Pūṣṇoḥ Hastābhyam: With two hands of Pūṣan, i.e., with the possession and gift of the nourishing Prāṇas.
- (d) Asvinola Bhaisajyena: With the mass of medicines of the earth and the upper regions.

According to ritualistic school, which is adopted by Mahīdhara and others, these verses are recited in Sautramani. An $\overline{A}sand\overline{\imath}$, or Sacrificer's seat representing a throne, is placed between the two altars, two of the

(5) "Thou art "Ka" (i.e. All Bliss). "Noblest Ka" art Thou. Thee for (eternal) bliss; Thee for (state) pleasures.

O Fair-famed! O Rightly Auspicious!! O Real King!!!"

(YV. XX.4)

(6) "My head be glory, my face be fame, my hair and beard be brilliant lustre, my breath be king and deathlessness, my eye Sole Lord, (and) mine ear Virat." (YV. XX.5)

EXPLANATION

O President of the Assembly! under the ordinance (Prasave) of the Self-effulgent Creator of the universe, thou art endowed with the two arms of the Asvins, i.e., strength and vigour being the arms of Asvins, i.e. the Sun and the Moon; with the hands of Puşan, i.e. with the possessions and gifts of nourishing Pranas and with the disease-averting herbs produced by the earth and the upper regions (co-operatively). I besprinkle thy head with perfumed waters (so that thou mayest) shine with virtues, e.g. Justice and thou mayest propagate high learning. I appoint thee for performing the King's duties with the help of the highest power of the Almighty (and thou mayest attain) the excellent strength, supreme knowledge, glorified universal empire, and the fair fame. It is a precept from God. (YV. XX.3)

O Supreme Soul! Thou art all bliss, make us also happy, granting us (the boon of) the good government. Thou art the noblest bliss (Katama); legs being on the Southern and two on the Northern ground. A black antelope's skin is placed over it on which the sacrificer sits and recites the verse (YV. XX.1) translated above.

Then the Adhvaryu besprinkles the Sacrificer with the remains of the libations which are made to run down to his mouth. This is done by the reciting of this verse.

(5) ''कोंऽसि कत्नुमोऽसि कंस्मै त्वा कार्य त्वा । सुश्लोक सुमेङ्गल सत्यंराजन् ॥" (YV. XX.4)

Here the word "Ka" also means Prajāpati, i.e. the Lord of Creatures. Cf. YV. VII.29.

(6) ''शिरों मे श्रीयंशो मुखं त्विषु: केश्रीश्च श्मर्श्रूणि । राजां मे प्राणो अमृतंण्यसुन्नाट् चर्श्वविराट् श्रीर्थम् ॥'' (YV. XX.5) render us also supremely joyous by (granting us parliamentary government). We approach Thy shelter for eternal bliss. We invoke Thee to bestow upon us benign administration.

O Fair-famed, i.e. O Eternally Glorious! O All Bliss and Bestower of happiness!! O Real King, i.e. Revealer of Truth!!! Thou art the bestower of real government. O Lord! we recognise Thee alone, the Paramount King of our state and assemblies. (YV. XX.4)

The President of the state assemblies (or Parliaments) should admit that the royal glory is like his head; the noblest fame like his mouth; the glory of truth and justice is like his hair and beard; God and vital airs, the cause of life, like his king; the salvation bliss, the Veda, like his Sole Lord; and universal empire, and the display in various ways of qualities, e.g. truth and learning, like his eyes and ears.

The members should also share this view. Let all people understand that they are the limbs of the President because of their being members of the state assemblies. (YV. XX.5)

- (7) "Let my (two) arms be Indra's power, my hands be deed of valour. Let my soul and breast be kindly and mighty."

 (YV. XX.7)
- (8) "My ribs be the kingdom; my belly, shoulders, neck and hips; thighs, elbows, knees are the people; my members (lit. limbs) all round." (YV. XX.8)

EXPLANATION

The best strength is like my two arms. A pure and learned mind and other organs, e.g. ears, are like (means of acquisition) my hands. The noblest exploits of heroism are my deeds and the kingly power is like my heart and soul.

(YV. XX.7)

The kingdom is like my ribs. The armed forces and the treasury are like my belly and shoulders. The people's adoration and happiness and also (the act of) infusing (the idea of) self-reliance in them are like my buttocks. To make the people efficient in trade and commerce and also in the science of mathematics is like my thighs. The willing co-operation between the people and the legislative assemblies is like my knees. In this manner all the above stated acts are like my limbs. As a man has love for his organs and a deep interest in protecting them, so should all find wisdom in the protection of the people.

^{(7) &#}x27;'बाहू में बर्लमिन्द्रिय¹⁰हस्ती में कमें वीर्यंम् । आत्मा क्षत्रमुरो मर्म ॥'' (YV. XX.7)

- (9) "I take my stand on princely power and kingship. I reside in horses and cows. I live in limbs, the body and vital Breath. I stay on welfare, on upper regions and earth and I recline on sacrifice." (YV. XX.10)
- (10) "Indra, the rescuer; Indra, the helper; the Brave who is rightly invoked in every battle (or who listens to every invocation). I call Indra the Almighty who is invoked by all. May the Bounteous Indra bless us with prosperity."

(YV. XX.50)

EXPLANATION

(God declares) :-

I live in the kingdom waich is administered righteously and in the country which is awakened, due to the widespread literacy and morality. (I reside every where including) all horses and all cows and also in every corner (Pratyangesu) of the universe. In every soul, in every breath, in every glorious object is my dwelling. Every (part of) earth, every corner of the bright firmament and every sacrifice are my living place. I am Omnipresent.

Those who carry on duties of government regarding Me as their Supreme Lord, achieve always triumph and progressive prosperity. All Government officials, therefore, should strive to enlighten the people with knowledge and justice and should protect them so that injustice and ignorance may be uprooted.

(YV. XX.10)

I beseech for the accomplishment of victory in every battle (and have) the shelter of Indra (God), the rescuer of the entire universe

- (9) ''प्रति क्षेत्रे प्रति तिष्ठामि राष्ट्रे प्रत्यश्चेषु प्रति तिष्ठामि गोर्षु । प्रत्यक्षेषु प्रति तिष्ठाम्यात्मन् प्रति प्राणेषु प्रति तिष्ठामि पुष्टे प्रति वार्षापृथिकोः प्रति तिष्ठामि युत्ते ॥'' (YV. XX.10)
- (10) "तातार मिन्द्रमितितार मिन्द्र ए हवेहवे सुहव एशूर मिन्द्रम् । ह्यामि शुक्रं पुरुहतमिन्द्र एस्व्सित नी मधवा धाहिबन्द्रः ॥" (YV. XX.50)

(Trataram), the most glorious (Indram), the (mysteriously) noble fighter (Suhavam), the bravest (Suram), the king of the universe, the mightiest and the bestower of might (Sakram), the rightly invoked by all heroes and governing this kingdom (i.e. universe) with justice. May the Bounteous and Almighty Lord grant victory and happiness in all our acts of Government.

(YV. XX.50)

- (11) "O Devas! (i.e. the learned) admire him who is without a rival, for mighty domination, for lordship, for democratic sovereignty and for the Godly glory, him, son of such-aman and such-a-woman and belonging to such a nation. This is your Ruler, O people! Soma (i.e. God) is the Lord of us, the Brāhmaņas." (YV. IX.40)
- (11) "इमं देवा असपुत्न¹⁹ सुंबध्वं महते क्ष्यायं महते ज्येष्ठ्याय महते जानराज्या-येन्द्रस्येन्द्रियायं । इमममुक्ष्यं पुत्रमुख्यं पुत्रनुस्यं विशरपुष बेरिक्मी राजाः सोमोऽस्माकं बाहमुणानुष्ण राजां ।" (YV. XX.40)

According to Dayananda the word Devas here means 'the learned members of the State Assemblies'. The elected president is the head of the State and he works according to the advice of the legislatures. After his election, the President Designate has to go through some ritual ceremonies. The words, e.g. "Abhiṣincāmi", clearly prove this. This verse refers to the ceremony when the spiritual leader of the State performs his "Abhiṣeka."

He pronounces the name of the President Designate, such-a-man etc.; he declares the names of the parents and also of the people, e.g. of Kurus or $P\bar{a}\bar{n}calas$ or Bharatas as the case may be, these names are to be substituted at the proper places in the context when it is repeated during the performance of the ceremony.

Here the word $Jana-R\bar{a}jya$ means "the Government of the people, by the people, for the people."

According to orthodox school, the Books IX and X of the Yajurveda contain the formulae required for the performance of these two important modifications of the Soma Sacrifice, the Vājapeya (i.e. Draught

Contd.)

(12) "Indra! (i.e. the President) be victor, never to be vanquished to reign among the rulers as sovereign ruler. Be here repeatedly praised (by us), to be revered and waited upon and worshipped (by us),"

(AV. VI.98.1)

(13) "Thou, fain for fame, an overlord ruler, hast won dominior over man, O Indra!

Thou art the supreme ruler of these virtuous (Daivih) people undecaying and long lasting be thy sway." (AV. VI.98.2)

EXPLANATION

O learned members of the Assemblies (Devas)! perform with dignity the glorious duties of government in your sovereign state which is 'Asapatna' (i.e. free from enemies) and Niskanţaka (i.e. without internal black-sheeps) with the object of making its government machines, making the highes knowledge as the basis of entire administrative working, establishing sovereign authority among the learned, shedding the light of justice and of strength or cup of victory) and the $R\bar{a}jas\bar{u}ya$ (i.e. the inauguration of consecration of a king).

For Vājapeya, see 'Sacred Books of the East', X. 41, pp. 1-40; Hillebrandt, 'Ritual Literature', pp. 141-143; and also Weber.

In these verses (also) the word Indra, according to our author, mean 'the President of the Parliament or the Head of the State'. Indra may mean 'God' also. Sayana and his followers say that Indra is a particular god.

The word 'Śravasyu' is a desiderative form, i.e. one who desires for Śrava (or glory). Similarly we get other words in the Rgveda, e.g. Avasyu Fame or glory is called Śrava because people like to hear it. Dayānandz interprets it as 'Sarvasya Śrotā', i.e. the king or God who listens to all.

dispelling the darkness of injustice like the solar rays and rendering the people as happy as possible.

He alone can be the Head of the State $(R\bar{a}j\bar{a})$, after his election from the members well-versed in the Vedas, who is endowed with gentle qualities (Some or Saumya Guṇas) and is at home in all the sciences. O members! promulgate this divine ordinance among the common folk that such a member as well as the laws enacted by the administrative assemblies $(R\bar{a}ja\ Sabhas)$ is the king, yours as well as ours.

We, therefore, anoint this elected President of the State as well as that of the Assembly—such and such person, the son of such and such well known father and mother.

(YV. IX.40)

May Indra, i.e. God of Parliamentary process (of running the government), attain victory and prosperity and may Indra never be vanquished. May the King of kings, the Lord of the universe, be approachable by us with His truth, justice and lustre, whether we may happen to reside in a sovereign empire or in smaller dominions. May we in this world repeatedly worship the Absolute Lord of the universe alone who is always fit to be adored (Idya), saluted (Vandya), invoked (Pūjanīya) and relied upon and adhered to by us. May we, O Lord of the Emperors! (be able) to honour Thee in the best possible manner in our kingdom (so that, by honouring Thee we shall always be honoured in our sovereign empire.

(AV. VI.98.1)

O Indra! Supreme Lord! Thou art Paramount Ruler of this entire universe. Thou art like the ears (of the world) and heart of all and make me also graciously such (i.e. a listener).* O God! Thou art eternally existent and wealth of the (devoted) people (Jananam Abhibhati). Thou art the bestower of the desired prosperity. Be gracious and make me likewise. O Lord of the universe! Thou protectest by Thy truth and justice all the people, who are endowed with radiant virtues and protected by various good governments; may I be protected in the same way. O King of the kings! This universal kingdom of Thine is eternal, well administered and perpetual. May it be ours as a gift from Thee. God, prayed in this manner, gives His blessings: "Let this kingdom, styled as earth, which has been created by Me, be yours.

^{*} The word 'Śravasyu' has been explained by our author as ''श्रव इव श्राचरतीति'', i.e. serving the purpose of ears,

- (16) "In this strong hero, be ye glad, joyful; cling to him even as you cling to Indra, the conqueror, kine-winner, thunder-wielder, who quells a host and with his might destroys it."

 (AV. VI.97.3)
- (17) "Protect my company (or the assembly), protecting its courteous members, O Courteous God!

Only through Thee, O Much Invoked (Lord), may I be rich in kine."

(AV. XIX.55.6)

EXPLANATION

The purport of the verse (RV. I.33.2) has been given above under the topic of 'Worship and Prayer'.

Let the State Parliament and the people recognise God, as the Ruler of the Rulers and the President of the Parliament as their King after anointing him, and let them fight under his directions (Samitih). The army (Senā) of the noble warriors should acknowledge God and the State Parliament with its President as their supreme commanders and let them fight under their orders.

(AV. XV.9.2)

God ordains to all men :-

foes, skilled in war, dauntless and splendid like Indra. Declare war (Anu Sam Rabhadhvam) to quell the wicked enemees at the instance of him (i.e. the Head of State) who quelled the host of foes (Grama-Jitam) already, the winner of lands and senses (Go-Jitam), whose vital strength is his arm (Vajra-Prana), who is victorious (Jayantam) and who is the destroyer of his foes with his mighty prowess. Clinging to him may we attain victory.

(AV. V1.97.5)

O Lord! Thou art a good help in Assemblies; protect properly my assembly. The word 'Me' (i.e. mine) which is (a derivative form of) 'Asmat' refers to all men. May the members, who attend (lit sit in) the assembly and who are expert in parliamentary business, protect our abovementioned threefold assemblies, O Universally Invoked Lord! Only those presidents and members of the assemblies who learn the art of government from Thee enjoy happiness. May I and entire mankind duly guarded and protected by the State Assemblies attain a happy life of (at least) hundred years.

(AV. XIX.55.6)

So far we have briefly dealt with the duties of the government as laid down in the Vedas; now we shall give a summary of the same according to the Aitareya and the Satapatha Brāhmaṇas, which is as follows:—

The learned and the righteous members of the State Assemblies should be gentle and strive to provide all comforts to the nohle natured subjects and they should adopt a stern attitude to the wicked. A duty of the administrative head has, thus, twofold aspects, i.e. one is 'Sahasvat' (i.e. tolerant and mild) and the other 'Ugravat' (i.e. harsh and horrible). That is to say: sometimes, due to exigencies of place, time and (the particular) purpose or object, toleration becomes unavoidable and at others, under different circumstances a severe punishment has to be inflicted upon the wicked people. These are the essentials of a Ruler's functions. They are Mandra (i.e. mild) as well as Ojistha (i.e. unbearable). It must provide happiness to the doers of noble deeds and inflict (stern) punishment on the evil doers. It must have an army also of the noble and valiant warriors and various equipments. (AB. VIII.2.3.1)*

The act of administration or the duty of a government is superior to all other actions. It is Prstha (i.e. backbone), i.e. being a mainstay of the weak, it procures best comforts for them. By adhering to these duties, described above, people can improve the administration of a State but not otherwise. Therefore, the state-crafts (Ksatra) are the most important of all. It provides pleasures to the Sacrificer, officers and people in general, like their ownself (Atmavat). A good government is a source of absolute happiness and peace to the whole world. Therefore the art of government is greater than anything else. (AB. VIII.2.3.2)

^{*} जिन्छा उप्रः सहसे तुरायेति सूक्तमुग्रवत् सहस्वत् तत् क्षत्रस्य रूपं, मन्द्र ओजिन्छ इत्योजस्वत् तत् क्षत्रस्य रूपम् ॥"(१) (AB. VIII.2.3.1)

Here the word Brahma refers to the Brahmana Varna, endowed with all learning. The (right) performance of administrative duties depends upon it. The progress and preservation of (good) government (Kṣatra) are impossible without true knowledge. (Similarly) Brahma, i.e. true knowledge, is established in Kṣatra, i.e. heroism. The learning cannot prosper and be preserved without the (help of a) Kṣatriya. Therefore, knowledge and political power move together and bring prosperity and progress to the country.

(AB. VIII.2.3.3)

The officers of government should always keep their strong and indomitable senses under proper care, i.e., the officers must have control over their senses; because it has been stated that moral strength (Ojas) is Ksatra (i.e. princely power) and physical strength is $R\bar{a}janya$ (i.e. kingship). Therefore, a man promotes (the dignity of) a government on account of his Ojas, i.e. Ksatra, and $V\bar{\imath}rya$, i.e. Rajanya. He adds to the prosperity and happiness of the State (in this way). It is called $Bh\bar{a}radvaja$, i.e., an encourageable action which is Vrhat or $Mahat\ Karma$ (i.e. the greatest of all acts). $(AB.\ VIII.2.3.4)^{}$

Let all men aspire for this and put in all possible human efforts. May with all my accomplishments and merits and by God's grace I rise (to the occasion) as to enjoy all prosperities and to become the member of the assembly (Atistha) where the highly learned sit, for the attainment of the position of the President (Anu-Rajya) or for obtaining sovereign power over lesser kings or for exercising power of the ruler of the world-wide empire (Samrajya) or for ruling over and protecting the kingdom in accordance with law and justice, for getting the noblest enjoyments (Bhaujya), for achieving the self-government (Svarajya), for brightly shining among various kings (Vairajya), for establishing the paramount power (Parameşthya), for enjoying the pleasures of great empire (Maharajya), for wielding supreme overlordship (Adhipaiya) and for bringing the subjects under control (Sva-Vasyaya). (AB. VIII.2.3.5)*

Having made thrice or four times obeisance to Supreme Lord, the government work should be commenced. The Kṣatra (i.e. political power) which functions under divine control prospers, grows rich and abounds with heroes. God ordains that brave men are born in such a state and nowhere else.

(AB. VIII.6.9)‡

All members of the assemblies and the subjects should always remain in contact with (i.e. devoted to) God, the most desired Lord and the most Adorable Master. Let all of them sit together and deliberate in such a manner as to avert for ever loss of happiness and defeat. Let all of them desire to anoint such a person from among the Devas (i.e. the learned) as is Ojiṣṭha (i.e. full of prowess) and Baliṣṭha (i.e. full of highest strength). He should possess extreme forbearance (Sahita); he should be the noblest because of all virtues, the ablest for taking all safely through all sufferings, e.g. war etc., the best among the victorious, and the noblest of all.

Let all the people also declare, "let it be so." The consecration of such a person (as Head of the State) brings prosperity to all. Hence they have named him as Indra (i.e. the bringer of prosperity)." (AB. VIII.12.7)?

We consecrate as our ruler and ruler of the world this noblest man who deserves to be the ruler of a world-wide empire $(S\bar{a}mar\bar{a}jya)$, worthy of protecting and achieving the best enjoyments (Bh)jam and Bhojapitaram, shining with good knowledge and other merits $(Sva-R\bar{a}jam)$, in statesmanship, able to protect self-governing state $(Sva-R\bar{a}jyam)$, the light-giver of various kings, the winner of various kingdoms, radiant with noble glory (Rajānam), the guardian of the kings (Rājā-Pitaram), deserving to be appointed as the ruler of a highly developed state (Parameṣthinam), and the elected head of the state.

The political power of the person who has thus been consecrated brings happiness to all.

Here in (the verb) 'Ajani' the Lun (i.e. past tense) is used in the sense of (Lat) present tense according to the following (aphorism of Panini):—

All kinds of past tense denote all tenses in the Vedas. (P. III.4.6)*

The Kṣatriyas, i.e. heroic persons, are born (in such a kingdom). He (i.e. a heroic person) deserves to be the lord of all living beings in the universe. He is the destroyer of the wicked people (Viṣām-Attā), bringing ruin to the cities of enemies (Purām Bhettā), the killer of the Asuras (i.e. the evil people), the saviour of the Vedas (Brahmano Goptā) and the defender of the faith.

The functions of the government should be performed by the President as well as by others. Their (common) desired object should be (the attainment of) God. No other object should be desired by anybody. Let all men be worshippers of God."

When a man, desirous of ruling (over a state), is consecrated and elected as Head of the State in the above-mentioned manner which leads him to all glories, he attains the status of a king and wins all battles. He is victorious everywhere and procures all good states (lit. worlds). He achieves the noblest rank and receives the highest respect from all quarters as mentioned above among the rulers. He attains the highest state which results from the delight of victory over his foes and from running down his enemies. With the help of the State Assemblies he attains Samrajya (i.e. world-wide empire), Bhauj va (i.e. all enjoyments), Svārājya (i.e. selfgoverning state), Vairajya (i.e. sovereignty over various kings), Parameşthya (i.e. the supreme rank), Maharajya (i.e. possession of great empire) and Adhipatya (i.e. sovereignty and overlordship). All these terms were explained above. Such a man, having won the world-wide international sovereign power and becoming the king of all kings in this world, attains after leaving this body the world of all bliss, i.e. Supreme Brahma, where he becomes free and independent, self-illuminated (Sva-Rat), enjoys the bliss of Salvation, realises all his desires, is free from old age and death (Apta-Amrta), and becomes (the meeting place) of all supreme glories and prosperities (Parama-Indratva). It should be borne in mind that no calamity can befall a country where the members of the state assemblies consecrate a Kşatriya, who is endowed with all the noblest virtues and who has first taken the vow of all the above-stated glories, and elect him (as the Head of the State). (AB. VIII.19)*

Kṣatra, i.e. the proper protection of people through the democratic (method) of government, is called Sviṣṭa Kṛta, i.e. it brings desired happiness. Kṣatra (i.e. a government), putting an end to the evil-doers, is verily Sāma, i.e. makes (the people contented) by using peaceful devices. This Sāma is verily Sāmrāj ya, i.e. the best government. (SB. XII.8.2)§

Brahma, i.e. God and the Veda, and he alone who knows Brahma is a Brāhmaṇa. He alone deserves to be called $R\bar{a}janya$, i.e. a Kṣatriya, who has subdued his senses, is learned, is endowed with all virtues, e.g. bravery, possesses high heroism and undertakes the responsibilities of the administrator. The country where Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas co-operate and co-ordinate in running the government attains in every respect $Sr\bar{i}$, i.e. royal glory and prosperity, more and more. This $Sr\bar{i}$ never decays or runs short. The power of a ruler lies in war.

The highest prosperity and happiness cannot be secured without this because according to the Nighantu (II.17) Sangrāma is a synonym of 'great wealth'. Sangrāma, i.e. war is called Mahā-Dhana, i.e. great wealth, because it is a source of the highest riches. High dignity and great wealth are never procured without war.

(SB. XIII.1.5)†

Rāṣṭra, i.e. the protection of nations or country-men, is called a Yajña entitled as Aśvamedha. It is not the killing of a horse and throwing its limbs into the fire.

(SB. XIII.1.6);

When a Rājanya, endowed with the above-mentioned virtues, attains dignity and valour, he becomes fit to govern the world-wide empire. Therefore a Rājanya or Kṣatriya should be brave, ready to fight, dauntless and skilled in the use of weapons and missiles. His warriors must be able to destroy the enemies with their big cars running on water, land or in the air. A country, in which a Rājanya, i.e. ruler, of this type is born, never falls a victim to calamity and panic.

(SB. XIII.1.9)*

Srī (i.e. the statesmanship) based on high knowledge and noble merits is verily a Rāstra (i.e. empire). The glory of the government is dignity (Sambhāra) of the empire. Srī is also the centre of activity in a country. Kṣema, i.e. the proper protection of the people, is Śītaṃ, i.e. the safest happiness like the sleep. Viţ, i.e. subjects, are called Gabha (i.e. rays). Rāṣṭra, i.e. government, is called Paṣa (i.e. a rod). The functions of government annoy the subjects; because government collects taxes and procures other good things from the people. A country which is governed by a monarch and has no parliamentary system (of government) remains always oppressed. Therefore one man's rule should not be adopted. A monarch is too weak to properly perform the duties of government. Therefore the administration of government should be vested in Parliament. Where there is absolute monarchy, the people there become the food, as it were, of the ruler and he wants to devour them and they remain oppressed. The absolute monarch (in a way) eats poison as he, for his selfish motive and pleasure, captures their precious possessions and oppresses them. As a meat-eater having seen a bulky animal desires to kill it, so does a monarch become jealous and cannot tolerate the prosperity of an outshining individual among his subjects.

Hence the benefit of the people lies in a parliamentary system of government. There are many mantras in the Vedas dealing with the duties of government.

(A Brief Reference)

The stanza "Brahmaņo Asya Mukham Āsit" (i.e. the Brāhmaṇa was His mouth) etc. (YV. XXXI) dealing with the (four) Varṇas has been explained already (in the Chapter on Cosmogony). The following is an additional (amplification).

According to (the following citation) from the Nirukta,

(1) "Varna is (derived) from the $\sqrt{V_r}$ (to choose)." (N. II.3)

EXPLANATION

The word Varna means 'one to be chosen' or "worthy of selection" or "that which is selected and accepted with due regard to one's qualities and actions".

(2) "Brāhmaṇa is (so called because he knows) Brahma." "Kṣatra is Indra. Kṣatra is king." (SB. V.1.1)

EXPLANATION

That is to say that a Brāhmaṇa is a person who is endowed with Brahma (i.e. the Vedic Lord or devotion to the Supreme Lord) and possesses noble qualities and (high) learning. Similarly the words Kṣatra and Kṣatriya Kula are (applicable to) one who is highly glorious (Indra), ready to fight and to destroy enemies and devoted to protection of the subjects.

(3) "Two arms are Mitra and Varuna. Puruşa is Garta. Strength

^{(1) &}quot;वर्ण: वृणोते:"। (N. II.3)

^{(2) &#}x27;'ब्रह्म हि बाह्मणः । क्षत्र हीन्द्रः क्षत्र ए राजन्यः ॥'' (SB. V.1.1)

^{(3) &}quot;बाहू वै मित्रावरणौ । पुरुषो गर्ताः । वीर्यं वा एतद्वाजन्यस्य यद् बाहू । वीर्यं वा एतद्वा²⁹ रसः ॥" (SB. V.4.3) of a Rajanya is his two arms; the Rasa (i.e. happiness) of Apas (i.e. Pranas) is also his strength." (SB. V.4.3)

(4) "Arrows are illuminators."

(SB V.4.4)

EXPLANATION

(Kṣatriya is) Mitra and Varuna, because he gives happiness to all and also because he possesses excellent qualities. These two (qualities) are like the arms of a Kṣatriya. Or Vīrya, i.e. prowess, and Bala, i.e. physical valour, — these two are the arms of a prince or Kṣatriya. The strength of a king (Kṣatriya) grows on by conferring the pleasure and delight of Pranas on the people. The arrows (Iṣavas) are his illuminating (rays). The word Iṣu (i.e. arrows) is symbolic for all weapons and missiles.

Asramas (i.e. stages of life) are fourfold, viz.: (1) Brahmacarva. (2) Grhastha, (3) Vanaprastha and (4) Samnyasa. During the stage of Brahmacarya (i.e. life of celibacy and studentship), one should acquire the true knowledge and training. During (the period of) a householder (Grhastha), one should develop all best (possible) conducts and noble qualities. A forest-dweller (Vanaprastha) leads a life of solitude (for the attainment of) communion with God and realisation of purpose of knowledge. A Samnyāsin, having renounced the world, strives to attain the highest bliss of final emancipation and communion with the Supreme Soul. In this way (described above) through these four stages of life, a man attains the four ends of human existence, i.e. Dharma (i.e. righteousness), Artha (i.e. riches), Kama (i.e. accomplishment of desires) and Moksa (i.e. final emancipation). Out of these (four stages of life), during Brahmacarya all noble virtues, including real knowledge and good training, should be acquired. The following evidence refers to (the life of a) Brahmacarin:

(5) "Acarya (the preceptor) welcoming (or initiating) his new disciple takes the Brahmacarin into his bowels. He holds

- (7) "The Brahmacarin, born earlier than a Brahmana, rose up with penance and attired in energy. From him are born a

(Contd. from page 306)

The entire hymn (AV. XI.5) is a glorification of a Brahmacārin. His greatness is figuratively described here and also in the subsequent verses. Here the word $\overline{A}c\overline{a}rya$ means a preceptor or Guru. The preceptor performs for the disciple the part of a spiritual (second) mother and by the initiation (Upanayana) ceremony the young lad is regarded as regenerated or born anew. The Aśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra (I.20.2) and other Sūtras also refer to it.

- Cf. (a) ''मातुरग्रेऽधिजननं द्वितीयं मौज्जिबन्धने ।
 तत्र तद् ब्रह्मजन्मास्य मौज्जिबन्धनचिह्नितम् ।
 तक्षास्य माता साथिबी पिता त्वाचार्य उच्यते ॥ (Manu. II.169-170)
 - (b) स हि विद्यातस्तं जनयति तच्छ्रेष्ठं जन्म । शरीरमेव माता पितरौ जनयतः ।। (Āpasta. I.I.15,17)
- (6) ''ड्र्यं सुनित्र्धृष्युवी द्यौद्धितीयोतान्तरिक्षं सुनिधा पृणाति । बुद्धाचारी सुनिधा मेखेलया धर्मण लोकान् तपंता पिर्णात ॥'' (AV. X1.5.4)

Here the word Samit means a log of sacrificial fuel. A Brahmacārin places it on sacrificial fire. The greatness and dignity of a Brahmacārin are not limited to any particular region but he conquers the whole universe with his labour and penance.

(7) ''पूर्वें। जातो ब्रह्मणो ब्रह्मचारी धुमें वसानुस्तपुसोदितिष्ठत् ।

(AV. XI.5.5) (Contd.)

Brāhmaṇa, the highest Vedic Lore and all Devas—accompanied by immortality."

(AV. XI.5.5)

EXPLANATION

The Acarya or preceptor, i.e. the imparter of knowledge and learning, having initiated a Brahmacarin invests him with a sacred thread (Yajñopa-vita). He instructs him (the necessity of) firmness in his vow or undertaking and bears him, as if it were, in his womb (like a mother) for three days and three nights. This is to say that he gives all (essential) instructions and explains to him the (proper) procedure of study. When he attains all learnings and becomes a scholar, he is regarded as born of knowledge. The glorious ones (i.e. Devas—the learned) convene to see him. They joyfully honour and eulogise him by saying, "Due to our good fortune and the favour of the Supreme Lord, you have become learned amongst us for the benefit of entire humanity."

(AV. XI.5.3)

With the fuel for Agnihotra, the Brahmacarin fills the earth and the shining up-regions, i.e. he renders all beings living in these regions, happy with his learning and sacrifices. He fills with joy all living beings by penance as well as righteous conduct, teaching and propagating and also by adopting the symbols of celibate life, e.g., the Agnihotra and the girdle.

(AV. XI.5.4)

The word Brahmacārin is derived from the root 'Car' (to move) by adding the (noun) Brahma. Thus it means one, whose nature is to move (as if it were) in the (study of) the Vedic lore. 'He is robed in energy' means that he performs the severest penance. He is Brāhmaṇa because he knows the Vedas and God. He is the first (Pūrva), i.e., his Āśrama being the first (in graded order) is an (additional) glory to other Āśramas. He excels all by his virtuous (Dharma) conduct and remains firm. The learned (Devas) eulogise him, who is Brahma-Jyeṣṭḥa, i.e. who surpasses all by his knowledge and learning and who regards God as the greatest of all, is endowed with the supreme bliss, because of his knowledge of God and final salvation and has become a well-known (Jātam) scholar of the Vedas.

(AV. XI.5.5)

Here the word Brahma in the first half of the verse may mean a Brahmana. Brahmanan is the cause of attainment of Brahmanahood.

- (8) "Lighted by Samit (i.e. knowledge), goes the Brahmacārir clad in antelope-skin, consecrate, long-bearded. He goe swiftly from east to northern ocean, grasping the worlds frequently bringing them near him."

 (AV. XI.5.6)
- (9) "The Brahmacārin revealing Brahma, Āpas, the world, Prajā pati, Virāj and Parameṣṭhin and living as a germ in the wom of the Immortal, has become Indra and destroys the wicker (Asuras)." (AV. XI.5.7
- (10) "By self-restraint (Brahmacarya) and by penance, the king protects the realm—he rules. By self-restraint, the Ācārya seeks a Brahmacārin (to instruct)." (AV. XI.5.17
- (8) ''ब्रुह्मचार्यित सुमिछा सिमेद्धः काब्ली वसानी दीश्वितो दीर्घदमेश्वः । स मृद्य एंति पूर्वस्माद्धर्तरं समुद्रं लोकान् संगृभ्य मुहुराचरित्रत् ॥" (AV. XI.5.6)
- (9) "ब्रह्मचारी जनयुन् ब्रह्मापी लोकं प्रजापित परमेष्ठिनं विराजम् । गभी भूत्वामृतस्य योनाविन्हीं ह भूत्वाऽक्षरास्ततर्ह ॥" (AV. XI.5.7)

Here the word 'Janayan' expresses the idea of 'generating'. But it stands for 'revealing', i.e., explaining to the citizens of the world the greatness of the Supreme Being. It is a figurative expression. The other technical words occurring in the verse, i.e., $\overline{A}pas$ and Viraj, have been explained by our author in his explanation. Brahmacārin explains all these things to mankind. He by virtue of his penance and other qualities attains the title of Indra.

(10) "ब्रह्मचर्येण तपसा राजा राष्ट्रं वि रक्षति । आचार्यो ब्रह्मचर्येण ब्रह्मचारिणमिच्छते ॥" (AV. XI.5.17)

Brahmacarya, i.e. self-restraint, means a religious study in general and specially the self-restraint and purity enjoined upon all religious students and regarded as permanent and pre-eminent virtue.

(Contd.)

- (11) "By self-restraint (Brahmacarya), a maiden finds a youth to be her husband. By self-restraint the ox and horse seek to win fodder for themselves." (AV. XI.5.18)
- (12) "By penance and by self-restraint (Brahmacarya) the Devas drive away death from them; and by self-restraint (Brahmacarya) Indra brings radiance to the Devas." (AV. XI.5.19)

EXPLANATION

The Brahmacārin radiant with the above-mentioned knowledge (Samit), attired in black buck-skin, &c., wearing hair and beard for a long

The Taittareya Brāhmaṇa (III. 10.11.3) tells a tale which describes the great virtue ascribed to Brahmacarya:—

Bhāradvāja practised Brahmacarya during three lives. Indra, approaching him, when he was lying decayed and old, said: "Bhāradvāja, if I give thee a fourth life, what wilt thou do with it?" He answered, "I will use it only to practise Brahmacarya." (Muir)

- (11) "बुद्धचर्चेण कृत्या बेयुवानं विन्दते पर्तिम् । अनुद्वान बेद्धचर्येणाश्वो घासं जिगीवति ॥" (AV. XI.5.18)
- (12) ''बृह्मचर्येण तपसा देवा मृत्युमुर्पाच्नत ॥ इन्द्रों ह ब्रह्मचर्येण देवेश्यः स्वरां भेरत् ॥" (AV. XI.5.19)

According to Dayananda the word 'Indra' here means the Sun and the word Devas means senses, i.e., senses get light from the Sun.

The following note deserves mention here !-

"The hymn has been translated by Ludwig (Der Rig Veda, III, p. 452) and in part, by Muir (O.S. Texts, V, p. 400). According to Professor A. Hillebrandt, the Vedic poet's fancy has represented the mutual relations of the Sun and the Moon in those of the Ācārya and the Brahmacārin. Especially in stanza 3 (translated above), the Ācārya is the sun who devours the dying moon and keeps him within him during three nights. See 'Vedische Mytholgie' (I, p. 47). (Griffith) time and having been initiated attains the highest bliss. He swiftly passes from the ocean of the observance of Brahmacarya to that of the house-holder's life. Grasping all the worth living regions (as if it were) he preaches law and righteousness again and again (to the people).

(AV. XI.5.6)

Brahmacarin, learning the Vedic lore, (securing the knowledge of) Apas, i.e. Praṇas, and all knowable worlds, proclaiming God, the Lord of creatures who reveals Himself in many a way, living in the womb of immortality or emancipation, i.e. dwelling constantly in knowledge, like foetus in the womb, i.e., mastering duly all sciences, enlightening (the people) like the Sun (Indra), driving away the evil-doers, the ignorant, the hypocrites, the malevolent and ill-natured as the sun expels the clouds and the night, demonstrates all the virtuous qualities and destroys all the evil qualities.

(AV. XI.5.7)

By practising penance and Brahmacarya, a king protects the kingdom, i.e. attains special ability to protect the subjects. The Acarya also, by acquiring knowledge through the observance of Brahmacarya, should seek the Brahmacarin (to instruct) and not otherwise.

(AV. XI.5.17)

The Nirukta explains the meaning of the word 'acarya':-

(13) "An \overline{A} carya (or preceptor) is so called because he formulates the character (\overline{A} cara) (\overline{A} + \sqrt{C} ar) or collects the Arthas (Dharma &c.) (\overline{A} + \sqrt{C} i "to pick up") or cultivates the understanding (\overline{A} + $\sqrt[3]{C}$ i)." (N. I.4)

Similarly by observing Brahmacarya, a maiden when attains her youth, gets a youngman to be her wedded lord of similar merits and not otherwise. She cannot wed earlier nor a dissimilar husband. The words 'ox' and 'horse' denote all mighty animals. Such animals and a horse desire to defeat their adversaries—the other animals—taking them as a straw through Brahmacarya. The purport, therefore, is that all men must practise Brahmacarya (when it is observed by the animals even).

(AV. X1.5.18)

Devas, the learned, by the power of Brahmacarya (and not otherwise) (which includes) the study of Vedic lore, knowledge of Supreme Lord,

^{(13) &#}x27;'आचार्यः कस्मात्। स्राचारं प्राह्मित आविनोत्यर्थान् आचिनोति बुद्धिमिति वा ॥'' (N. I4) penance and the observance of righteousness (Dharma) overcome (lit. destroy) all the afflictions of birth and death. As by observing Brahmacarya, i.e. by obeying the laws (prescribed by God) verily, the Sun (Indra) (is able to) illumine and provide happiness to Devas, i.e. the organs of sense, similarly none can rightly achieve learning and happiness without Brahmacarya.

Therefore, all the three (remaining) stages of human life, viz. the life of a house-holder &c., can prosper and enjoy pleasures only if they are preceded by observance of Brahmacarya. Otherwise in the absence of root, there can be no branches. The strong trunks, fruits, flowers, shade, etc., come into being only when the root is existent.

(AV. XI.5.19)

DUTIES OF A HOUSE-HOLDER

The undermentioned verses lay down (the rules of) a house-holder: -

- (1) "We expiate by sacrifice each sinful act which we have committed whether in a village or in a forest, in company or in corporeal sense. Svaha!" (YV. III.45)
- (2) "Give me, I give thee; bestow on me, and I bestow on thee.

 Present to me thy merchandise and I will offer thee mine."

(YV. III.50)

(1) ''यव् प्रामे यदरेण्ये यत्सुभायां यदिनिद्वये । यदेनश्चकुमा व्यमिदं तदवयजामहे स्वाहां ।।" (YV. 111.45)

This verse is spoken by the house-holder's wife or by her husband. The sin committed is expiated by entering into a house-holder's life. (Dayananda).

"In village": by oppression. "In the forest": by cruelty to wild animals. "In company": by contemptuous behaviour. "In corporeal sense": by abuse of the tongue or other unruly limb.

(2) "देहि में दर्बाम ते नि में घेहि नि तें दधे। निहार च हरांसि में निहार निर्देशिण ते स्वाहा ॥" (YV. III.50)

According to Mahidhara, line 1 is spoken by Indra and line 2 by the sacrificer. But according to our author God ordains to the house-holders here. This verse contains the fundamental principle underlying sacrifices "Give me, I give thee, etc.".

- (3) "Fear not, nor tremble thou, O House. To thee who havest strength, we come. I, possessing strength, intelligent and happy come to thee, House, rejoicing in my mind (i.e. spirit)."

 (YV. III.41)
- (4) "The abodes on which the wanderer thinks, where the intense delight abounds—we call the Abodes, to (welcome us). Let them know us who know them (well). (YV. III.42)
- (5) "The cows have been called to us here, the goats and sheep have been called (here); and here we call for Kilāla (a juice) of our food. I have come to thee for safety and peace. May happiness, felicity and blessings be ours." (YV. III.43)

The (above-noted) verses refer to the stage of the house-holder's life.

EXPLANATION

May all our noblest deeds which we have performed as house-holders residing in (cities or) villages, e.g. the righteous propagation of knowledge, the procreation of offsprings, (the promulgation of) noble social order and other (similar) acts, resulting in universal benefit; during the stage of a forest dweller, e.g. (realisation of God, the study of scriptures, the performance of penance, acts resulting in the benefit of society and nobility of mental and sensual acts) be for the purpose of the attainment of God and Emancipation. Whatever sin or evil act we may have committed, 'we expiate by the observance of the rules of Aframas' (i.e. four stages of life).

God ordains :-

'O man! you should speak (to one another) in the following manner: "Give me knowledge, wealth, &c., for my benefit; I shall also give thee in return. Assume for me, good nature, liberality and gentleness; I shall also have the same for thee. Have a righteous dealing in trade, i.e. sale, purchase, gifts, &c.; I also shall have the same attitude for you." The word Svāhā denotes that we should all cooperate with one another in speaking the truth, honouring the truth, acting the truth, and in listening to the truth. May all our transactions be guided by (the spirit) of truth.

(YV. III.50)

O men! desirous of entering the life of a house-holder marry according to your free option and establish homes for yourself. While performing (the duties of) a house-holder shed all fears and do not tremble. Acquire the strength and prowess and then aspire to have all (worldly) possessions. (Speak to elder house-holders) I establish my home among you and possess courage and strength with pure mind and good intellect rejoicing in spirit. (YV. III.41)

A man, (living in distant countries remembers home and its intense pleasures and comforts (enjoyed by him previously). He, therefore, invites (Upahvayāmahe) to his house all persons associated with his domestic life, e.g. the friends, relatives, the preceptors, &c., as a mark of respect to them on the occasions such as marriage, &c., so that they may stand witness to his faithful observance of the pledges taken at the time of marriage and other laws to the best of his knowledge and to the fact that he married out of free choice after attaining manhood.

(YV. III.42)

O Supreme Lord! may we possess plenty of domestic animals (cows &c) and also the land, sense-organs, knowledge, light and pleasures, in

According to ritualists the house-holder reads the Mantras (YV. III.41-43) on approaching the Daksina fire on departing from and returning to his house.

The word 'Kilāla' is read in the list of synonyms for food in the Nighantu. It is a sweet juice. According to Griffith 'Kilāla' is meath—a sweet beverage, the nature of which is uncertain, our life as house-holders by Thy grace. May the sheep and goats be favourable (Anukula) to us. The word 'Atho' means a thing in addition to the aforesaid objects, i.e. in addition to the previously stated things, may we have the sweetest juices (Kilala) of edible things. (There is a change of person here, i.e., second person for the third person). (Addressing the objects it is stated) O ye Objects! i.e. those which have been stated above, we procure you for my safety and well being. By obtaining you may we attain the joys of this world and the bliss of the next world, i.e. the perpetual happiness and well-being. The word 'Sam' is a synonym of 'Pada' according to the Nighantu. May we promote two-fold happiness referred above for the benefit of the others living in the house-holder's life. (YV. III.43)

DUTIES OF THE FOREST DWELLERS

(1) There are three branches of Duty (Dharma)—sacrifice, study of the Vedas, alms-giving—that is the first. Austerity indeed is the second. A student of sacred knowledge (Brahmacārin) dwelling in the house of a teacher, settling himself permanently in the house of teacher is the third.

All these (who attend to these duties) become possessors of meritorious worlds." (CHU. II.23)

EXPLANATION

The (following) three are the branches of the Dharma in all the stages of life, i.e. study, sacrifice (the rituals) and alms-giving. In the first stage the student of the sacred knowledge (Brahmacārin) resides with the teacher at his abode practising austerities, attaining good education and performing the Dharma (i.e. Duty). The house-holder's life is the second stage. In the third stage as a forest-dweller even at the cost of his personal discomforts, pondering always in the heart and retiring to a place of seclusion, he should determine what is reality and what is false. All these three stages of life, e.g. Brahmacarya &c., are the meritorious abodes of happiness. They are given the name of Aśrama (i.e. a sacred abode) because meritorious acts are performed in these stages.

^{(1) &}quot;त्रयो धर्मस्कन्धा यज्ञोऽध्धयनं वानिमिति । प्रथमस्तप एव । हितीयो ब्रह्मचार्याचार्यकुलवासी । तृतीयोऽत्यन्तमात्मानमाचार्यकुलेऽवसादयन् सर्व एते पुण्यलोका भवन्ति ॥" (CHU, 11.23)

DUTIES OF A SAMNYĀSIN

Having acquired knowledge and having determined (the reality of) God and Dharma in the Brahmacarya stage, having put to practice (what one has learnt) and (thus) developing one's knowledge in domestic stage, and then retiring to a lonely place in the forest and there distinguishing right conduct from the unrighteous ones and the truth from the falsehood and finalising duties of a forester, one should renounce the world and become a Samnyāsin.

There is a difference of opinion as to when a man should enter into Samnyāsa. Some maintain that "after duly finalising Brahmacarya one should become a house-holder; after going through the house-holder's life he should become a forester; and thus a forester should become a Samnyāsin." According to the dictum "one should renounce the world on that very day when he feels disquiet about the world", one may enter the life of a Samnyāsin, (direct from) the house-holder's stage without becoming first a forest-dweller. The third view is that one may become a Samnyāsin (direct from) the stage of Brahmacarya, i.e. having duly finalised Brahmacarya stage one can enter the the stage of a Samnyāsin direct without going through the house-holder's and the forester's stages. An option is ordained regarding all Āśramas except Brahmacarya.

This indicates that the practice of Brahmacarya is unavoidable and essential (for all and one) because without Brahmacarya no other Aśramas are possible to practise.

The Chandogya says: -

- (1) "He who stands firm in Brahman attains immortality." (CHU. II. 23)
- (2) "They desire to know Him by studying the Vedas; one becomes a Muni (i.e. thinker) by knowing Him through (the practice
- (1) "ब्रह्मस¹⁹स्थोऽमृतत्वमेति ।" (CHU. II. 23)
- (2) ''तमेतं वेदानुबचनेन विविदिषन्ति । ब्रह्मचर्येण तपसा श्रद्धया यज्ञेनानाशकेन (Contd.)

of) Brahmacarya and penance with devotion, sacrifice ard immortal (knowledge); with (an ardent) desire to know Him who is the Supreme Object of knowledge; Saṃnyāsins renounce the world. This is the characteristic of the ancient Brāhmaṇas who are bereft of all doubts (Anūcānas) and are learned that they aspire for no offsprings. They (gladly) declare, "what shall we do (by begetting) children as our sole aim is to achieve God. Having renounced the desire for sons, material wealth and fame, they live on alms, i.e., become Saṃnyāsins). For, the desire for (begetting) sons is (i.e. leads to) a desire for riches and the desire for riches is a desire for public fame. Both of them are desires after all." (SB. XIV.7.2)

EXPLANATION

The fourth, i.e. Samnyasin, who stands firm in Brahman, attains immortality. Members of all stages of life, particularly those of the fourth stage (i.e. Samnyasa), desire to know the Supreme Lord, the absolute monarch of all creatures by studying, preaching and listening to the Vedic lore and by means of acting in accordance with the Vedic teaching. A man becomes a Muni (i.e. a thinker) by knowing that Lord, by practising Brahmacarya, undergoing austerities, performing righteous actions, devotion, intense love, the Yajūa, the imperishable knowledge and performance of various ritualistic deeds. The Samnyasins renounce the world with (a keen) desire (to realise) God, the Most Covetable One (lit. worthy to be seen). The noblest Brahmanas, who know God, are free from all doubts, endowed with perfect knowledge, expellers of others' doubts and learned and aspire to know God, but they have no desire for children and for the house-holder's life. The particle 'Ha' is here in the sense of clearness and 'Sma', i.e. 'Smayete', means full of delight. (That is to say) with delightfully shining faces they say "what should we do with children." Here the word 'what' implies negation (i.e. we have nothing to do with offsprings), The sole object of our desire is the Most Beautiful Lord. In this way, renouncing the desire for begetting children, the desire and toil for securing material wealth, the desire for public reverence and fame and aversion from scandal, they live on alms (i.e. they become Saṃnyāsins). Because a man who possesses the desire to beget children, has a desire for riches and he who has the desire for riches, surely has the desire for public honour. A person who runs after renown and fame has two other desires also. But a man who aspires for communion with the Lord and desires for final emancipation, is free from all these desires. No riches of the world can ever be equal to the riches of the bliss of communion with the Supreme Soul. One who is firm in God has no more likings for worldly honour. Being compassionate to mankind, he promotes happiness (in this world) by preaching truth. His chief aim is the universal benefit and the establishment of truth (in the world).

XIV,7.2)

The following are the Vedic (Sruti) words (cited) in the Satapatha:

(3) "Having performed a "Prajapatya Yajña" (i.e. a sacrifice in honour of Prajapati—God) and dedicating all his possessions therein, a Brāhmaṇa should renounce the world."

The undermentioned is an extract from the Mundaka Upanisad:—

(4) "Whatever world a man of purified nature makes clear in his mind,

And whatever desires he desires for himself-

That world he wins, those desires too.

Therefore he who is desirous of welfare should revere the Knower of the Soul (Atman).

(MUN. III.1.10).

EXPLANATION

A Saṃnyāsin having performed a sacrifice in honour of Prajāpati, and having fully comprehended in the heart, all this, burns his sacred thread and the lock of hair therein. He with his mind absorbed in deep

This extract is not found in (Mādhyandina or Kāṇvaṣākha) of Śatapatha.

^{(4) &#}x27;'यं यं लोकं मनसा संविमाति, विशुद्धसत्वः कामयते यांश्च कामान् । तं तं लोकं जयते तांश्च कामान् तस्मादात्मज्ञं ह्यर्चयेत् भतिकामः ॥'' (MUU. III.1.10) thought, then renounces the world (i.e. becomes a Samny\starsin). Only the perfectly learned persons, free from all attachments and aversions and whose thoughts are always set upon the good of all mankind, are entitled to become a Samnyasin; but not the men of shallow knowledge and learning. For these Samnyasins, the control of out-breathings and in-breathings is the Firesacrifice (Agnihotra). Keeping mind and senses away from blemishes (and sins) and the practice of righteousness and truth are also Fire-sacrifice. performance of the Fire-sacrifice is essential for all the above-said three The Fire-sacrifice of a Samnyasin is not the performance of that Aśramas. which is enjoined upon the men of other three stages, nor is it bereft of all activities (because the Samnyasins have to perform their own duties). Preaching of truth is the Brahma Yajña for a Samnysain; communion with the Supreme Being, his Deva Yajña; the reverence to the men of knowledge is his Pitr Yajña; spreading knowledge among the ignorant, compassion and harmlessness to all creatures is his Bhūta Yatña; wandering about for the good of mankind, pridelessness, honouring all men by giving them truthful precepts, his Atithi Yajña. Thus the Five Great Sacrifices of the types described above consist in knowledge and the performance of righteousness The common duties of all members of all stages are the worship of Supreme Being who is one without a second and possessed of attributes, such as Almighty, &c., and the performance of the true Dharma. As a man of purified nature attains the world and also all those desires which he cherishes for himself in his mind (lit. inner sense), therefore, he who is desirous of welfare should always respect and honour the Samnyasin who knows the Self and the Supreme Lord. By their association and by honouring them alone can a man win the blissful worlds and all desires. None should show respect to the hypocrites who are false preachers and whose chief aim is their own selfish motive, because the show of reverence to them serves no purpose and it results in misery and afflictions.

THE FIVE GREAT SACRIFICES

(1) THE BRAHMA YAJÑA

Now we shall deal briefly with the method of performing daily, the five great duties. Of these (the first) is Brahma Yajña, which is to be performed by all. It consists in the study and teaching of the scriptures, the Vedas, &c., together with their auxiliary works, and the meditation and worship of God at the two twilights. Here the method of learning and teaching is identical with what we stated under the caption of "Reading and Teaching".* The procedure of meditation and worship is to be followed as described in (my book entitled as) 'The Pañca-Mahā-Yajña-Vidhāna'. Similarly the method of performing the Agnihotra is to be followed in accordance with the directions given in the same book. Now we cite below authorities on the Brahma Yajña and the Agnihotra (Fire Sacrifice):—

(1) "Serve Agni with the kindling-brand, wake the Guest with drops of clarified butter. In him pay offerings to God."

(YV. III.1)

The third chapter of the Yajurveda deals with the Agnihotra which is obligatory on the house-holder during the whole of his life.

This verse and the following (in the chapter) contain texts for Agnihotra, the ceremonial laying-down or establishment of his own sacrificial fires by the young house-holder.

Here the word Atithi (i.e. guest) stands for Agni, who is constantly retained by the house-holder.

^{*} It refers to Chapter III of सत्यार्थप्रकाश (lst edition) published in 1932 V. E., one year earlier than the Rgvedādi Bhāṣya Bhūmikā's composition in 1933 V.E.

^{} It refers to his book पञ्चमहायज्ञाविध (Ist edition) published in 1931 V.E. and not to its revised edition published in 1934, (in case we take the word 'Vidhāna' in the sense of 'Vidhi') as this revised edition of पञ्चमहायज्ञाविध is post-dated.

^{(1) &#}x27;'सुमिधारिन दुंबस्यत घृतैः बोधयृतातिथिम् । आस्मिन् हुव्या जुहोतन ॥'' (YV. III.1)

- (2) "Agni, the Envoy, I place in front. I address the oblation-bearer. Here let him seat the Devas." (YV. XXII.17)
- (3) "Each eve (that comes) our (household's) Lord is Agni, bestowing his loving kindness every morning. Grant us treasure after treasure; enkindling thee may we increase thy body."

 (AV. XIX.55.3)
- (4) "Each morn (that comes) our (household's) Lord is Agni, bestowing his loving kindness every evening. Vouchsafe us treasure after treasure; kindling thee may we prosper through a hundred winters." (AV. XIX.55.4)

EXPLANATION

O men! always kindle the fire (who is to be respected as) guest, with purified substances, e.g. clarified butter, &c., and with the pieces of fire-wood, in order to benefit others through the process of purifying the air, the medicinal herbs, the vegetables and the rain water. And properly throw and burn in the fire the carefully purified substances, possessing the property of destroying disease and which are strength-giving, sweet, fragrant and fit to be consumed. In this way perform (Duvasyata) the Agnihotra daily and thus benefit all creatures. (YV. III.1)

A performer of the Fire-Sacrifice should conceive, "I place in front of me Fire which is the messenger for carrying the sacrificial substances consumed in Agnihotra to the regions of clouds and of the air. Fire is

- (2) "अ्षित दूतं पुरो देधे हृध्यवाहुपुपं बुवे । देवारा। आ सांद्यादिह ।।" (YV. XXII.17), (RV. VIII.44.3) ("Place in front": for offering sacrifice).
- (3) ''सुग्यं सीयं गृहपंतिनीं अध्निः प्रातः प्रोतः सौमनुसस्यं दाता । दसीर्वसीर्वसुदानं
- (4) "त्रातः प्रांतः गृहपीतर्नो अग्निः सायं सौयं सौयनुसस्यं दाता । वसौर्वसोवंसुदानं पुधीन्धानास्स्वा शृतदिमा ऋधेम ॥" (AV. XIX.55.4)

In verse (3) above the phrase 'तन्बं पुषेम' (i.e. may we increase thy body) may also mean 'may we strengthen our bodies'.

In verse (4) "hundred winters" stands for "hundred years", called as Havya-Vaha (i.e. carrier of burnt oblations) because it takes away what is thrown into it to the other regions. (Upa-Bruve, i.e.) May I proclaim to the other seekers the qualities of fire. Fire, through the process of Agnihotra, diffuses the bright qualities in the world by refining the air and the rain water.

OR

O Agni (i.e. Self-effulgent Lord) I accept Thee alone as my adorable (Ista) Lord. Thou art Messenger, i.e. the imparter of the supreme knowledge. Thou art 'Havya-Vaha'. Here the word 'Havya' means 'the highly meritorious knowledge which every body should possess'. God is imparter of supreme knowledge. May I proclaim Thy glory (Upa-Bruve). Mayest Thou through Thy grace fill this world with divine qualities.

(YV. XXII.17)

This Agni, i.e. the terrestrial fire or (the Self-effulgent) Lord, is the protector (Pati) of the house and its inmates. He being properly adored and rightly worshipped in the morning and in the evening brings us riches, health and happiness and also bestows upon us the noble objects. For this reason, Agni (i.e. God) is called by the name of Vasu-Dāna, i.e. bestower of riches. May we attain Thee O Supreme Lord! in our hearts and mayest Thou preside over all our administrative activities. The terrestrial fire may be indicated here (by the word Agni). O Lord! may we grow strong in body (Tanvā) by proclaiming Thy glory or may we prosper (spiritually and) bodily by kindling fire in the process of Agnihotra.

(AV. XIX.55.3)

The explanation of the (next) verse is identical with the previous one. The meaning of the (additional portion) is as follows:—

In this way by performing the Agnihotra (daily) and worshipping the Lord may we go on prospering through hundred winters, i.e. hundred years containing hundred winters. We pray that we may not suffer any loss by performing such activities.

(AV. XIX.55.4)

For the performance of the Agnihotra one should prepare a Vedi (i.e. altar) of mud or copper and ladles and the ghee-pot &c. of wood, silver or gold. Pieces of fire-wood consisting of mango or palāśa or other similar woods are to be laid out on the altar. Having kindled fire therein, one should recite Mantras and burn the above-mentioned substances in the morning as well as in the evening or in the morning (alone) daily.

2. THE AGNIHOTRA YAJÑA

The following are the Vedic Mantras (to be recited) during the Agnihotra:

(5) "Sūrya is light and light is Sūrya. Hail. Sūrya is splendour, light is splendour. Hail. Light is Sūrya, Sūrya is light. Hail. Accordant with bright Savitar and Dawn with Indra at her side, may Sūrya, being glorified, accept (or enjoy). Hail."

These Mantras are for the morning Agnihotra.

(6) "Agni is light, light is Agni. Hail. Agni is splendour, light is splendour. Hail. Light is Agni, Agni is light. Hail. Accordant with bright Savitar and Night with Indra at her side, may Agni, being pleased, enjoy. Hail."
(YV. III.9-10)

(Here the third Mantra is to be recited only in mind in the evening Agnihotra).

EXPLANATION

In obedience to His ordinance we offer this first oblation for the benefit of the whole world to Sūrya (i.e. God) who pervades all movable and immovable things (Cara-Acara-Ātma), who is the illuminator of all, illumines, and who is the life of all (beings). Sūrya, i.e. God, is Varcas (i.e. splendour) as He being Indweller preceptor of all, illumines the hearts of the enlightened persons and who is also a light of all lights. For Him we offer.......

Surya who is the Lord of the whole universe is Self-effulgent as well as the illuminator of the whole creation. For Him......

We have given precisely the faithful translation of these Mantras above. The significance of the words Sūrya, &c., is clearly explained by our author in his explanation.

^{(5) &#}x27;'सूर्यो ज्योतिः ज्योतिः सूर्यः स्वाह्री ॥१॥ सूर्यो वर्चो ज्योतिवर्चेः स्वाह्री ॥२॥ ज्योतिः सूर्यः सूर्यो ज्योतिः स्वाह्यं ॥३॥ सुजूर्देवेनं सिव्तत्रा सुजूरुवसेन्द्रंव या। जुपाणः सूर्यो वेतु स्वाह्यं ॥४॥" (४४. III.9)

^{(6) &#}x27;'अग्निज्योंतिः ज्योतिर्गिः स्वाहां ॥१॥ अग्निर्वर्चो ज्योतिर्वर्चेः स्वाहां ॥२॥ सुजूर्देवेनं साव्वा सुजू राज्येन्द्रवत्या । जुषाणा अग्निवतु स्वाहां ॥४॥'' (४४. III.10)

Surya who pervades the bright Solar orb and also the Jiva who resides in the Dawn radiated with the light of the Sun (Indra) and also in the mental faculty of the Jiva and who is the life of all creatures, being properly propitiated by us may be gracious to us and bestow upon us knowledge and other merits. For Him.....

These four oblations are to be offered in the morning Agnihotra.

The following are the Mantras for the evening sacrifice:

God is Agni as He is Self-effulgent, illuminator of all illumines. For Him......(Agni is Splendour). Agni is the above described God. For Him.......... The third oblation is to be offered by the third Mantra, the meaning of which is identical with the verse referred to above.

The performers of the Agnihotra should offer oblations with these Mantras in the evening; or all the Mantras may be used once in a day.

O Lord of the universe! may this deed of ours which we have performed for the benefit of all others achieve its object through Thygrace. For this reason we dedicate it to Thee.

Moreover, the following Mantras beginning with ' $Bh^{\gamma}r$ -Bhuvah', etc., and ending with 'Svarom' are taken from the Pañcikā of the thirty-first Kaṇḍikā of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and they are for both the morning Agnihotra as well as for the evening.

The undermentioned verses are common (to be recited) at the morning as well as at the evening Fire Sacrifice:—

OM Dhar comous mexicano Cuaha

OM, Bhur-agnaye pranaya Svana.	(1)
OM, Bhuvar-vāyave-apānāya Svāhā.	(2)
OM, Svar-adityaya vyanaya Svaha.	(3)
OM, Bhur-bhuvah svar-agni-vāyu-ādityebhyah
prā ņa-apana-vyānebhyah Svā hā.	(4)
OM, Apo jyoti rasomrtam brahma bhur-bhuvah
svar-om Svāhā.	(5)
OM. Sarvam Vai Pürpam Svaha.	(6)

The words Bhūḥ, &c., occurring in these Mantras should be under stood as epithets of God. Their meanings have (already) been given in the exposition of the Gāyatrī Mantra.

Agnihotra is (a process of) action in which some thing is thrown into the fire with a view to purifying air and (rain) water or in the name of God or for the sake of obedience to His command. It goes without saying that when by consuming fragrant, tonic, sweet, intellect-developing prowess-improving, perseverance-imparting, strength-giving and disease averting substances in the fire, the atmosphere and the rain-water are purified. It results in universal happiness of all creatures because of the contact they get with the pure air and water. Therefore, the performers of this act because of doing (in this way) good to all creatures enjoy immense joy and God's grace. These are some of the objects of performing the Fire Sacrifice(Agnihotra).

(3) THE PITR YAINA

The Pitr Yajña is of two kinds—one is called Tarpana and the other Śraddha. The Tarpana is that act by which the learned, the Devas, the Seers and the fathers are propitiated and are rendered comfortable The Śraddha means a devotional service unto them. Both these acts are possible only when the learned are surviving but not when they are no more (in the world). Because it is impossible to serve them when they are no (longer) available. The object of the act (i.e. service) is defeated when the learned and the others are not available. Therefore the act becomes futile and useless. Consequently the performance of this action is ordained only with reference to the living alone; because this service is possible only if both the server and the served are in contac with each other. Here the worthy recipients of service are three—the Devas, the Rsis and the Pitrs. The following authorities refer to the Devas:—

(7) "O Deva Janas! (i.e. the learned people) purify me. May thoughts with spirit make me pure and clean. May al things cleanse me. O Jātavedas! make me clean."

(YV. XIX.39

Cf: RV. 1X.67.27.

^{(7) &}quot;पुनन्तुं मा देवज्ञनाः पुनन्तु मनसा धर्यः । पुनन्तु विश्वां मूतानि जातेवेदः पुनीहि मां ॥ (YV. XIX,39)

- (8) "Verily there are two categories and not the third one. Truth and falsehood. Truth is verily (on the side of) Devas and falsehood (on the side of) mer. From the (side of) falsehood I approach Truth, i.e., He approaches Devas leaving behind men. He should speak truth alone. Devas have taken the vow of truthfulness. The learned who speaks truth and truth alone attains fame and glory." (SB. I.1.1)
- (9) "The learned are certainly Devas."

(SB. III.7.6)

EXPLANATION

O Jatavedas! (i.e. Omniscient) Lord! purify me in every way. May the learned (Devas) who are devoted to Thee and follow Thy command and who are noble and wise purify me by imparting knowledge to me. May our intellect be clean and sharp through the knowledge, given by Thee and also by meditating upon Thee.

May all creatures living in the world enjoy happiness and delight and be pure through Thy grace. (YV. XIX.39)

There are two characteristics by which men are divided into two groups (lit. names), i.e. Devas and Manusyas (i.e. men of bright qualities and those of ordinary nature). (The dividing) factors are truth and falsehood. Devas (i.e. men of bright qualities) adhere to truthful speech, truthful deeds and truthful conviction while the Manusyas (i.e. the commonplace men) resort to false speech, false acts and false conviction. Hence, a person who renounces falsehood and accepts truth is counted among the Devas. He who neglects truth and resorts to falsehood is regarded a Manusya. Therefore one should always speak the truth, should have truthful conviction and should practise truth alone. A Deva who is pledged to truth is (really) glorious among the glorious people. Contrary to them (in character) are Manusyas. Therefore, here the learned are the Devas.

(SB. I.1.1)

The learned also are the Devas.

(SB. 111.7.6)

^{(8) &}quot;द्वयं वा इदं न तृतीयमस्ति । सत्यं चैवानृतं च सत्यमेव देवा अनृतं मनुष्याः इदमहमनृतात् सत्यमुपैमि । इति ।। तन्मनुष्येभ्यो देवानुपैति । स वै सत्यमेव वदेत् । एतद् ह वै देवा क्रतं चरन्ति यत् सत्यम् । तस्मात् ते यशो यशो ह भवति य एवं विद्वान् सत्यं वदित ।।" (SB. I.1.1)

^{(9) &}quot;बिद्वा "सो हि देवा: " ।।" (SB. III.7.6)

NOW THE EVIDENCE ON THE WORD R$I

The following verse (explains the significance of) the word Rsi:-

Tam yajñam barhişi praukşan Puruşam Jātam-agratah. Tena devā ayajanta Sādhyā rsayaśca ye.''*

(YV. XXXI.9)

This verse has been explained in the chapter on Cosmogony.

It is implied here that the (chief) function of a Rsi is to teach a sciences to others after one has oneself mastered them. Therefore, th Rsis are to be served (and propitiated) through the acts of learning an teaching. Those who propitiate them (i.e. Rsis), bring happiness themselves through the service they render unto (the Rsis). He, wh having mastered all sciences teaches to others is called 'Anūcāna' (i.e. scholar able to repeat, study and teach the Vedic lore). He verily is a Rsi (SB. I.7.5...

$ He, who adopts the work of teaching is called Rsi and his at (of teaching) is styled as Arseya (i.e. pertaining to a Rsi). He who tel good and wholesome things to the Rsis, the Devas and the students an thus constantly keeps himself busy in acquiring learning becomes scholar of great vigour and (in this way) accomplishes a Yajña of hig knowledge.

Therefore all men should take up this (noble) function pertainin to Rsis. (SB. I.4.5.)

(Following) evidence explains the word "Pitr": :-

- (10) "Bearers of vigour and immortal ghee, milk, (refined) food (Kilala) and honey or sweet fruits (Parisrutam), Ye are a freshening draught. Delight my Pitrs (i.e. Fathers)."
 - (YV. II.34)
- (11) "May our Fathers, who are Somyas and Agnisvattas, come (to us) by Deva Yanas (i.e. bright pathways). Taking delight at this sacrifice by their portion, may they be gracious unto us and bless us." (YV. XIX.58)

- (a) Somyas : 'Soma loving' (Macdonell). 'Worthy of Soma' (Griffith). 'Soma drinkers' (Sāyaṇa). 'Having the qualities of Soma i.e. tranquil or peace-loving or fond of the juice of Soma Creeper' (Dayānanda).
- (b) Agniśvāttas: 'Devoured by fire' (Macdonell). 'Those whose bodies have been tasted or consumed by fire (Agni+√Svad) (Griffith). According to Dayānanda here the word Agni means God (i.e. Self-effulgent), i.e. those who adhere to God for riches and prosperity or those who are at home in the Agni Vidyā, i.e. 'Agni+Su+Ātta'.

Rsi Dayananda's rendering is logical. Dead fathers, who were consumed by funeral fire, cannot come "to speak for us and to bless us".

(YV. XIX.58)

EXPLANATION

Let all men know and persuade others (to act) as follows:-

"Give delight to my father, grand-father, &c., and my preceptors, &c., with your service and achieve true knowledge, remain devoted and be contented with your own lot (Sva-Dhā). Now those things are enumerated by which they are to be served. They should be served and satisfied with vigour-imparting, fragrant, palatable and heart-tonic drinks with nectarine juices of various tastes. Besides ghee, milk, properly refined various foods, honey and timely ripe-fruits (may also be offered).

(YV. II.34)

May the wise protectors, i.e. the Pitrs, who are 'Somyas', Agniśvattas, and full of scientific knowledge, come to us and may we also always approach them. The word 'Somyas' mean men, endowed with Soma-like qualities, i.e. peaceful and tranquil natured or experts in extracting and preparing the juice of the Soma-creeper. Agniśvāttas are those persons who with a view to getting happiness (in this world) adhere to Agni (i. e. Self-effulgent God) or who employ terrestrial fire for the performance of Agnihotra and also for the accomplishment of the scientific discoveries.

May we seeing them coming by the (bright) pathways of the learned stand up and receive them. May we affectionately respect and offer them seat by addressing them, "Welcome to you O Fathers! O Fathers! be pleased with our nectar-like service at this "Honour Sacrifice." Be our saviours and instruct us in true knowledge. (YV. XIX.58)

(12) "O Fathers, give (us) delight here. Come here like a Vrşa to your allotted portion. The Fathers have enjoyed (our reception) and have come here like a Vrşa to the allotted shares." (YV. 11.31)

(12) "अर्थ पितरो मादयध्वं यथामागमार्वृतायध्वम् । अभीनदन्त पितरो यथाभागमार्वृतायितत ।" (YV. II.31)

Here the word $V_{!!}$ is a been translated by Mahīdhara and others as 'bull', i.e. "come here like bulls". But our author takes it in the sense of "the learned". The word $V_{!!}$ is derived from the root Var is sprinkle', i.e. one who rains down one's knowledge for the benefit of others, i.e. the learned.

- (13) Obeisance to you O Fathers! for Rasa (i.e. delicious sap);
 Obeisance to you, Fathers, for Sosa; Fathers, Obeisance unto you for Svadha; obeisance unto you for Jīva O Fathers!
- (13) "नमों वः पितरो रसाय नमों वः पितरः शोषाय नमों वः पितरो जीवाय नमों वः पितरः स्वधाये । नमों वः पितरो घोराय नमों वः पितरो मन्यवे नमों वः पितरो चन्यवे नमों वः पितरो वितरो नमों वः। गृहान्नेः पितरो दत्त सुसो वेः पितरो देष्मैतर्द्वः पितरो वासः ।" (YV. II.32)

Here six words are differently interpreted. Dayananda explains them as:—

(a) Rasa: Juice of Soma. (b) Śoṣa: Fire and air which dry away every thing. It is from the root Śuṣ 'to be dry'. (c) Jīva: Life or livelihood. (d) Svadhā: Final emancipation or knowledge. (e) Ghora: Adverse days, i.e. to ward off calamities. (f) Manyu: Indignation or just anger.

But Mahīdhara and his followers interpret these words as :-

(b) Śosa : Ardour.

(c) Jīva : Life.

(d) Svadha: Things offered to the dead.

(e) Ghora : Dreadful ones.

(f) Manyu: Anger.

The following note in Griffith's translation deserves special notice:

"Obeisance is offered to the Fathers six times in accordance with the seasons of the year. 'Your genial sap' the fresh juices of trees and plants in Spring. 'Ardour' the summer. 'Life' the vivifying water of the rains. 'Svadha' or viands; the food offered to the Fathers, representing fruitful Autumn. 'The Awful' the cold winter. 'Passion' the chilling dewy season which kills the plants. Similarly it was the belief of the old North-men that their dead patriarchs had the power of sending good seasons. See Corpus Poeticum Boreate, 11.414, 418. 'Houses' wives and families. 'Raiment' threads, or wool, or hair from the Sacrificer's chest, placed on each obsequial cake."

Fathers, obeisance to you for Ghora; Fathers, obeisance unto you for Manyu; O Fathers! homage unto you; adoration to you O Fathers!

O ye Fathers! give us accommodations. Whatever we possess O Fathers! We surrender to you with this, O Fathers! clothe yourselves." (YV. 11.32)

(14) "Fathers bestow on me a babe, a boy enwreathed with lotuses, so that there may be here a man." (YV. 1I.33)

EXPLANATION

O Fathers! Make us happy by granting us the gift of knowledge and wisdom in this assembly or school. Having accepted your respective share of knowledge, be enthusiastic and jubilant like a scholar (Vrsa) in the work of imparting knowledge and the preaching of truth. May you move (freely amongst us) being happy over our adequate reception and noble behaviours. (YV. II.31)

O Fathers! obeisance to you for giving us the juice of the Somacreeper and the bliss of the highest knowledge, we pay homage to you O Fathers! for the sake of securing from you the science of fire and air (Śoṣa). Obeisance to you O Fathers! for granting us the means of livelihood for the maintenance of life. Obeisance to you O Fathers! again and again for giving us the knowledge of emancipation (Svadhā), for the sake of averting (Ghora) misfortunes, for the sake of showing indignation to the wicked (Manyu), for the sake of dispelling anger, and for the sake of securing knowledge of all qualities. Repeated obeisance to you O Fathers! grant us knowledge of domestic affairs. O Fathers! we dedicate to you all our belongings so that we may be able to learn from you (all sciences) and may not deteriorate. O Fathers! kindly accept whatever we offer to you, e.g. clothes, &c., and be pleased.

On me he set their glory through a hundred years in this world." (YV. XIX.46)

(16) "May the Soma-loving Fathers, the lowest, highest and midmost ascend.

May the gentle and righteous (A-vrka) Fathers who have attained the world of life protect us when we call them."

(YV. XIX.49)

(17) Our peace-loving (Somyāsas) Fathers are Angirasas, Navagvas, Atharvans, Bhrgus;

May these, the holy, look on us with favour; may we enjoy their gracious and loving kindness." (YV. XIX.50)

(16) ''उद्गिरंतामवरुऽउत्परांसुऽउन्मध्यमाः पितरं: सोम्यासं: । असुं यऽर्डेयुरंवृकाऽऋतुज्ञास्तेनोंऽवन्तु पितरो हवेषु ॥" (YV. XIX.49)

Cf. RV. X.15.1.

According to Sāyaṇa—''lowest, highest, midmost'' are "dwellers on earth, in heaven and in sky." Griffith translates the word 'Somyasas' as 'deserving Soma'. Better to take in the sense of 'Soma-loving', i.e., peace-loving. The phrase 'Asum Ya Īyuḥ' is rendered by Sāyaṇa as 'who have gained the world of spirits', i.e. the dead ones. But this rendering is not good hecause the dead ones cannot come to protect us. Hence Dayānanda takes the phrase to mean "those who have come to life."

(17) "आङ्गरसो नः पितरो नवंग्वाऽअर्थवाणो मृगंवः सोम्यासः। तेषां व्य[®]र्थुमृतौ युज्ञियानामि अद्रे सौमनुसे स्थाम ॥" (YV. XIX.50) Cf. RV. X.14.6. (Contd.)

(18) "The equal and unanimous are Fathers in Yama-Rājya; their Loka is Svadha; homage (to them). Let Yajīa be dedicated to Devas." (YV. XIX.45)

EXPLANATION

May the glory (Sri) which is endowed with real knowledge and other similar merits of my living (Jivah) and learned preceptors who are devoted to righteousness, God, and the benefit of mankind, who are equally well up in good qualities, e.g., righteousness, divine knowledge and true sciences, and who are free from such defects as hypocrisy, &c., towards their pupils and disciples in awarding them true knowledge, &c.,

(Contd. from page 334)

Here some words are technical and thus they are open to controversy regarding their real meaning. According to Sāyaṇa and Mahīdhara 'Aṅgirasas, Navagvas, Atharvans' etc., are the names of various Fathers belonging to the most ancient times. Oblations are offered to them as they left the mortal world long ago. Griffith's following note deserves mention here:—

"Angirasas, etc., semi-divine members of half mythical priestly families of the most ancient times." (page. 213)

But Dayananda interprets these words in general sense. For instance, Angirasas are the class of spiritual scholars who know God, i.e. Anga-rasa, i.e. relishable entity in our human existence—God.

Navagvas, i.e. persons having progressing new outlook in their undertaking. (Nava + \sqrt{Gam} 'to go').

Atharvaṇs, i.e. knower of the Atharvaveda and Dhanurveda. Bhīgus, i.e. men of mature wisdom. Somyāsas, i.e. peace-loving people.

(18) ''ये संमानाः समनसः पितरो यमुराज्ये । तेवां लोकः स्वधा नमो युक्तो देवेषुं कल्पताम् ।।'' (YV. XIX.45)

The word "Yama-rajya" according to Mahīdhara means 'in the realm of Yama (god of death)'. But the word Yama is explained by Yāska in Nirukta (X.19) from the root Yaccha 'to give (retirement)'. In (X.20) he further says: "अग्निर्दिष यम उच्यते ।" i.e. Agni is also called Yama. In the Nirukta (XII.29) ''यम: आदित्य: ॥" i.e. the sun is called Yama.

remain stable through hundred years so that we may always be happy in this world.

(YV. XIX.46)

May the wise Fathers of the lowest, middle-most and the highest rank in the matter of achievement of merits and the Fathers who are peace-loving (Somyas), who have no enemy (A-vrkas), and who know God and the Vedas (Rtajñas) always protect us by giving us guidance regarding knowledge of affairs of giving and taking. Only those Fathers are to be served by all who are surviving and who are twice-born (Asum ya Iyuli) and learned. The dead are never (to be served) because they being in other world are beyond the scope of receiving our service as we have no proximity to serve them.

(YV. XIX.49)

Let us approach the Pitaras and acquire precepts from them regarding all matters related to the attainment of noble qualities, e.g. learning &c. (Saumanase), and in deeds of universal advantage (Bhadra), in which the mind enjoys the pleasure of intellectual development. They are Angirasas, i. e. possessing the knowledge of God who is, as if it were, a Rasa, i.e. a vital essence in human organs (i.e. body: Anga). They are Navagvas, i.e. make new inventions in the domain of science and art and find new approaches to all good deeds. They are masters of Atharvaveda and are at home in military science (Dhanur-veda). They are Bhrgus, i.e. pure-hearted and men of mature wisdom, and they are also Somyasas, i.e. peace-loving. By nature they are fond of performing Yajñas and other beneficial deeds. (YV. XIX.50)

The meanings of the words 'Sumanāh and sumanasas' have already been explained. The learned (Pitaras) judges of court of justice (Yama-Rajya) find immortal (Svadha) joy in their findings (Loka) based on justice and provide benefits of the kingly duty, i.e. the protection of the subjects which is so well known and dear to the learned. May such deeds be common among us. We pay homage (Namas) to these administrators of truth and justice. May such judges, the lovers of truth, remain for ever amongst us.

(YV. XIX.45)

- (a) Somyasas: Who deserves Soma (Griffith). The imparters of Soma Vidya (Dayananda).
- (b) Vasisthas: Most noble (Griffith). Possessor of great wealth (Sāyaṇa). Belonging to the race of Vasistha (Mahīdhara). Taking intense delight in the noble qualities, e.g. versatile learning (Dayānanda).
- (c) Yama: Judge of the court of justice or teacher of the true knowledge (Dayānanda). A proper noun (Sāyaṇa and others).
 - (20) ''वहिषवः पितरऽक्त्युविक् हुमा वी हुव्या चेकृमा जुवध्वम् । तऽभा गुतावेसा शन्तेमेनापा नः शं योरेखो देधात ।।'' (YV. XIX.55)

Cf. RV. X.15.4

This verse is addressed to the Pitaras; who renounce the material possessions and lead a life of a Samnyāsin. The seat of sacred grass is offered to them. Hence they are called "Varhi-Şadah." According to Dayānanda, the word "Varhi" here means the "Supreme Soul" and those who reside, i.e. delight, in Supreme Soul are "Varhi-Şadah."

(21) ''भाहं पितृन्तसुंबिदश्रां २॥ऽअवितिस् नपातं च विकामणं च विष्णों: । बुद्धिषदो ये स्वध्यां सुतस्य मर्जन्त पित्वस्तऽह्हार्गमिष्ठाः ॥'' (YV. XIX.56) Cf. RV. X.15.3.

Here the words Napāta and Vikramaņa are not very clear. According to Mahīdhara they mean 'the paths of gods wherein there is no falling' (Na-pāta) and where there is going and coming. "A son and progeny" (Griffith). "Grandson and wide stride of Visnu" (Macdonell); "Napāta (Na-pāta) means final emancipation and "Vikramaņa" 'the multiformed creation of the world." (Dayānanda)

(Contd.)

They who enjoy pressed juices with oblation, seated on sacred grass (Varhişads) come oftenest hither."

(YV. XIX.56)

EXPLANATION

One can know God who is the real imparter of all true knowledge and who has ordained some conditions when one is ardently desirous of making unrestricted gifts of knowledge, &c., to all and remains always associated with the teachers who are masters of science of Soma (Somyās), take intense joy in good qualities and all sciences (Vasisthas), are preservers of the Soma-Science, and having first mastered all sciences are eagerly engaged in imparting them to others, and also when one associates with the earlier fathers, i.e. grandfather, great grandfather and other such elders whose chief aim is God and religion.

Let, therefore, all men achieve their desired objects by acting in the manner (described) in this verse. (YV. XIX.51)

May the learned Fathers, who are established in Brahman or in the Divine knowledge—the highest of all sciences (varhi-ṣadas) and who are (inherently) endowed with the desire of doing the greatest benefit and universal protection, favour us with a visit. May we receive and greet them on their advent in these words: O Learned (Fathers), please come to us and enjoy these offerings which are worthy gifts to be accepted by you. After accepting our service, bestow upon us the happiness of knowledge. Ward off our ignorance and make us sinless (a-rapāḥ) so that we may become righteous people and free from all sins. (YV. XIX.55)

The following note also deserves notice:-

"Son and progeny": the meaning appears to be as suggested by Prof. Ludwig in his commentary on the original hymn, that the sacrificer has discharged his obligation to the Fathers by begetting a son through the favour of Visņu. (Rgveda). Still Vikramaņam is an unintelligible expression in this connection. Another explanation, says Prof. Ludwig, would be to take 'Napatam' as fire, and 'Vikramaṇam Viṣṇoḥ (Viṣṇu's striding forth) as the sun. Prof. Grassman translates: 'die Kinder und den hochsten Schritt des Vischnu': the children and the highest stride of Vishnu."

(Contd. from page 339)

This stanza with some variations is found in the Rgveda:

'पे अग्निदग्धा ये अनग्निदग्धा मध्ये दिवः स्वधया मादयन्ते । तेमिः स्वराडसुनीतिमेतां यथावशं तन्त्वं कल्पधाति ॥'' (RV. X.15.14)

The translation of this verse is very doubtful. Scholars agree only in disagreement. The words Agnisvatta and An-agnisvatta have already been explained. Sayana and Mahidhara render them as 'burnt with fire and those who are not cremated.' But Dayananda explains:—

- (a) Agnişvatta : Those fathers who are at home in the science of Agni, i.e. electricity etc.—Agni-Su-Ātta (Dayānanda); 'consumed in fire'=Agni+√svad 'to taste' (Sāyaṇa).

 This meaning is supported by the word 'Agni-dagdha' (RV.X. 15.14) which clearly shows 'those fathers who were burnt in fire.' The words दग्ध or विदग्ध also mean "Experts", i.e. experts in science of 'Agni-Vidyā'.
- (b) An-agniśvātta: This is the negative form of Agniśvātta, i.e. not devoured by fire (Macdonell). Our author takes it to mean 'fathers expert in sciences other than Agni' i.e. air, water, geology, etc.
- (c) Svadhayā: By funeral offerings (Sāyana and others). By enjoying the bliss of 'Anna-Vidyā' or by means of bodily and mental vigour (Dayānanda)
- (d) Madhye Divah: In the upper region or in the midst of heaven (Săyaṇa). According to Dayananda 'Diva' means Self-effulgent God, i.e. 'who live and rejoice in communion with God.'
- (e) Svarāt : God who shines by His own light (Dayānanda); Sovereign Lord (Macdonell); Supreme Lord (Sāyaṇa); Self Ruler (Griffith).
- (f) Asu-nītim : Science of life (Dayānanda).

EXPLANATION

O Men! invite ye the Fathers who possess wisdom and resources and know when to act and serve them even as we invite and serve such Pitaras who are called Agnisvattas—the true to seasons. They drink the juice of Soma, are well versed in the duties to be performed by men and are pleased with making and receiving the gifts of the science of Soma. Such Fathers are learned and wise. May we associate with them and may we become the lord and protectors of wealth, e.g., glories of true knowledge and world-empire.

- (a) "Our successors or predecessors": According to Sāyaṇa 'Pūryāsaḥ' means "an elder brother, father, grandfather, and the like born before the birth of the worshipper"; 'Uparāsaḥ' means "younges brother, sons, etc." Mahīdhara explains Pūryāsaḥ as those who have gone to the other world; 'Uparāsaḥ' as those who have ceased or rested, or who have gone to the world of Brahma. But our author interprets these words as पूर्वमधोद्य विद्रांसः सन्ति (पूर्वासः उपरासः), i.e. our predecessors and successor in the learning.
- (b) Pārthive Rajasi (i.e. in the earthly region) is not very clearly explained by Sāyaṇa—"At this site which is connected with the earth and is the effect of (or has for its effect) the quality of Raja (passion or active principle)." Mahīdhara explains Rajas by Jyotis, i.e light—terrestrial light or fire. Thus the phrase refers to the Fire-Altar Our author interprets it as "experts in the sciences connected with the earth, e.g., geology, &c."
- (c) Suvrjanāsu Vikşu, i.e. among the mighty races of god: (Griffith). "In settlements with fair abodes" (Macdonell). "Present amon the opulent people" (Sāyaṇa). "Presidents of the People's Assemblies of Judges of the law-courts" (Dayānanda).

drink and with other sacrificial accessories so that we may achieve success in our series of religious actions and obtain prosperities in this world and happiness in the next world.

(YV. XIX.67)

May those Fathers, who having previously completed their studies are now engaged in the vocation of teaching and learning and those who are quite at home (A-niṣatta) in the sciences of physical (pārthive rajasi) geography, physiography and geology and also those who are endowed with strength and courage, are presidents and members of the peoples' assemblies and are entrusted with the administration of justice, come to us (again and again). We offer adorations to such Fathers ceaselessly.

- (30) "Purify me, the Fathers who enjoy Soma! Grand-fathers, make me pure! May Great-grand-fathers cleanse me with a pure hundred years' life!

May Grand-fathers purify me; may Great-grand-fathers make me pure.

With a sieve that brings a century may I attain full length of life." (YV. XIX.37)

EXPLANATION

O God! eager for Thee we instal Thee in Our hearts (Nidhīmahi) a our Lord, as the administrator of justice in our Rāṣṭra (i.e. nation (country). O Lord of the Universe! may we (Samidhīmahi) illumit (the whole world) by ceaselessly hearing and reciting to others Thy bright glory so that we may acquire true knowledge and dedicate wealth to and enjoy the bliss of the association with the Fathers who are guided by a longing (to propagate) the truth and knowledge. Bein desirous (to grant our desires) do Thou bring such Fathers to us.

(YV. XIX.70

We offer Svadha, i.e. food and other excellent things to the Father who impart knowledge and are styled as Vasus because their characteristi is to master the science of immortality, i.e. the science of Emancipation They have attained the title of Vasu by observing Brahmacarya (i.e. celebate life) for 24 years to acquire knowledge and by their being engaged in tutorial vocation. (We offer food etc.) to the Grand-fathers (who are called Rudras) because after having studied for 44 years, practising Brahmacarya, they perform the duties of teachers; to the Great-grand fathers, i.e. Adityas. On account of observing Brahmacarya for 48 years they have fully mastered knowledge and being engaged in teaching others are shedding the light of real knowledge around them. We pay our homage to them. May you take food and dress yourselved here. The word Ami-madanta (i.e. rejoiced) has been explained before. May our service, O Fathers! satisfy you. Be happy and satisfied. O Fathers! make us pure and destroy our blemishes due to ignorance.

(YV. XIX.36

O Fathers! Grand-fathers! and Great-grand-fathers! make me continuously pure in thoughts, words and deeds and make me perform pure and righteous acts by instructing me to do righteous and pure deeds and to practise Brahmacarya which is the cause of hundred years' life. The verb 'purify' is to be connected with the subsequent three (subjects). In this way may I survive for full length of life.

Here the words—Vasu, Rudra and Āditya are the designations of the learned on the authority of the Chandogya Upanişad, viz. 'Puruşo vāva yajñah', i.e. "Puruşa verily is a Yajña."*

(4) THE BALI-VAISVA-DEVA YAJÑA

Now we lay down the procedure of performing the Bali-Vaiśva-Deva (Yajña).

The Bali-Vaiśva-Deva is to be performed with whatever (is) cooked (as food) leaving aside saltish things.

(31) "A Brāhmaṇa (and other twice-born) should perform daily the Vaiśva-Deva-Sacrifice in the house-hold Fire in accordance with the enjoined method in honour of these (following)

Devatas with the prepared food." (MS. III.84)

The undermentioned (Vedic Text is an evidence (in support of) the Bali-Vaiśva-Deva ritual:—

- (32) "Only to Thee, bringing our tributes O Agni, each day as fodder to a stabled horse, may we, Thy neighbours, rejoicing in food and in growth of riches—O Agni! never be injured."

 (AV. XIX.55.7)
- (33) "Purify me O Deva-Janas! May thoughts with spirit make me pure. May all things cleanse me. O Jatavedas! make me clean." (YV. XIX.39)

EXPLANATION

O Supreme Lord! in obedience to Thy ordinances, we place the offerings and oblations before the uninvited learned guests (Atithis) or in the terrestrial fire, as abundant fodder is placed before a horse daily. May we rejoice in faith (Samit, and in the glories of world-wide empire Rayas-posena). Faith or Śraddha is called Samit as it is rightly desired

The word Prativeśa (i.e. neighbours) is interpreted by Dayānanda as a hostile person (Pratikūla).

The meaning of (the next cited verse) (YV. XIX. 39) has be explained under the caption of Tarpana.*

(Following Mantras are used in Bali-Vaisva-Deva):-

(34) "Om, Svāhā for Agni. Om, Svāhā for Soma. Om, Svāhā f Agni-Soma. Om, Svāhā for Visve Devās. Om, Svāhā l Dhanvantari. Om, Svāhā for Kuhū. Om, Svāhā for Anuma Om, Svāhā for Prajāpati. Om, Svāhā for Dyāvā-Pṛthvī. O Svāhā for Sviṣṭa-Krt."

The word Agni has been explained already. Soma means God, t creator of the universe and the bestower of happiness to all. The sig ficance of the words Agni and Soma as Prana and Apana (i.e. inbreath a outbreath) has been stated (by us) in interpretation of the Gaya Mantra. Viśve-devas are the attributes of God which enlighten the who universe. Or it may mean all the learned people. Dhanvantari stands God who annihilates all diseases. Kuhū indicates Darśesti (i.e. Amāvat Yajña) or the All Intelligent Power (i.e. God) which is the object of the sacrifice. Anumati refers to Paurnamāsya Yajña or having studied sciences, the realisation of knowledge or of the Intelligent Universal Pow Prajapati is God, the saviour of the whole universe. All the benefitshould be derived from fire and earth (Dyava-prthivī) possessing excella qualities which have been created by [God. Svista-krt refers to G Who gives us joys which our hearts desire.

^{*} It refers to "Tarpaṇa" topic in the book entitled "सन्ध्यादिपञ्चय विद्यान" written and published by our author in 1931 V. E. and n to पञ्चमहायज्ञविद्य of 1934 as the latter did not exist at the time of writin Rgvedādi Bhaṣya Bhūmikā (1933).

After performing Homa with these Mantras, one should offer oblations (i.e. the portions of the daily meals with the under-mentioned Mantras):—

(35) "(1) Om, obeisance to Indra with Anuga. (2) Om, obeisance to Yan:a with Anuga. (3) Om, homage to Varuna with Anuga. (4) Om, adoration to Soma with Anuga. (5) Om, obeisance to Maruts. (6) Om, obeisance to Ads. (7) Om, obeisance to Vanaspatis. (8) Om, obeisance to Śrī. (9) Om, obeisance to Bhadra Kalī. (10) Om, obeisance to Brahmapati. (11) Om, obeisance to Vāstu-Pati. (12) Om, obeisance to Viśve-Devās. (13) Om, obeisance to them who walk during the day. (14) Om, obeisance to those who prowl by night. (15) Om, obeisance to the Bhūti (i.e. glory) of all souls. (16) Om, obeisance and Svadhā (i.e. food) for Fathers who deserve Svadhā."

This is the daily Śrāddha.

EXPLANATION

Here, the word Namas (i.e. obeisance) is derived from the root Nam to make obeisance or to honour. That is to say that men achieve real knowledge by thought preceded by right and adequate action. The glorious God with His eternal attributes is meant by the word 'Indra' here (1). The word Yama indicates Supreme Self, endowed with qualities, e.g., justice and freedom from prejudice or partiality (2). Here Supreme Lord—the Most Excellent—possessing the highest knowledge is meant by the word Soma (3). The meaning of Soma has been explained already (4). Maruts (i.e. gases) are those who through support of God sustain and keep in action the whole universe (5). The meaning (of the word) 'Ad' is stated in the explanation of the Mantra 'Sam-No-Devī' (6). God or things like air and clouds are lords (Patis) of people or forests. They are meant here: Or it may be borne in mind that we should derive benefits from the great trees (the lords of forests which God has created with good qualities (7). Śrī means God who is the mainstay of all. Śrī is derived from the root Śri 'to serve'. God is Al Bliss and All Glory or it may mean the beauty of the universe created by God (8). The power of God which provides Bhadra (i.e. happiness) to all is called Bhadra-Kālī (9). God is the Lord of Brahma, i.e., of th Vedas containing all sciences and arts or of the universe (10). God is the lord of Vastu, i.e., Ākāśa where all creatures reside; from the root Va 'to reside' (11). Viśve Devās has already been explained (12). May through the grace of God, the living beings which move about during th day or prowl by night, be not hostile to us or stand in our way (13 & 14) Here God is meant by the word 'Sarva-Ātma-Bhūti', i.e., He is the abode o all beings (15). The meanings of the words Pitaras and Svadhā are give in the chapter on Tarpaņa (16). The word obeisance (Namas) indicate humility for one's own self and respect for others.

⁽³⁵⁾ ओं सानुगायेन्द्राय नमः ॥१॥ ओं सानुगाय यमाय नमः ॥२॥ ओं सानुगाय वरुणाय नमः ॥२॥ ओं सानुगाय सोमाय नमः ॥४॥ ओं मरुद्श्यो नमः ॥४॥ भ्रोमद्श्यो नमः ॥६॥ ओं वनस्पतिश्यो नमः ॥७॥ ओं श्रियं नमः ॥६॥ ओं मद्रकाल्यं नमः ॥९॥ ओं ब्रह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१॥ ओं ब्रह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१०॥ ओं व्राव्ह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१०॥ ओं व्याव्ह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१०॥ ओं व्याव्ह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१२॥ ओं त्रव्याव्ह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१२॥ ओं त्रव्याव्ह्मपत्रये नमः ॥१४॥ ओं सर्वात्मप्रत्ये नमः ॥१४॥ ओं प्रवृक्ष्यः स्वधायश्यः स्वधा नमः ॥१६॥

(The under-mentioned verse from Manu supports the Bali-Vaisva Deva):—

(36) "One should slowly place on the earth (portions of the dail meal) for the dogs, for the oppressed and the degraded, for the Candalas, for those suffering from horrible diseases, for birds (like crows) and for the insects." (MS. III.92)

According to this, one should place six oblations on the ground. In this way having distributed the portions of the food among all livin beings one should secure their contentment.

(5) THE ATITHI YAJNA

Now we shall deal with the Atithi Yajña (Honour Sacrifice) which is the fifth one. All joys reside there where the learned, who come to house-holder's house, (even) uninvited, are rightly respected an served.

(36) "ग्रुनां च पतितानां च श्वपचां पापरोगिणाम् । वायसानां कृमीणां च शनकै: निर्वपेत् भृवि ॥ (MS. III.92)

See also MS. III.67 & 91. It is usually performed by throwing u into the air, near the house-door, portions of the daily meals before partaking of it.

Those persons are called Atithis, who have completely mastered all sciences, do good to others, have their senses under restraint, are righteous, are true to words, are free from defects, e.g. deceit, and are daily moving from place to place.

There are numerous Mantras in the Vedas which (can be cited) as evidence here. But on account of economy of space we shall quote only two (of them) here:—

- (37) "Let him, to whose house, the Vratya, who possesses this knowledge, comes as a guest."

 (AV. XV.11.1)
- (38) "Having stood up of his own accord to receive him, he should say, Vratya, where didst thou pass the night? Vratya, here is water. Let them refresh thee. Vratya, let it be as thou pleasest. Vratya, as thy wish is so let it be. Vratya, as thy desire is so be it."

 (AV. XV.11.2)

EXPLANATION

That Atithi deserves honour and service who possesses all qualities mentioned above, who is endowed with the most excellent virtues and whose arrivals and departures are not pre-fixed and who comes unexpectedly and leaves equally all of a sudden, according to his own sweet will.

(AV. XV.11.1)

Whenever an Atithi may happen to come to the house of a house-holder, he should stand up with high affection to receive him. After greeting him he should offer the best (available) seat to him. After due reception and service he should ask him, "O the best of men! where did you pass the (yesternight)? O Revered Guest! accept the water. As you delight and satisfy us and our friends, &c., with your truthful precepts

^{(37) &}quot;तद् यस्येवं विद्वान् वात्योऽतिथिर्गृहानुगण्डेत्।" (AV. XV.11.1) ^{(38) &}quot;स्व्यमेनमभ्युदेत्यं ब्र्यात् वात्य क्वांऽवात्सीः, वात्योद्धकं वात्यं तुर्वयंन्तु वात्य यथां ते प्रियं तथांस्तु वात्य यथां ते वज्ञस्तयांस्तु वात्य यथां ते निक्रामस्तयाः स्त्विति ॥" (AV. XV.11.2)

The Apastambha Sutras (II. 3.7.13-17) describe it also. Vratya is a Śrotriya or religious student who has learnt the Vedas—a faithful fulfiller of his vow (Vrata).

we also (try to please) you (with our service). O learned man! as pleases you we shall abide by your desire. Please command us to brit the thing you may have liking for. We are determined, O Atithi! to service according to your desire and pleasure. May we render service to you according to your desire and pleasure. May we render service to you a manner as it satisfies your desire so that we and you may serve ear other and enjoy mutual righteous association to live in lasting happine with the ever increasing knowledge.

THE AUTHORITATIVENESS OR OTHERWISE OF THE BOOKS

Now we shall deal with the books which have been regarded as an independent authority since the beginning of creation up to this day or also those which bave been taken as depending for their authority on others, by the noble-learned people-free from partiality, attachments and aversions, possessing amiable conduct based on truth and righteousness and devoted to universal benefit. The books, which are the words of God, deserve to be accepted as possessing an inherent (self) authority of their own; but the books, composed by human beings can have only the secondary authority. The four Vedas, being the word of God, have an inherent (i.e. independent) authority; because there can be no error or other shortcoming in the word of God, who is Omniscient, Omnipotent and the Home of all learning. The Vedas should be taken as their own authority like the Sun and the lamp. As the Sun and the lamp, being illumined by their own light, also illumine other physical objects, similarly the Vedas, shining with their own light, make the other books of knowledge shine. The books, which stand in opposition to the Vedas, cannot be accepted as authoritative. But the Vedas do not miss their authoritative character even if they are contradictory to other books because they have self-authority and other books depend on them (the Vedas) for their authority.

The Vedas, divided into four Samhitās (i.e. collections) containing the Mantra-portion only, have self-authoritative character. But the Brāhmaņas, being only the commentaries on the (original) Vedas, are authoritative only as far as they are in accordance with them. Similarly 1127 recensions or branches of the Vedas, being explanations of the Vedic conception, possess authority only insofar as they concord with them. The same can be stated about the six Angas (i.e. the limbs or auxiliary sciences) of the Vedas, viz., Phonetics (or Ortboepy), Rituals, Grammar, Etymology, Prosody and Astronomy. The four Upavedas, viz., the Ayurveda (i.e. the science of life), i.e. the medical science, the Dhanurveda (i.e. the science of music) and Arthaveda (i.e. mechanism, physics or economics) are in the same category. In the sphere of Ayurveda, the Caraka, the Suśruta, the Nighanţu* &c., are acceptable (as authority). The books on the Dhanurveda have mostly disappeared but they can be composed now as this science is based on the practical application of all the other sciences. There were a number of books on Dhanurveda, composed by authors, e.g. Angiras. The Gāndharvaveda is based on the Sāma—Music; thus the Sāmaveda is the (original) source (here). There are four treatises composed by Viśvakarmā, Tvaṣṭā, Devayajña and Maya on the Arthaveda.

The six Angas of the Vedas contain the following authoritative works: Siksa composed by sages like Panini &c., on Phonetics; the Manavakalpasutra on Rituals; the Astadhyayi, the Mahabhasya, the Unadipatha, the Ganapatha and the Pratipadika on Grammar; the Nirukta of Yaska Muni, along with the Nighantu on Etymology, which is the fourth limb of the Vedas; the Sutras and Bhasya of Acarya Pingala on Metrics; the works of Vasistha and other Rsis on Geometry, Algebra, Arithmetic and Astronomy. These are the six Vedic limbs. There are also six Upāngas (i.e. sub-limbs). Of them, the first is the Pūrvamīmāmsā Sastra composed by the sage Jaimini, alongwith its commentary by the sage Vyasa dealing with rituals and relevant duties of the performer. The second is the Vaiseşika Sastra of Kanada Muni, supplemented with the commentary of Gautama, entitled as Prasastapada, dealing with (mainly) the substances and their qualities. The third is the Nyāya Sastra of Gautama, together with the commentary of Vatsvavana dealing with physics (Padarthavidya). The fourth is the Yoga Sastra of Patañjali, supported by the Vyasabhasya, describing the science of worship and meditation. This Sastra prescribes rules and means whereby one can realise and secure perceptional knowledge about all objects which otherwise was based on inference on account of learning and studying the three (above-mentioned) Śāstras, viz., Mīmāmsā, Vaišeşika and Nyaya. The fifth is the Samkhya Sastra of Kapila Muni together with the commentary of Bhaguri Muni which enumerates all the elements and realities so that one may have a specific knowledge of them. The sixth is the Vedanta Sastra of Vyasa together with the gloss of Baudhayana. Similarly ten Upanişads, viz., Isa, Kena, Katha, Prasna, Mundaka, Mandukya, Taittiriya, Aitareya, Chandogya and Brhadaranyaka are also to be accepted as sub-limbs (Upa-angas).

nely places), by beholding (the latery taking bath and by worshipping to by hypocrites and acctariant will at

^{*} It refers to Nighantu of Dhanvantari, as indicated in Hindi version.

Thus the four Vedas, together with their recensions and glosses, the four Upa-vedas, the six Vedāngas together with six Upa-angas of the Vedas constitute the twenty sciences which should be studied by all men and women.

It is definite that a man, by studying them thoroughly and thus acquiring a complete and real knowledge of all the mental and material sciences and of the action portion, becomes a scholar of very high learning. The Vedas were revealed by God. The Brāhmaṇas are their expositions and commentaries composed by the seers. They are to be regarded as authoritative only in so far as they are in concordance with the Vedas, (which are full of true and righteous knowledge) and are supported by logic and proofs. But none should accept the authority of other books, which have been composed by the incredible persons, lay down the practice of vice, contain partiality and contemptuous ideas, exhibit very poor knowledge, are contrary to the teaching of the Vedas and are bereft of the support of reason and evidence. We enumerate them here briefly:—

All the Tantra-works, e.g., the Rudrayamala &c.; the Puranas, e.g., the Brahmavaivarta &c.; the interpolated verses of the Manusmrti and all the other Smrtis; the seemingly (i.e. false) grammatical treatises such as the Sarasvata, the Candrika and the Kaumudi etc., the works, e.g., the Nirmayasindhu, &c., which are in contradiction to the Mimansa Sastra; the seemingly works on the Nyāya Śāstra, beginning with the Tarkasangraha and ending with the Jagadisi, which are opposed to the Vaisesika and the Nyaya Sastras; books contrary to the Yoga Sastra, e.g., the Hathapradipika, &c.; books opposed to the Sankhya Sastra, e.g., the Sānkhyatattvakaumudī, &c.; books opposed to the Vedānta Śāstra, e.g., the Pañcadaśi, the Yogavāsistha &c.; all the works dealing with the auspicious movements, horoscopes and influence of the stars, e.g., the Muhurtacintamani, &c., which are opposed to the Astronomy; all books opposed to the Srauta Sūtras, e.g., the Trikandika, Snana Sūtra and Pariśista, &c.; all the books which lay down that salvation can be acquired and sins annihilated by simply fasting in the month of Margasirsa or on the 11th day of the each half of a lunar month, by taking bath in the (sacred) water (in the Ganga) at Kāśī, by pilgrimage (to the so-called holy places), by beholding (the idols), by repeating the name (of a god), by taking bath and by worshipping the lifeless images; all books prepared by hypocrites and sectarian people; and all other books, preaching and advocating atheism.

All these books cannot be accepted as authoritative by the true observers because they are contrary to (the teachings of) the Vedas and other scriptures and they cannot stand the test of reason and evidence.

- Q. "Should the very tiny amount of truth which can be traced in these (books of) predominantly falsehood, be rejected?"
- A. "Yes, like the poisoned food. As an investigator rejects the poisoned food after examination even if it is found nectarlike, so these works should be rejected forthwith; because, if they are given currency, the true meaning of the Vedas cannot be widely propagated and the darkness of falsehood would prevail which would not permit the true knowledge to come into existence."

Now we shall show that the teachings of the Tantra works are pernicious (lit. 'false').

They maintain that the salvation can be secured only by adhering to Five Makāras (i.e. the Five MS—the five things the names of which begin with the letter 'MA'). We state (an evidence) in the following verses here:—

- (1) "Madya (i.e. wine), Mānsa (i.e. flesh), Mīna (i.e. fish), Mudrā (i.e. secret marks) and the Maithuna (i.e. copulation or fornication)—these Five Makāras, give salvation in all ages."
- (2) "Let one drink, drink and drink again, till one (reals and) falls on the ground. Let one rise up and drink again. For such a one there is no re-birth."
- (3) "Persons of all Varnas (castes) assume "Twicebornhood" (i.e. Dvijatva) when they enter into Bhairavīcakra (i.e. the

^{(1) &}quot;मद्यं मांसं च मीनं च मुद्रा मैथुनमेव च । एते पञ्च मकाराः स्युः मोक्षदा हि युगे युगे ॥''

^{(2) &}quot;पीत्वा पीरवा पुन: पीरवा यावत् पतित भूतले । पुनरुत्याय वै पीत्वा पुनर्जन्म न विद्यते ॥"

^{(3) &}quot;प्रवृत्ते भैरवीचके सर्वे वर्णाः द्विजातयः । निवृत्ते भैरवीचके सर्वे वर्णाः पृथक् पृथक् ॥" circle of Bhairavas and Bhairavīs). No sooner the Bhairavī-Cakra is finished, all Varnas hecome distinct and separate."

- (4) "Avoiding copulation with his mother, a man should cohabit with all women. Having inserted his organ into vulva, he should repeat the Mantra without sluggishness."
- (5) "A man may not spare even his mother."

Such are the numerous teachings of the Tantras which propound the practices marked with stupidity, vice, perniciousness, worthy (lit. 'stated by') of the Anāryas, bereft of reason and authority, entirely contrary to the Vedic teachings, unholy (Anārṣa) and obscene. These (practices) should never he adopted by the righteous people. It is very easy and known (to every hody) that the indulgence into wine-drinking, &c., spoils the intellect and consequently can never lead to salvation; rather it leads to calamities 'and ruinous consequences).

Similarly the so-called Puranas (i.e. the so-called Ancient Histories), e.g., the Brahma Vaivarta and others, which are really of very recent age, contain mythical legends and false tales. A few of them are put forward here by way of example on the analogy of the 'maxim of the cooking pot and the boiled rice.'

(A) COITION OF BRAHMA WITH HIS DAUGHTER

There we come across a story that Brahmā, the Lord of creatures, assuming the corporeal form, seized his own daughter Sarasvati for copulation. This story is false because it is allegorical and figurative. For instance:—

^{(4) &}quot;मातृयोनि परित्यज्य विहरेत् सर्वयोनिषु । लिगं योन्यां तु संस्थाप्य जपेन्मन्त्रमतन्द्रतः ॥"

^{(5) &#}x27;'मातरमपि न त्यजेत ॥''

^{ &}quot;स्थालोपुलाकन्याय"—The maxim of "the cooking pot an ! boiled rice." In a cooking pot all the grains being equally moistened by the heated water, when one grain is found to be well cooked, the same may be inferred with regard to the other grains. So the maxim is used when the condition of the whole class is inferred from that of a part.

- (6) "Prajapati verily ran after his daughter. According to some it is 'light or day'. The others say that it is 'Dawn'. He, assuming the 'form of the Rsya (i.e. the white footed antelope) seized her in the form of Rohita (i.e. a deer)'. That semen which came out first became this very Aditya (i.e. the sun)."

 (Aitareya. III.33.34)
 - (7) "Prajāpati is verily the fair winged Garutman (i.e. Garuda), i.e. the Sun."

- (a) Uttānayoḥ Camvoḥ: 'Widespread world-halves'. But literally it means 'bowels or vessels into which the Soma is poured'. It is a figurative expression for 'heaven and earth'. The firmament or space between these two is, as the region of the rain, the womb of all beings.

The father is Dyaus and the daughter is Earth, whose fertility depends upon the germ of rain, laid in the firmament.

Sayana translates this phrase as "The two uplifted ladles. The uplifted ladles are heaven and earth and the womb of all beings between them is the firmament, the region of the rain."

(10) "The sonless father, regulating (the contract), refers to his grandson (the son) of his daughter, and relying on the efficiency of the rite, honours (the son-in-law) with valuable gifts; the father, trusting to the impregnation of the daughter, supports himself with a tranquil mind."

(RV. III.31.1)

(Contd. from page 357)

Rai Dayananda's explanation, which is based upon the above-cited authorities of Satapatha and Nirukta, is quite original. The interested reader will find it more reasonable.

(10) "शासद् विहेर्दुहितुर्नुस्यंङ्गात् विद्वां ऋतस्य बीधिति सप्येन् । प्तित यत्रं दुहितु: सेकंमुञ्जन्तसंशाम्येन मनेसा दधन्वे ॥" (RV. III.31.1)

Griffith translates this verse :-

"Wise, teaching, flowing the thought of Order, the sonless gained a grandson from his daughter.

Fain, as a Sire, to see his child prolific; he sped to meet her with an eager spirit."

The following note from the same author deserves notice:—

"I am unable to give a satisfactory or even an intelligible version or explanation of the first two stanzas which appear to attribute, in a very obscene manner, to Agni and the Gods in heaven, the customs or the laws of succession to property among men. In the first stanza Valmi which usually means 'an oblation-bearer', 'a sacrificer', 'a priest', or 'one who is borne along as a God in a celestial car', is said by Sayana to mean sonless, the father of a daughter only, because he transfers his property through his married daughter into another family. The sonless father, according to Sayana, stipulates that his daughter's son, his grandson, shall be his son, a mode of affiliation recognised by law, and, by relying on an heir thus obtained, and one who can perform his funeral rites, he is satisfied.'

This may be intelligible, but what it has to do with Agni or with the rest of the hymn is not clear. (page 347).

EXPLANATION

Sun or solar sphere is called Savita (the begetter) and Prajapati (i.e. the Lord of creatures). Dyaus (i.e. the light) and Usas (i.e. dawn) are like his daughters. It is a metaphorical statement. The one which is generated from the other is like the offspring of the latter which is like the father of the former. Such a father, i.e. the Sun, chases fast with his rays his daughter Dawn of a lightly reddish complexion (Rohitam, i.e. reddish or a female deer). Having captured her, he generates or begets upon her the Light (i.e. Day), i.e. the son of the Aditya (i.e. Sun). The Dawn is like the mother and the Sun is like the Father of this son (i.e. Light) because the Sun with his rays, which are like his semen, begets the Day, his son, upon her, the Dawn. On the horizon, during the night, five ghatikas earlier than the sunrise, there appears a reddish light. It is called the Dawn ($U_{\bar{s}}as$) which is caused by the Sun. Thus, by the union of the Father and the Daughter a son is born, i.e. the brightly shining Light (of the day), who is son of the Sun, as a son is born from a mother and a father. Similarly, the rain-cloud and the earth are like a father and a daughter to each other. The birth of the earth is from the waters, i.e. from the clouds. Hence, the earth is the daughter of the rain-clouds

Grassman takes Vahni to mean the upper fire-stick, and the daughter to mean the lower piece of wood.

I think the word Vahni is derived from the root Vah 'to carry or convey'. Thus Vahni here stands for father of a daughter only, not of a son, because he conveys (Vahati-Prāpayati) away hi property, through his married daughter into another family. Thus Yāska says:—

"प्रशास्ति वोढा सन्तानकर्मणे दुहितुः पुत्रभावम् ।"

i.e. Valmi or Vodhā i.e. the father of a daughter only stipulate (Prašāsti) that his daughter's son, his grandson. In this way the daughte is regarded as son.

Yāska explains the word Vidvān as-

"बिद्वान् प्रजननयज्ञस्य रेतसी वा।"

The word Rta means a Yajña, i.e. a Prajanana Yajñasya.

This rain-cloud by sprinkling rain-water, i.e. the semen, as it were, upon her, makes the earth pregnant. This pregnancy brings forth the vegetables as their offspring. This also is a metaphor.

(Aitareya. III.33.34)

Here is (the following) evidence from the Vedas:-

Dyaus, i.e. light of the day, is my father—the protector and the generator of all transactions. Both have the mutual relation. This wide-spread earth is my mother, the giver of cordiality. The rain-cloud and the earth are like two armies arrayed against each other or like the awning (canopy) and the floor. Here, the rain-cloud, i.e. Father, pours down the mass of water (i.e. semen) upon the earth, i.e. his daughter, and makes her conceive. This is only a metaphorical allegory. (RV. I.164.33)

The same (metaphor) allegory is also stated in the (following) verse. Here the word Vahni means the Sun (i.e. the Father). His daughter is the above-mentioned (Dawn), Such a Father (i.e. the Sun) impregnates his daughter Dawn, by placing his semen, the (solar) rays in her and begets a son, the Day.

(RV. III.31.1)

In spite of the fact, that this highly excellent metaphorical (allegory) was explained in the Nirukta and the Brāhmaṇas, the Brahma Vaivarta and the other (similar) works narrate this and the other tales otherwise on account of delusion. None should take them as credible.

(B) TALE OF INDRA AND AHALYA

Similarly there is a story that there was a real person by name Indra, the king of the gods. He committed adultery with the wife of Gotama. Gotama cursed him, "Thou shalt have one thousand female generative organs." He also cursed his wife Ahalyā, "Thou shalt become a rock of stone." She regained (her original form) and became free from the curse when she came into contact with the dust of Rama's feet.

Such fables are false, because in reality they are allegorical. This (allegory) is as follows:—

(11) "O Indra! Come here. Gau (i.e. the light) overpowered

^{(11) &}quot;इन्द्रागच्छेति । गौरावस्कन्बिन्नहृत्यायै जारेति । तव् यान्येवास्य चरणानि तरेवैनामेतत् प्रमुमोदयिषति ॥" (SB. III.3.3.3.1.18)

(or outraged) Ahalyā like a Jāra (i.e. a paramour). Whatever are his feet (i.e. rays), he gratifies her with them."

(SB. III.3.3.3.1.18)

- (12) "Semen is Soma (i.e. the moon)." (SB. III.3.5.1)
- (13) "The night to the Sun. (Because the night) disappears when the sun rises." (N. XII.11)
- (14) "The solar ray by name Susumnas is called Gau and the moon is Gandharva (i.e. the bearer of the ray). It is a Nigama (i.e. a Vedic verse YV. XVIII.40). It is also called Gau." (N. II.6)
- (15) "Like a paramour (Jara) to a Bhaga or "a lover to the Bhaga." The Sun is here called a paramour, the remover of the night." (N. III.16)
- (16) "He that illumines (the world) is verily Indra."
 (SB. I.6.3.18)

EXPLANATION

Indra is the sun, which burns and illumines the terrestrial objects. The sun is called Indra because he is the source of securing glory and riches. He is the fornicator of Ahalyā (i.e. the night). She is the wife of Soma (i.e. the moon), who is also styled as Gotama, i.e. the swiftest mover. Gotama is the moon. Both, the moon and the night, stand to each other in the relation of husband and wife. The Night is Ahalyā because the day (Aha) is absorbed $(L\bar{\imath}yate)$ in her. This moon gratifies all creatures with his wife Ahalyā (night). Here, the sun (i.e. Indra) is called fornicator $(J\bar{\imath}ara)$ of Ahalyā (night), the wife of Gotama, the moon; because he causes the night to wear away and lose her beauty. The word

^{(12) &}quot;रेत: सोम: ॥" (SB. III.3.5.1)

^{(15) &}quot;जार आ मर्गम् । जार इव मगम् । आदित्योऽत्र जार उच्यते । रातेर्जरियता ॥' (N. II.16)

^{(16) &}quot;एष एवेन्द्रो य एष तपति ॥" (SB. I.6.3.18)

'Jāra' is derived from the \sqrt{Jrs} 'to grow old'. Now the destroyer of the age of the night is Indra, the sun. This (version) only is believable.

Therefore, none should attach importance to the above-stated false story related in recent works, in face of this excellent and metaphorical allegory mentioned in the true scriptures for the purpose of providing precepts regarding a factual natural phenomenon (lit. 'a good science'). The same is the case with other similar stories.

(C) STORY OF INDRA AND VRTRA

Similarly (there is another story that) there was really a person by name Indra, the king of gods. A war broke out between him and the demon Vṛṭra, who was the son of Tvaṣṭā. The demon Vṛṭra swallowed Indra. It created great panic among the gods. They approached Viṣṇu as their shelter. Viṣṇu sugges'ed a way out. He told them, "Vṛṭra would be annihilated with the sea-foam when I enter into it."

Such false stories, like a mad man's ravings, have been described in the so-called Puranas, ancient in name only but which are indeed very recent works. The good and the learned should never believe them (as they are stated) because they are allegorical. For instance:—

- (17) "I proclaim the heroic deeds of Indra, the first that he performed, the Thunder-wielder. He slew the Ahi (i.e. cloud), then released the waters down (to the earth). He broke the channels of the mountain-torrents." (RV. I.32.1)
- (18) "He clove Ahi (i.e. the cloud), lying on the mountains. Tvasta sharpened for him, his whizzing bolt: the flowing waters, rapidly glided downwards to ocean, like cows (hastening) to the calves." (RV. I 32.2)
- (17) ''इन्द्रेस्य नु वीर्योणि प्रवोंचे यानिच कार प्रथमानि वच्ची । ''सहन्नहिमन्वपस्तत्व प्रवक्तणां अभिनत् पर्वतानाम् ॥'' (RV. I.32.1)
- (18) श्रहुन्निहुँ पर्वते शिश्रियाणं त्वष्टिहिमै वर्जं स्व्ये ततका । वाश्रो इव धेनवुः स्यन्दमाना शञ्जीः समुद्रमर्धजग्मुरापः ।."

Rsi Dayananda on sound evidence believes that the Vedas do not contain historical references. Here I cite below a note from Prof. Wilson who clearly corroborates the statement of our author that this description is only an allegorical one:—

"In this and subsequent Sūktas, we have an ample elucidation of the original purport of the legend of Indra's slaying Vṛtra, converted by the Paurāṇika writers into literal contest between Indra and an Asura or the chief of the Asuras, from what in the Vedas is merely an allegorical narrative of the production of the rain Vṛtra, sometimes also named Ahi, is nothing more than the accumulation of vapour condensed or figuratively shut up in or obstructed by cloud. Indra with his thunderbolt, or atmospheric or electrical influence, divides the aggregated mass and vent is given to the rain, which then descends upon the earth and moistens the fields, or passes off in rivers.

The language of the Richas is not always sufficiently distinct and confounds metaphorical and literal representation, but it never approximates to that unqualified strain of personification, which, beginning apparently with the Mahābhārata (Vanaparva, ch. 100), became the subject of the Purāṇas." (p. 249)

These lines leave no doubt that the myth of Indra's dragon-fight refers to some powerful natural phenomenon. Heaven and earth tremble when Indra slays Vrtra. He does not destroy the dragon once only but repeatedly and he releases waters many times. The old interpreters of the Vedas tell us that Indra is the thunder-storm. The vapours are Ahi (dragon) which enclose the waters.

(particle) 'Nu' means 'Vitarka' (i.e. guess). 'Vajra' means light (i.e. lightning), Prānas or valour. The Śatapatha (VII.4) states that:

(19) "Heroism is verily Vajra."

The possessor of Vajra is called Vajrin. He killed Ahi (i.e. cloud). Then he released the waters which spread on the earth. By those waters, he broke the (mountain) rivers (Pra-vakṣaṇā) by flooding them over. He caused the banks of the rivers to burst. Such rivers are said to be produced (thus) by the clouds. The water, struck by the bolt, glides down to the earth. It should be taken as (the dead) corpse of Vrtra.

(RV. I.32.1)

Hence onward, concise interpretation of the verses will be given.

The Sun (Indra) annihilated Ahi, i.e. cloud. How did he? Here it is said: He hurled upon Ahi or demon Vṛṭra, i.e. cloud, the mighty Vajra, i.e. the bright lightning produced by his rays which were hidden under the cloud. With this lightning he broke into pieces the body of Vṛṭra (i.e. in the form of rain-drops) which is thrown on the earth. This mass of water, fallen on the earth, is caused to ascend again into the sky in the form of atoms. These waters brightly flow down to the ocean as the cows run to their calves. The (rain) waters are the body of Vṛṭra, the demon.

The deed, by which the Sun causes the waters, i.e. the body of Vrtra, to fall on the earth, is praiseworthy.

EXPLANATION

The word Ahi is included in the list of synonyms of cloud in the Nighantu (I. 10). In the Nirukta we find the following explanation:—

- (22) "The word 'Indra Satru' means one (i.e. Vṛṭra) whose slayer is Indra or whose annihilator is Indra." (N. II.16)
- (23) "Then who is Vrtra? According to the etymologists

(Contd. from page 364)

We have here and in the following verse, both names Ahl and $V_{l}tra$. They are both given as synonyms of Megha, a cloud, in the Nighantu. The former is derived from \sqrt{Han} 'to strike', with 'A' prefixed, arbitrarily shortened to 'A'; the latter, (lit. 'the encompasser or concealer) is from the $\sqrt{V_{l}}$ 'to enclose', or from $\sqrt{V_{l}}$ 'to be or to exist' or from $\sqrt{V_{l}}$ 'to increase'. A choice of etymologies indicates a vague use of the term. He is said to be V_{l} yansa, having a part or metaphorically a limb. detached, thus confounding things with persons, as is still more violently done in the following verse, where he is said to have neither hands nor feet.

- (21) "अपादहस्तो अपृतन्यविन्द्रमास्य बजुमिश्च सानौ जघान । वृष्णो विश्रः प्रतिमानं बुर्मूषन् पुरुवा वृत्रो अशयुद् व्यस्तः ॥" (RV. 1.32.7)

- (23) ''तत्को वृत्रः ? मेघ इति नैरुक्ताः । त्वाष्ट्रोऽसुर इत्यैतिहासिकाः ।'' (N. II.16)

(Nairuktas) it is (rain)—cloud. According to the historians it is an Asura, the son of Tvasta." (N. II.16)

(24) "He slew Vrtra and released waters (RV. I.32.1). The Vrtra is from √Vr 'to enclose' or from

√Vrt 'to be' or from

√Vrth' 'to increase'. Vrtra is so called as it encloses (the waters), or as it conceals (solar light), or as it grows in size."

(N. II.17)

EXPLANATION

Indra, the sun, with his very sharp and great thunderbolt, i.e. electrical rays smote the shoulders of the mighty (V_Ttra Tara) V_Ttra, the rain-cloud, and killed him.

(RV. II.32.5)

As a man, whose limbs are cut into pieces with a sword, falls on the ground, so Ahi, the rain-cloud, with his shoulders, hands and feet cut off by Indra, the sun, with his Vajra (electrical rays) falls down to the ground and lies prostrate there.

(RV. 1I.32.7)

According to the aphorism of Pānini "the past tense denoted by "Lun", 'Lan' and 'Lit' indicates optionally all tenses "in the Vedas.

(P. III.4.6)

Here 'Lan' (past tense) expresses present-indefinite tense. Thus 'Asayat' (i.e. slept) means here 'sleeps' only.

According to the Nighantu (cited above) Vrtra means rain-cloud. One, whose destroyer is Indra, is Vrtra. Indra, the sun, is his destroyer. Tvaṣṭā is the sun. His offspring is the Asura—the rain-cloud. Because, after the juices and waters are transformed into atomic particles and carried up into the sky, they again unite and assume the form of a cloud. It is called Asura. The sun, again, breaks them into drops and throws them down on the earth (in the form of rain). This water penetrates into the earth or causes the rivers to flow. It goes to the ocean and ^{(24) &}quot;वृत्रं जधन्वान् अप ववार तत् । वृत्रो वृणोतेर्वा वर्त्ततेर्वा वर्धतेर्वा । यदवृणोत् तद् वृत्रस्य बृत्रस्यमिति विज्ञायते । यदवर्त्तंत तद् वृत्रस्य वृत्रत्वमिति विज्ञायते । यद् अवर्धतं तद् वृत्तस्य वृत्रत्वमिति विज्ञायते ॥" (N. II.17) accumulates there. It again climbs up the sky. This water is Vrtra, whom Indra, the sun, again strikes down.

^{ &}quot;छन्दसि लुङ् लङ् लिटः ॥" (P. III.4.6)

The rain-cloud is called V_{rtra} because it is acceptable (derived) from $\sqrt{V_r}$ 'to select' by men or because it covers the light of the sun (from $\sqrt{V_r}t$ 'to conceal') or because it grows in size (from $\sqrt{V_r}dh$ 'to grow in size').

- (25) "The waters bear off the nameless body of Vrtra, rolled in the midst of never ceasing, never resting currents. The foe of Indra has slept along a long darkness." (RV. I.32 10)
- (26) "Neither the lightning, nor the thunder (discharged by Vrtra), nor the hailstorm which he spread, nor the thunder-bolt, harmed Indra, when he and Ahi strove in battle, Maghavat gained victory for ever." (RV. 1.32.13)

EXPLANATION

There are numerous such verses in the Vedas on this topic. (The following pieces of evidence also support our view):—

(25) "अर्थिष्ठन्तीनामनिवेशनानां काष्ठांनां मध्ये निहितं शरीरम् । वृत्रस्यं निष्यं विचंयुन्त्यापो दीर्घं तम् आर्थयुदिन्दंशतः ॥"

(RV. I.32.10)

- (a) Atisthantinām: Never stopping. A+ √Stha 'to stay'.
- (b) Aniveśananam: Yaska says—Asthavaraṇam (N. II.16), i.e. never resting or ever flowing.
- (c) Kāṣṭha : Waters, cf. N. II.16.
- (d) Ninyam: Nir-nāmam, i.e. nameless (Yāska).
- (26) "नास्मै विद्युन्न तेन्युतुः सिषेभ्र न यां मिह्मिकिरर्ध्ध्रादुनि च । इन्द्रेश्च यद् युद्धाते अहिंश्चोतापुरीभ्यों मुघवा विजिग्ये ॥"

(RV. I.32.13)

(a) Maghavā: Bounteous. Magha is the synonym of wealth (Yāska), i.e., possessor of riches. Lord of wealth. By releasing rain-waters Indra causes rich harvest.

(27) "This verily is Vrtra, because he (Vrtra) sleeps, enveloping the whole world or because the heaven and the earth remain in him. As he covers the whole world and sleeps, he is called Vṛtra. Indra killed him. His dead body emitted bad smell all around. In the form of waters he (fell and) spread every where. He went to ocean. These waters (there) in the ocean became dreadful. These waters ascended up and up (and became clouds again). From these (rain-waters) were produced the Kuśa grass. These (terrestrial) waters are impure. The stench produced by (the dead corpse of) Vrtra remained mixed in the waters. That unholy (stench or impurity due to the contact with Vrtra's dead body) element from the water was removed by these two Pavitras (made of Kuśa grass). He (the priest) sprinkles with these Pavitras sacrificial (holy) waters and the waters are purified by these two Pavitras."

(SB. I.1.3.4.5)

(28) "According to the etymologists there are only three Devatās.

Fire is terrestrial, wind or Indra of intermediary space, and the sun is of the bright firmament." (N. VII.5)

EXPLANATION

The watery body of $V_r tra$, (i.e. rain-cloud) bears off the deep darkness. Hence, $V_r tra$, when killed by Indra, sleeps on the earth.

(RV. I.32.10)

Vrtra, with his illusive form hurled upon Indra (the sun) his lightning and thunderbolt, which could not hold Indra in check. Ahi, the rain-cloud and Indra, the sun, strove in battle against each other.

^{(27) &}quot;वृत्रो ह वा इव¹⁹ सर्वं वृत्त्वा शिष्ये । यदिदमन्तरेण द्यावापृथिवो । स यदिद¹⁹ सर्वं वृत्त्वा शिष्ये तस्माद् वृत्रो नाम ॥ ४ ॥ तिमन्द्रो जघान । स हत: पूतिः सर्वतः एवाऽपोऽभिः प्रसुस्नाव । सर्वंत इव यह्य¹⁹ समुद्रस्तस्मादु हैका आपो वीभारतां चिक्तरे । ता उपर्य्युपरि अतिष्विरेऽत इमे दर्भास्ता हैता अनापूर्यिता आपो अस्ति वा इतरासु स¹⁹मृष्टिमिव, यदेना वृत्रः पूर्तिरिम प्रास्तवत् । तदेवासामेताभ्यां पवित्राभ्यामपहत्त्वय मेध्याभिरेवाद्भिः प्रोक्षति ॥ तस्मात् वा एताभ्यामृत्युनाति ॥'' (SB. I.1.3.4.5)

^{(28) &}quot;तिस्र एव देवता इति नैरुक्ताः । अग्निः पृथिवीस्थानः वायुर्वा इन्द्रो वान्तरिक्ष-स्थानः । सूर्यो खुस्थानः ॥" (N. VII.5)

When $V_{r}tra$ advances, he cuts off the light of the sun. When the sun's scorching forces prevail, the sun puts off the $V_{r}tra$, the rain-cloud. Ultimately, Maghvat (i.e. the sun) defeats $V_{r}tra$. Only Indra triumphs and not $V_{r}tra$. (RV. 1.32.13)

This Vṛtra covers the whole world and sleeps over it. Therefore he is Vṛtra, the enveloper. Indra, the sun, annihilated him (the rain cloud). Being annihilated he collapsed to the ground, then coming into contact with vegetation, emitted a stench. He ascended again and spread all around. He fell down in the form of (torrent) rain. This dead Vṛtra reaches ocean and becomes dreadful there. Hence, the waters in ocean are fear-inspiring. In this way, the waters of ocean, rivers and lands, through the sun, rise up into the sky again and again and fall as rain. From these waters are produced all vegetables, e.g. (Kuśa grass).

(SB. I.1.3.4.5)

The air and Indra (the sun) are of intermediary region and the sun belongs to the celestial region, i.e., resides in light. (N. VII.5)

In spite of the fact that there are most excellent allegorical stories in the true Scriptures, the so called ancient books, the Purāṇas, which are of very recent origin, narrate false stories; good men should not attach importance to them.

(D) STORY OF DEVA-ASURA WAR

In the same manner, there are various imaginary stories of the wars between the Devas and the Asuras, which are in the perverted form altogether in the recent books. These should not be accepted as true by the technical (lit. wise) or laymen, because they are also figurative and allegorical. For instance:—

- (29) "Devas and Asuras were busy in battles." (SB. XIII.9.1)
- (30) "O Devas! may we vanquish the Asuras." (RV. X.54.4)
 Asuras are so called because they are not properly busy in their duties (A+Su+Ratah—Sthaneşu: posts, i.e., duties) or they are demoted (or lit.—thrown down) by the Devas. (From the ^{(29) &}quot;देवासुरा: संवत्ता ग्रासन् ॥" (SB. XIII.3.9.1)

^{(30) &#}x27;'असुरानि ममबैम देवा:।'' असुरा असुरता स्थानेष्वस्ताः स्थानेष्य इति वापि वासुरिति प्राणनामास्तः शरीरे भवति, तेन तद्वन्तः। सोर्देवानमुजत तत्सुराणा सुरत्वम्। असोरसुरानमुजत तदसुराणामसुरत्वमिति विज्ञायते।।'' (N. III.8)

root As 'to throw'); or the word Asu is a synonym of Prana (i.e. breath) because the Prana, as if it were, appears to be thrown into the body. The possessors of the Prana are Asuras (i.e. Asu Ra). It is known from (the Brahmanas) that (Projāpati) created Suras (i.e. gods) from His Su (i.e. Self). This is the characteristic of the Suras. The Asuras were created from Asu (i.e. His breath). This is the characteristic of the Asuras."

- (31) "The great and absolute wisdom is the nature of the Devas." (RV.III.55.19 and AV.XVIII.1.5). The word Asura means a person endowed with intelligence or having Asu (i.e. Prāṇa, i.e., breath) or else the word Asu may be taken as a synonym of Prajñā (i.e. intelligence). It wards off the misery (i.e. from the root As 'to throw') or in it, all objects are shrined. The word 'Asuratva' is (changed into) Suratva by eliding 'A'." (N. X.34)
- (32) "He (i.e. Prajāpati), desirous of progeny, took pains and moved about. He set procreation in his Self. By his mouth, he created Devas. These 'Devas' were created in the bright firmament (or in light). The characteristic of Devas is that they were created in luminous region. He had to reside in upper region for procreation of gods. This is the very characteristic of the Devas that they came into existence in bright regions. Moreover, there is a mute Prana. By that Asuras were created. They were created on this very earth. When he was busy in creation, darkness enveloped him. He found that only the sin has been brought into existence as darkness prevailed when he was busy in creation. He (Prajapati) tortured them (Asuras) on account of their sins. For this reason, they were defeated. Hence the war between Devas and Asuras is nothing. The purport of the legend is that those who commit sins are afflicted and defeated. Therefore, the Seer says, "Never was there any day, when you did wage war. You have no enemy O Maghavat! All these war-descriptions are only allegorical. There is no enemy today or in the yore against whom you did (actually) fight."

And as he resided in bright regions when he created the Devas; hence (for them) he created the day and as darkness prevailed when he created the Asuras; hence this night came into existence. Such are the day and night. Thus observed Prajapati." (SB. XI.1.6.7,8,9,10,11,12)

EXPLANATION

The Devas and the Asuras waged war against each other.

(SB. XIII.3.9.1)

Now who are the Devas and the Asuras? Here our reply is, "The learned are the Devas (SB. III.7.6.10.)*". Verily the learned are the Devas and the ignorant are the Asuras. Devas shine with their knowledge (from the root Div 'to shine'). The ignorant are enveloped in the darkness of ignorance. Naturally there is a war between them always. This is the war between the Devas and the Asuras.

According to the following citation from the Satapatha, those who speak truth, believe in truth and act on truth are the Devas. Those who indulge in falsehood, believe in it and act on falsehood are the Asuras (or men):—

(38) "I here are only two ways and not the third. Truth and falsehood. Truth is (the lot) of the Devas and the falsehood, of the men." "From falsehood, I go to truth" means that I assume the character of the Devas and cast off the human one. He should always speak the truth. Devas adhere to vow which is truth. Hence, there is glory and name for thee. He who knows thus speaks the truth. The Devas are the mind of men." (SB. I-1.1.4, 5, 7)

The mutual conflict between these two (i e. the truth-loving people and the men addicted to falsehood) is nothing less than a war. The mind of man is the Deva and the Pranas are the Asuras. There is a conflict between these two also. Mind, with a force of spiritual knowledge, subdues the Pranas while the Pranas with their power keep the mind in check. It is a war between these two.

^{(37) &}quot;प्राणी वाड्यु: तस्येषा माया ॥" (SB. VI.6.4.6)

^{*} Cited above. "विद्वाधती हि देवा: ॥" (SB. III 7.6.10)

^{(38) &}quot;द्वयं वा इदं न तृतीयमस्ति । सत्यं चैवानृतं च । सत्यं देवा अनृतं मनुष्याः । "इक्ष्महमनृतात् सत्यमृपैमि" इति तन्मनुष्येम्यो देवानुपैति । स वै सत्यमेव वदेत् । एतद्ध वै देवा वतं चरन्ति यत्सत्यं तस्मात्ते यशो यशो ह मवित । य एवं विद्वान् सत्यं वदित । मनो ह वै देवा मनुष्यस्य ॥"

God created the Devas, i.e. five organs of senses and mind as the sixth, out of Su, i.e. the light. Hence, they are illuminating. He created the Asura, i.e. five organs of actions and the vital airs ($Pr\bar{a}\eta as$) out of $^4A-su^2$, i.e. darkness, which means the terrestrial substance. These also are warring against each other because there is a struggle between light and darkness. (SB I.1.1.4, 5, 7)

Desirous of procreation God Prajapati created from the cause, through His principal attributes and actions, the atoms of fire, the luminous regions, i.e., the sun and others. These bright regions are the Devas (i.e. the shining ones). Because of their brilliance created by God, all worldly transactions were made possible which need light. This is characteristic of the Devas as they rejoice and move in light. After this, God created the Prana+Vayu (i.e. vital airs) and the spacious globes, the earth &c., which are (comparatively) later. He created these Asuras which possessed no light. These (Asuras) pertaining to the earth produced vegetables, medicines &c. All these are effects and devoid of light. There is a (practical) war between these bright and opaque substances. This also is a war between the Devas and the Asuras.

Similarly the righteous person is Deva and the vicious one is Asura. There is a daily struggle going on between these two also on account of their contrary habits. This again is a war between the Devas and the Asuras.

In the same manner, the day is a Deva and the night an Asura. Their conflict also is like a (regular) war.

Both the Devas and the Asuras are the offsprings of God as stated above. Hence, they are entitled to God's things. (SB. XI.1.6.7-12)

Between the two (i.e. the Devas and the Asuras), the Asuras, i.e., the Prāṇas &c., are elder because the air is the earlier creation than the light and the Prāṇas are a form of air. Similarly all men are born ignorant and attain knowledge afterwards, and because fire was created from air and the organs of sense were produced from Prakṛti. Therefore, the Asuras are elder and the Devas are younger. In one case, the Devas, the sun &c., are younger. All these are like the offsprings of Prajāpati because all of them were created by Him.

There is a war between them also. Those persons who care only for their own selfish interest are busy in pampering their own bodies, and are crafty and hyppocrites, are the Asuras; and those who always look towards others' benefits, assuage the pains of others, are free from guile and are righteous, should be deemed as Devas. There is a regular war, as if it were, between these two also.

The war between the Devas and the Asuras is of these and similar kinds.

As the excellently beautiful allegory based on Metaphor is depicted in the true scriptures for the purpose of imparting (scientific) knowledge, the wise should never attach importance to the false narratives given in the Puranas (the so called ancient mythological works) which are erroneously so called and in other recent works, e.g., the Tantras.

These (Pauranic) fables are not true.

(E) STORY OF KAŚYAPA

Similarly, the stories of Kaśyapa, and places of pilgrimage like Gaya &c., narrated in the Brahmavaivarta and other works, are opposed to the Vedas and other true scriptures. For instance, there was a Seer (Rsi) by name Kaśyapa, the son of Marīci. Prajāpati by name Dakṣa gave away his thirteen daughters to him in marriage, according to the law. He begot the Daityas on Diti, the Adityas (the sun & other gods) on Aditi, the Dānavas (giants) on Danu, the serpents on Kadrū, the birds on Vinata and the monkeys, bears, trees, grass &c. on others. All such tales are mythical and false, full of darkness, opposed to reason, evidence and knowledge and are impossible. The following evidence supports it:—

(39) "His name (epithet) is Kūrma. The Lord of Creatures (Prajāpati) created all living beings. The creator means doer. As He (God) is doer, He is called Kūrma (from the root Kṛ 'to do'). Kaśyapa verily is Kūrma. Therefore it is said that all creatures are Kāśyapīs, i.e., generated by Kaśyapa (God)." (SB. VII.5,1.5)

EXPLANATION

God creates this whole universe. Hence He is called Kūrma. According to (the statement) that 'Kaśyapa is verily Kūrma' (cited above), Kaśyapa is an epithet of God. He alone has produced all living beings. Hence, all creatures are called 'Kāśyapīs' (i.e. offsprings of Kaśyapa). God is so called because (etymologically) Kaśyapa is one who sees. Being ^{(39) &}quot;स यत् कूर्मो नाम । प्रजापितः प्रजाः अमुजत । यदमुजत । तद् यदकरीत् तस्मात् कूर्मः । कश्यपो व कूर्मः, तस्मादाहुः सर्वाः प्रजाः काश्यप्यः । इति ॥" (SB. VII,5.1.5)

Omniscient He knows perfectly (the minutest substance of) the whole universe without an error. Hence, He is called Pasyaka, the Seer. By the interchange of the first and the last letters (i.e. Pa and Ka) Pasyaka assumes the form of Kasyapa as Hinsa becomes Sinha and Kratu becomes Tarku. This is in accordance with the authority of the Mahābhāsya on (the aphorisms of) Hayavarat. Hence, it has been concluded that all creatures are progeny of Kasyapa (God).

(F) GAYADI TIRTHA STORY

(40) "Prāṇa verily is strength. It is based on Prāṇa. Therefore, they say that the strength becomes brighter with truth. Dressed in this manner (i.e. enveloped in vital strength of truth) Gāyatrī becomes established in Self. Such she (i.e. Gāyatrī) reaches home (Gayān). Prāṇas are verily (her) home (Gaya). Thus Gāyatrī attains Prāṇas. As Gāyatrī attains Gaya (i.e. homej), she is called Gāyatrī (i.e. Gayātri)."

(SB. XIV.8.1.6.7)

- (41) "The Attratra, being a part of the Prāyanīya Sacrifice is a Tīrtha. By Tīrtha (i.e. holy water) bath is taken. The Attratra in the Udayanīya is verily a Tīrtha. Because a Tīrtha is a means of bath." (SB. XII.2.5.1.5)
- (42) "Gaya is the synonym of Apatya (i.e. offspring)." (N. III.4)
- (43) "Harmlessness to all beings (is a Dharma) leaving aside the Tīrthas (i.e. true scriptures)." (CHU. VIII.15)
- (44) "The (suffix) 'Ya' is added to the word 'Samān-Tīrtha' (in the locative sense) in the sense of residing." (P. IV.4.107) (Here the word 'Tīrtha' means teacher).
- (40) ''प्राणो वै बलम् । तत्प्राणो प्रतिष्ठितम् । तस्मावाहुर्बल¹⁹सत्यादोजीयः । इत्येवं वेषा गायत्री अध्यात्मं प्रतिष्ठिता । साहैषा गर्यास्तत् । प्राणा वै गयास्तत् प्राणांस्तत्रे । तद् यद् गर्यास्तत् तस्मात् गायत्री नाम ।।''
 (SB. XIV.8.1.6.7)
- (41) "तीर्थमेव प्रायणीयोऽतिरात्रः । तीर्थेन हि प्रस्नान्ति । तीर्थमेव उदयनीयोऽति-रात्रः । तीर्थेन हि उत्स्नान्ति ॥" (SB. XII.2.5.1.5)
- (42) See Nighantu (III.4) गय इति अपत्यनामसु पठितम् । (N. II.2)
- (43) ''अहि¹⁹सन् सर्वभूतानि अन्यत्र तीर्थेभ्यः ॥'' (CHU. VIII.15)
- (44) "समानतीय वासी ॥" (P. IV.4.107)

The example is Satīrthya (i.e. person residing with the one and the same teacher for their studies), i.e., a religious student (Brahmacārin).

(45) "There are three (categories of) the graduates (Snātakas): Vidyā-Snātaka, Vrata-Snātaka and Vidyā-Vrata-Snātaka. He who completes the learning without finalising the vow (of celibacy) and returns (home) is called Vidyā-Snātaka."

(P. II.5.32,33,34)

- (46) "Homage to Tīrthya (i.e. the most sacred) God."

 (YV, XVI.42)
- (47) "Those, with arrows in their hand, and armed with swords, frequent the Tīrthas", (YV. XVI.61)
- (45) "वयः स्नातका भवन्ति । विद्यारनातको व्रतस्नातको विद्याव्रतस्नातकश्चेति । यो विद्यां समाप्य व्रतमसमाप्य समावत्तंते स विद्यास्नातकः ॥" (P. II.5.32.33.34)
- (46) "नमस्तीर्थ्याय ।" (YV. XV. [42)
- (47) "ये तीर्थानि प्रचरन्ति मृकाहस्ता निषङ्गिण:।" (YV. XVI.61)

Cur author has taken special pains to elucidate the meaning of the word Tīrtha by numerous quotations. Ford is not the only meaning of this word. The following are the meanings of this word according to citations above:—

(1) Atiratra Sacrifice (2) The sacred books (3) A teacher or a university (4) The Pranas (5) the Vedas (6) Knowledge or learning.

For the interested readers we give below other meanings of this very popular word Tirtha:—

- (a) Tr+Thak (U. II.7) i.e. a passage, road, way, ford.
- (b) A descent into a river; the stairs of a landing place (a Ghata in Hindi). Cf.: "कृततीर्थ: पयसामिवाशय: 1" (KI. 2.3)

 Here Tirtha means a remedy or means also. Cf.:

 "तीर्थं सर्वं विद्याचताराणाम 1" (KA. 44)
- (c) A holy place, a place of pilgrimage, a shrine. Cf.: 'शूचिमनो यद्यस्ति तीर्थेन किम्।' (BHS, II. 55)
- (d) A channel, medium, means, (Mal) (Contd.)

EXPLANATION

Now we shall throw some light (on the topic) that funeral oblations should be offered at Gayā. It is (very well) known that Prāṇa verily is a strength or power. It is the abode of knowledge of Self. God also dwells there (in Prāṇa) because Prāṇa is an epithet of God. The Gāyatrī is also based on Brahmavidyā (i.e. knowledge of the Supreme Self) and also the knowledge of the Self. This Gāyatrī is called Gayā. Gayā is the synonym of the Prāṇas, as it is stated that Prāṇas are verily Gayā. That 'one should perform Śrāddha at Gayā' means that men should strive to realise God through the Prāṇas restraining them by means of meditation, with unflinching faith in God. Gāyatrī is so called as it protects the Prāṇas (from ruin).

- (i) A source, origin.
- (j) A sacrifice.
- (k) A minister.
- (1) Advice, instruction.
- (m) A right place or moment.
- (n) A school of philosophy.
- (o) Menstrual courses of a woman.
- (p) A Brāhmaņa.
- (q) (In liturgical language) The path to the Altar between the Calval and Utkara.
- (r) Fire.
- (s) Ascertainment of a disease.
- (t) A science.
- (u) An auxiliary, a help, a person or official connected with the king and being in close attendance with him (the number being 15 on one side and 18 on enemy's side. See PT.),
- (v) An honorary affix added to the names of saints &c.

Similarly, the word 'Gaya' stands for a house, an offspring or for all people. Here all men should have a faith in them. Domestic duties should be performed with (perfect) faith. All men should have faith in them. Domestic duties are also essentially to be performed with devotion. Rendering faithful service to the father, the mother, the preceptor, the undated guests and other personages of veneration is also a Gaya Śraddha. It is also obligatory to faithfully provide education to one's own children and to benefit all other creatures. It is certain that by having faithfully performed these duties and by the acquisition of knowledge one can achieve the Visnu-pada (i. e. a station in the Omnipresent God) which is the other name of Emancipation or Salvation. Not understanding the significance of these two words (i.e. Visnu and Gaya) and through mistake, some selfish people have caused the human foot-prints engraved on a rock in the country of Magadha (Bihar) and have assigned it the name of Visnu-pada (i.e. Visnu's feet) and the place was given the name of Gaya. Such persons did it (to satisfy) their gourmandism. It is all futile; because Visnu-pada is the name of Salvation (Moksa) and the word Gaya means-Prana, home, and all living beings. Here, they are confused and deluded. The following evidence (supports) it :-

(48) "Vişnu traversed this (whole universe): thrice he planted His foot and the whole was collected in the dust of His foot-step."

(YV. V.15)

According to some, the phrase "thrice he planted his foot" (त्रेधानिदधेपदम्) is like an illusion to the fourth Avatāra of Vāmana. But it is a mistake. No mention is made of a king Bali or the Dwarf. These must have been subsequent grafts upon the original tradition of Visnu's three paces.

Commentators are not unanimous upon the meaning of the sentence, "thrice he planted his foot". According to Śākapūṇi, it was on earth, in the firmament, in heaven; according to Aurṇanābha on Samārohaṇa (i.e. the eastern mountain), on Viṣṇu-pada (i.e. the meridian sky) and Gayā-Śiras (i.e. the western mountain); thus identifying Viṣṇu with the Sun and his three paces with the rise, culmination, and setting of that luminary. The Scholiast referring it (in Yajurveda) explains them to imply the presence of Viṣṇu, i.e.

^{(48) &}quot;दृदं विष्णुविचेक्कमे ब्रेधा निर्देधे पुरम् । समृहस्य पा¹⁹सुरे ॥" (YV. V.15) Also found in RV. I.22.17.

(49) "Whatever is there, Viṣṇu (the sun) traverses it. 'Thrice he planted his foot', i. e. at three places. According to Śākapūṇi—on earth, in the medirian sky and in the heaven; and according to Aurṇanābha—at the eastern mountain, in the atmospherical space and at the western mountain. 'The whole collected in the dust of his footstep' is not seen or the particle 'Na' may mean a simile. The whole is not visible, as if it were, covered under the dust. The dust is called Pansu because it is generated by feet or being struck by feet they sleep or they are to be grinded by feet."

(N. XIII.19)

Not properly understanding the significance of this (citation) they erroneously propagated this story. For instance, Vişnu means All-pervading Supreme Lord; who is the Creator of this whole universe. He is also called Paşa. Here the author of the Nirukta says:—

(5')) "Viṣṇu is so called as He penetrates all things. The word Viṣṇu is from the root Viṣ 'to enter', i.e. he pervades (all this). The following verse is addressed to him." (N. XII.17)

EXPLANATION

The whole world that exists has been created by Vişiju (i.e. God) who is all-pervading (from the root Viş 'to pervade'). God being formless pervades this all. This verse refers to this theme. He traversed this threefold universe. The verb Vicakrame is from the root Kram 'to step forward'.

(Contd. from page 378)

All-pervading God in the three regions of earth, air and heaven, in the forms of Agni, Vayu and Surya (fire, wind and the sun) respectively.

There can be no doubt that the expression was originally allegorical and that it served as the ground-work of the Pauranika fiction of the Vamana or the Dwarf Incarnation. But Vedic God is Akaya, i.e., formless and never assumes incarnate body.

- (49) ''यदि किञ्च तद्विक्रमते विष्णुः । त्रेद्या निधत्ते पदम् । त्रेद्या भावाय । पृथिव्यामन्तरिक्षे दिवीति शाकपूणिः । समारोहणे विष्णुपदे गयशिर्यस इत्यौणंवामः । समूदमस्य पांसुरेऽप्यायनेऽन्तरिक्षे पदं न दृश्यते । स्रिप वोपमार्थे स्यात् । समूदमस्य पांसुल इव पदं न दृश्यत इति । पांसवः पादः सूयन्ते इति वा । पन्ताः शेरते इति वा । पंसनीया भवन्ति इति वा ।" (N. XII.19)
- (50) ''यद् विषितो भवित विष्णु: भवित । विष्णुविशतेर्वा । व्यश्नोतेर्वा । तस्यैषा भवित ।'' (N. XII.17)

The word 'Pada' means the atoms of Prakrti and the minutest aspects of his power (Sva Sāmarthya-ansa). The world is called here by the word 'Pada', i.e., as it contains all the desired objects. This world and all the created objects came into existence with the atoms (Padas) of Prakrti (supported by) His own power by God. Three regions have been allotted to them, i.e., all the heavy and opaque things were assigned to the earth, the light substances evolved from the atoms of air &c. were established in the intermediary space, and the luminous objects, e.g., the sun, the sense-organs, Jīva &c. were given a place in the shining heaven. Thus God created this threefold world. The portion (of this world) which has no consciousness and knowledge has been attributed to the intermediary region in the form of atoms. All the globes are established in the intermediary regions. This act of God deserves admiration and thanks from us.

The same idea has been explained by Yāskācārya in the following words: Whatever exists in this whole world has been created by All-pervading (Viṣṇu). He created three regions for the establishment of the threefold world. The Viṣṇu Pada (i.e. the station of Viṣṇu) called by another name as Mokṣa (i.e. Emancipation) can only be achieved through Gaya, i.e. Prāṇas; because the best part of the corporeal form of all beings and the material abode of the vital airs is head. The power of God is unlimited. It exists in the Viṣṇu Pada and in the Prāṇas (Gaya). This universe being pervaded by God (Viṣṇu) exists in the all-pervading Omnipresent Soul.* The invisible world which still continues to remain in the atomic state resides in the intermediary space. The word Pansura has been taken here in the sense of Pyāyana or Antarikṣa, i.e., the intermediary region and the word

^{*} Swāmī Dayānanda has interpreted this verse in Ādhyātmika sense. According to him, the words Samīrohaṇa, Viśṇu Pada and Gaya-Śiras mean worth-climbing, Mokṣa and the Prāṇas respectively. Hs also takes Viṣṇu in the sense of God. Yāska interprets Viṣṇu as the Sun. His words are not ambiguous. Durga has clearly explained these words as—

⁽b) Viśnu Pada: The meridian sky.

⁽c) Gaya-siras : Western mountain. Thus the sun plants his foot in three places.

This meaning is also quite logical and understandable. The verse refers to Viṣṇu who is none else than the Sun. The sun places his foot (ray) thrice; first on Samārohaṇa, i.e. the eastern mountain, then on Viṣṇu Pada, i.e., meridian sky and third on the Gaya-siras, i.e., on the western mountains.

Pada in the sense of Paramanus (i.e. atoms). The Pansura also means dust It is so called because it is generated by foot.

Thus all the substances, even having assumed the visible form continu to reside in God.

(N. XII.19

Thus it must be borne in mind that the so-called Panditas, not under standing the exact sense of this (Vedic text), gave currency to the false stories

Similarly, the Tīrthas which were accepted and observed by the Aryas according to the Vedic ordinances, were quite different from those which consist of places and rivers &c. (described in the books composed by the confused people). It should be rightly understood that such Tīrthas have not been sanctioned in the Vedas. The Vedic Tīrthas are those by which men can free themselves from all afflictions and miseries. They provide all sorts of pleasures to mankind. They are as follows:—

Tirtham-Eva Prayaniya (i.e. Prayaniya is verily a Tirtha).

The ablution or the ceremonial bath after completing the vow called Atiratra which is a part of the Prayaniya Sacrifice, is a Tirtha. By taking bath in this Tīrtha people become pure. Similarly, the bath taken after going through the act of Universal benefit, connected with the Yajñas called 'the Udayanīya', is also a Tīrtha. They are called Tīrthas because they help a man to cross the ocean of calamities. A man, being harmless to all beings, should behave with others in the manner which is free from prejudice and inimical consideration. Harmlessness towards others is a righteous conduct in matters not opposed to the Vedas and other Sastras, which are Tirthas. One has to give pain only where it has a sanction behind, i.e., hence the punishment of the offenders and the guilty is a Dharma (Duty). But those hypocrites who are enemies of the observance of the injunctions laid down in the Vedas and also the thieves, etc., are to be killed (or punished) according to their offence. In such contexts the name of the Tirtha has been assigned to the Vedas and the other Sastras. People cross the ocean of afflictions by studying and teaching them and faithfully performing the deeds and duties laid down therein which are based on the knowledge (of these Sastras). By taking an adequate bath therein a man is purged of the sins.

Similarly, in the aphorism of (Pānini), 'Living in the common Tīrtha', the word Tīrtha stands for the common preceptor of two religious students and also for the same Śāstra which is read by both alike. Again men cross the sea of troubles by rendering proper service to the mothers, fathers and the undated guests, and by securing good education and knowledge. Men should become pure by taking a bath in these Tīrthas.

There are three types of Snātakas (i.e. one who has undergone the ceremony of ablution at the end of his studies), who become pure by taking a bath in the Tīrthas, e.g., he who regularly prosecutes his studies to their finish and (thus) who takes a bath in the Tīrtha of learning only, even though he might not (be able to) succeed in his vow of Brahmacarya, is called Vidyā-Snātaka (i.e. one bathed in the Tīrtha of knowledge only). The second one is called the Vrata-Snātaka (i.e. he who having completed the vow of Brahmacarya in accordance with the rules becomes a house-holder without completing his learning). The third is the Vidyā-Vrata-Snātaka because he rightly pursues the rules of celibacy and also achieves knowledge of the Vedas and scriptures &c. before assuming the role of a house-holder. Such men, having adequately taken ablutions in the superiormost Tīrthas become purified in mind, words and deeds, practise the law of truth, secure extensive learning and devote themselves to the universal benefit.

"Obeisance to Tīrthya" means 'homage to God', because God resides in the Tīrthas called the Prāṇas, the Vedas, and the supreme knowledge.

The learned (Vidvān) who observe the Tirthas mentioned above, e.g., the study of Vedas, truthful speech &c., and who adhere to the aforesaid Brahmacarya achieve high power and are called Rudras. They are 'Sṛka Hastas', i.e. 'possess knowledge and philosophy as their hands.' They also hold the sword of doubt-cutting precepts (in their hands) and preach the truth.

According to the statement of the Brahmana, "I want to know about the Purusa (soul) described in the Upanisads", (the word Aupanisad) means God, i.e. explained in the Upanisads.

He (God), therefore, is called Tirthya, i.e. one to be realised in the Tirthas. God is the highest Tirtha, because He is, as if it were, they very self of all the devices for carrying men across the ocean of calamities and also because He at once runs to the rescue of His righteous devotees.

In this way all the Tīrthas have been explained.

- Q. (The word Tīrtha is from the root T_r 'to swim' or 'to go across', i.e. the tracts of land and water by which men cross). Why then tracts of land and water are not accepted as Tīrthas?
- A. The tracts of land and those of waters are not Tirthas because they do not help the man to cross over. They are powerless in this respect. They cannot be the means of crossing over (because they are the object of crossing over). Men go across the streams of water by means of conveyances, e.g., boats &c., or by (swimming with the help of) hands and feet. They (waters etc.) are the objects of action (i.e. used in accusative case) while the boat and other means are the instruments (i.e. in instrumental case). Men will surely meet the disastrous consequences and will be drowned in the waters if they do not traverse by feet or resort to swimming (lit.—use hands) or embark upon the boats &c. Thus in the opinion of the Aryas who adhere to (the teaching of) the Vedas, the title of the Tirtha cannot be assigned to Kāśi, Prayaga, Puśkara, the Ganga, the Yamuna and other rivers and the oceans and seas. They have been attributed the name of the Tirtha and have been popularly proclaimed as Tirthas in their books by (the selfish) people who were bereft of the Vedic knowledge, pamperers of their bodies, the (rigid) sectarians, the opponents of the Vedic path, and possessing little knowledge, for their own livelihood.

- Q. But the Vedas mention (the names of the rivers), e.g. the Ganga, Yamuna, Sarasvati and others in the verse (RV. VIII.5.6).* Why do not you accept them (as Tirtha)?
- A. I admit that they have the name of the rivers. These rivers have the name of Ganga and others but they are rivers only. The amount of benefit derived from them through the purifying qualities of water is accepted by me. They do not have the characteristic of destroying sins and carrying us across the calamities. The tracts of land and waters cannot claim that potency. Such efficacy is found only in the above-mentioned Tirthas.

Moreover, Gangā, Yamunā &c., are the names of the veins—Ida, Pingalā, Susumnā and Kūrma &c. Mind can be concentrated on God in the state of yogic meditation with (the help of) these (veins). The meditation of God wards off all sufferings and leads to final salvation. The Idā &c. are essential for concentrating and fixing the mind in trance. (Besides it) there is continuity (Anuvrtti) of God from the foregoing verses in this stanza. Similarly, in the statement of appendix, "Sita-asite

^{* &#}x27;'इमं मे गङ्गे यमुने सरस्वित ।'' (RV. VIII.5.6)

Yatra Sangathe &c.*" (i.e. where the white and the black mingle together), some take the words "Sita-asite" (white and black) in the sense of the Gangā and the Yamunā and the word "Sangathe" (i.e. mingle) in the sense of Prayāga where both the rivers have their confluence. But it is erroneous because men cannot attain 'Diva', i.e. Self-effulgent God, or soar into the solar region by taking bath in them but return to their homes. Thus the word 'Sita' (white) means here Ida and 'Asite' (black) indicates Pingalā. These two veins meet in the vein called Suṣumnā. The great Yogins by having a dip therein (i.e. Suṣumnā) achieve the bright region of Mokṣa and God and attain real knowledge. Hence, these veins are meant here and not the rivers. The following evidence supports (this interpretation):—

"Sita is the name of colour and its negative is Asita." (N. IX.26)

Sita means white and Asita is its negation (i.e. black). The Yogins by bathing at the place where the bright and the opaque objects, e.g. the sun and the earth &c., mingle in God's power, attain real knowledge and reach the above-mentioned bright region.

IMAGE WORSHIP AND NAME-KIRTANA

Similarly, the injunctions about the image -worship and the muttering of names &c. prescribed in the books called the Purāṇas and the Tantras &c. are not credible because all the Vedas and other true scriptures do not (accord) sanction to them. On the contrary there is a (positive) prohibition about them. For instance:—

- (51) "There is no counterpart of Him, whose glory verily is great. In the beginning there was (lit. arose) Hiranya Garbha etc.'. 'Let Him not harm me etc.'. 'Than whom there is no other born etc.' ". (YV. XXXII.3)
 - * ''सितासिते यत्र सङ्गथे ॥''
 The remaining part of the verse is :—
 ''तत्राप्लुतासो दिवमुत्पतन्ति । ये चैव तन्त्वं विसृजन्ति धीराः । ते जनासो भ्रमृततत्त्वं भजन्ते ॥'' (परिशिष्ट २२, Satavalekar edition)
 -  ''सितमिति वर्णनाम तत्प्रतिषेधोऽसितम् ॥'' (N. IX.26)
- (51) "न तस्यं प्रतिमाऽश्रेस्ति यस्य नामं मृहद् यशं: । हिर्ण्यगुर्मंऽश्त्येष मा मा हि⁹⁹सोदित्येषा यस्मान्न जातऽइत्येष: ॥" (YV. XXXII.3) (Contd.)

EXPLANATION

God is all perfect, unborn and formless. The muttering of His name is to obey His will, which brings great glory (and enables us) to perform the righteous deed and to speak truth. He is the birthplace, i.e. source of all luminaries, the sun &c. Before Him all men pray, "May He not harm us".

He never assumes a corporeal form because He is not born from any cause. He has no Pratimā, i.e. representative, image, measure, weight, size or counterpart, because He is incomparable, figureless, unmeasurable, formless and all-pervading.

The following evidence also refutes the idol-worship:-

(52) "He has environed. The bright, the bodiless, the woundless,
The sinewless, the pure, unpierced by evil;

Wise (Kari), intelligent, encompassing (Pari-bhū), Self-existent (Svaymbhū),

Appropriately He distributed objects (Arthan), through the eternal years." (YV. XXXX.8)

- (a) Pratimā: प्रतिमीयते यया सा। Prati+√Mān (to measure)+
 Kvip (P. III.2.178), i.e., likeness, image, something to measure with.
- (b) Iti: Thus, as mentioned in the part of the hymn commencing with (YV. XXV.10-13).

Three passages are referred to here which have occurred, respectively in YV. XXV.10-13; XIII.103; VIII.36-37; all celebrating the greatness of Prajapati or Purusa.

- (52) ''स पर्यगाच्छुकर्मकायमेत्रणमेस्नाविर्ण्णशुद्धमपोपिवद्धम् । कविमैनोषो पेरिभू: स्वयम्भू: यांथातथ्यतोऽर्थान् व्यवधाच्छाश्वतोभ्यः समोभ्यः ॥'' (YV. XXXX.8)
 - (a) The Bright etc.: Brahma, the Highest Essence, the Supreme Being. Sankara explains differently: He (the Atman) encompassed or pervaded all, being bright etc. Thus he puts these neuter gender adjectives in apposition to the masculine pronoun 'Sah'.

Mahidhara also gives this alternative explanation.

Griffith translates it as "He hath attained unto the Bright."

Bodiless, etc."

EXPLANATION

God is all-pervading, the witness of all (Manīṣī: Sarvasākṣī), presides over all (Paribhū) and has no beginning. He has, from all eternity, been teaching uncreated human souls, the true knowledge of things through the Vedas (His eternal knowledge) as He is Indwelling Ruler of all. He is Omnipresent, the most powerful, free from corporeal form and assuming birth. He, being undivisible, cannot be pierced into pieces. He is sinewless and veinless. Being faultless He is not to be pierced by evil. He alone is to be worshipped by all. (YV. XXXXX.8)

This verse also depicts God as bodiless and free from birth and death. This stanza, therefore, has no application or reference to idolworship.

- Q. Does the word Pratima (Image) occur in the Veda or not?
- A. It does occur.
- Q. What sense is there then in condemning (idol-worship)?
- A. The word Pratima does not mean there an idol or image. It means only a measure. Following are the pieces of evidence in support of this assertion:—
 - (53) "Thou, whom with reverence we approach, O Night, as model of the year, vouchsafe us children long to live, bless us with increase of wealth."

 (AV. III.10.3)
 - (54) "The measure is of Muhūrtas. Ten thousand and eight hundred (Muhūrtas) make a year." (SB. X. 3.2.20)
 - (53) "संवृत्स्ररस्यं प्रतिमां यां स्व। राज्युपास्महे । सा नु आर्थुव्मतीं प्रजां रायस्पोषेणु संग्रज ॥" (AV. III.10.3)
- (a) Samvatsarasya Pratimān: Model of the year; measure of the year. (Dayānanda)

The whole hymn (AV. III.10) is a prayer for a happy New Year. An early day of the New Year is regarded as indicative of the fortune of the whole twelve moths.

(54) ''मुहूत्तांनां प्रतिमा । ता दश च सहस्राण्यष्टौ च शतानि भवन्ति । एतावन्तो हि संवत्सरस्य मुहूर्ताः ॥'' (SB. X.3.2.20)

(55) "He, who is not to be revealed by speech and by whom the speech has been created, is God and not this whom the (people) here adore." (KU. I.1)

EXPLANATION

These (i.e. this and the subsequent four stanzas) five verses prohibit Image-worship. The learned hold (the night) as the measure (Pratima) of the year. May we also accept (the night) as such. There are 360 nights in a year. As the year is calculated by these nights so these nights are called Measure, i.e. Pratima. Let all men so strive that the nights may save our children long to live and bless us with strong health and wealth.

(AV. III.10.3)

The ten thousand and eight hundred (10,800) Muhūrtas (i.e. each Muhūrta has two Ghaţikās, i.e. 48 minutes) which make a year are also indicated by the word Pratimā. (SB. X. 3.2.20

O men! understand that Brahman is not the subject of (A-Sanskṛta) unrefined speech. But He knows the speech. This visible world is not Brahman. Thou shouldst adore Him alone as God whom the learned glorify and no other. Thou shouldst worship Him alone who is endowed with such qualities as given below. He is formless, omnlpresent, unborn, the controller of all, all-existence, all-consciousness and all-bliss. (KU. I.1)

- Q. But how will you explain the following phrases occurring in the Manusmrti:—
 - (56) "The breakers of Pratimas, i.e. idols." "One should go to the places of Devatās." "And worship of the Devatās." "The reviling of the Devatās." "The abodes of the Devatās." "The prohibition against the crossing of the shadows of the Devatās." "One should go round the Devatās clockwise (or keeping them to one's right." "In the proximity of the Devas and the Brāhmaṇas," and "The destroyer of the abodes of the Devatās."
- (55) ''यब् वाचान।म्युदितं येन वागम्युद्धते । तदेव ब्रह्म त्वं विद्धि नेदं यदिदमुपासते ॥'' (KU. I.1)
 - (56) "'प्रतिमानां च भेदक: । दैवतान्यभिगच्छेत् । 'देवताभ्यचंनं चैव ।' 'देवतानां च कृत्सनम्' । 'देवतायतनानि च' । 'देवतानां छायोल्लंघननिषेधः' । 'प्रदक्षिणानि कुर्वोत् । देवब्राह्मणसन्निधौ' । 'देवतागारभेदकान्' ॥''

- A. Here the word Pratima denotes "the weight or measure", e.g. a ratti, a masas, a seer &c. It is supported by the following evidence from Manu:—
 - (57) "The word Pratimana is (used in the sense of) weight. All weights should be precisely measured." (MS. VIII.403)

In accordance with this maxim of Manu the words Pratima and Pratimana are synonyms. It should clearly be kept in mind. Hence a punishment is prescribed for a person who does not keep standard weights, i.e. either lighter or heavier, than the standard ones. The learned are Devas. Their places of studies and teaching and also their abodes are called Daivatas (i.e. belonging to Devas). The words Deva and the Devata are synonyms. Their dwelling places are called Daivatas and homes (temples) of Devatas. The learned alone deserve reverence. None should deprecate them, cross their shadow or destroy their dwelling places. All should desire their proximity and take precepts (or justice) from them. All should (honour) the Devas by keeping them to their right and should themselves sit to their left.

Similarly, in other places where the words, Pratima, Deva, Devata-Ayatana &c., occur they should be taken in the sense given above. For economy of space all the senses of these words cannot be enumerated here. It will suffice to indicate that image-worship, the wearing of the Kanthi and the painting on the forehead (Tilaka) etc. are also prohibited.

PLANET WORSHIP

Similarly, men of immature wisdom (lit. childish intelligence) apply the verse "A Krsnena Rajasa" etc. (YV. XXX. 43) &c., which has already been explained in the Chapter on 'Attraction and Gravitation' and also a verse "Imam Devah Aspatnam" etc. (YV. IX.40) which has been explained under the caption of 'King's Duties' for alleviating the suffering created by the planets, the sun &c. This is their mistake because the meanings of these verses have nothing to do with them and these verses are not applicable there. (The other verses are given below):

(58) "Agni is head and height of Dyaus (i.e. the bright region). He is the lord of the earth. He quickens the seed of the waters."

(YV. III.12)

^{(57) &}quot;तुलामानं प्रतीमानं सर्वं च स्यात् मुलक्षितम् ॥" (MS. VIII,403)

^{(58) &#}x27;'श्रुग्निम्रुंद्वा दिवः क्कुत् पातें: पृथिव्याऽअयम् । अपूर्वा धिता जिन्दति ॥'' (YV. III.12) (Contd.)

(59) "Wake up O Agni, thou, and keep him watchful. May Desire and fruition (and) he conjoin together. All the Devas and the sacrificer be seated in this and in the higher regions."

(YV. XV.54)

EXPLANATION

Agni, i.e. God of terrestrial fire, is the guardian of both, the luminous and the opaque globes, and on account of being all-pervading is the protector of all things in all directions According to the aphorism (of Panini) that:—

(60) "The interchange (of letters etc.) is frequent (in the Vedas)."
(P. III.1.85)

The letter 'bha' is changed into 'ta' (in the word Kakut). The Lord of the universe and the terrestrial fire invigorate the waters and the vital airs (Pranas). In this manner, the fire in the form of electricity (and lightning) and the sun protect and agitate the abovementioned objects.

(YV. III.12)

(Contd. from Page 388)

This verse is also found in RV. VIII.44.16.

- (a) Apām Retānsi: Waters' seeds; as lightning, Agni impregantes the waters of the air. Sāyaņa explains it as "the moveable & immoveable production of the creative waters".
- (b) Agni: Self-effulgent God or the terrestrial fire.
- (c) Pati: Lord or the protector.
- (d) Kakut: Hump, height, peak. Dayananda makes it as Kakubh (directions) by changing 'T' into 'Bh'. (This word occurs in YV. III. 12 quoted above).
- (59) ''उर् बुध्यस्वान्ने प्रतिजागृह्यि त्वीमेष्टापूर्त्ते स⁹⁹सृंजेथाम्यं च । अस्मिन्त्स्धस्धे अष्युत्तेरस्मिन् विश्वे देवा यर्जमानश्च सोदत ॥' (YV. XV.54)
 - (a) Ud-Budhyasva: Wake up, be kindled, O Agni or be enlightened in our hearts, O God (Agni).
 - (b) Sadhasthe: In this region or in this world or in this body (birth)—(Dayananda).
 - (c) Adhi Uttarasmin: In the next birth (Dayananda) or in the higher region.
- (60) ''व्यत्ययो बहुलम् ॥'' (P. III.1.85)

O Agni! i.e. Supreme Lord! be bright in our hearts. Keep all living beings away from the darkness of ignorance and drowsiness. Awaken them in the glare of the sun of knowledge. O God! may this soul embodied as man procure the means and methods essential for the completion of virtues (Dharma), wealth, enjoyments and salvation. Kindly bestow upon him the desired bliss. May, through his industry and your help, the wish and fruition be united. May all the Devas and the sacrificers who serve them continue to exist, through Thy favour in the present as well as in the next world (i.e. birth) so that all sciences and knowledge may shine among us for ever. Here (in the verb Sidata) there is an interchange of Person according to Paṇini's aphorism:—

- (61) "There is a common interchange of words." (P. III.1.85)
- (62) "Grant us, O Brhaspati, born of truth, that wonderful treasure, which exceeds the merit of the foeman, which shines amongst men, which is endowed with lustre and which invigorates (its possessor) with might." (YV. XXVI.3)
- (63) "Prajāpati (i.e. the president of a country) by Brahma drank the essence from the foaming (Pari-Srutah) food, the princely power (Kṣatra), milk, Soma-juice. By Law (Ṣta) came truth

(a) Rta Prajāta: Born of truth; son of Law (Griffith), i.e. He who has his being in accordance with Rta, i.e. Right Truth, or eternal Law and order. Known through Rta, i.e. the Vedas, i.e. God (Dayānanda).

There are different interpretations of this verse. Sayana would prefer the sense which is given to the phrase 'Dravinam Citram', lit. 'various or wonderful wealth, in the Brahmana, which considers it to mean Brahma Varcas', the Brahmanical virtue or energy.

(63) ''ग्रन्तात् पर्स्नुतो रसं बर्धणा व्यपिबत् श्रुवं पयः सोमं प्रजापितः । ऋतेने स्त्यिनिद्ध्यं विपानि अनुकानस्यसः इन्द्रंस्येन्द्र्यिम् प्योऽप्रृतं मधुं ॥'' and Indra-power (mind), the pure bright (Śukra) drinking off (Vipānam) of juice."

The power of Indra is this sweet immortal milk." (YV. XIX.75)

EXPLANATION

O Lord and Protector of the Vedas! (Brhaspatt), O Essence of the Vedas! O Lord of the universe! bestow upon us, through Thy favour, the riches which provide means of performing many sacrifices (Yajñas), endowed with lustre of true dealings and is worth donating and is invigorating. It is wondrous and by possessing this wealth and knowledge, the princes, the merchants shine among the meritorious performers of sacrifices or in the various worlds.

This stanza depicts a prayer, which one should address to God.

(YV. XVI.3)

When or where, the President of the Assembly (Regal Officer), or a Kṣatriya whose mind is a home of knowledge on account of God's favour, the glorious and the Omnipresent Ruler, drinks with the scholars of the Vedic lore, the nectar-like juice of the herbs, e.g. Soma &c., the giver of qualities, e.g. intellect, happiness, bravery, prowess, firmness, vigour and high emprise, he secures worldly pleasures and joys of the next birth and becomes able to discharge precisely his official duties by means of the skill in the Vedas. His mind grows tranquil and is filled with pure knowledge of the Vedas and he becomes able to perform his official duties appropriately and the righteous discharge of duties provides him immediate happiness. He then desires pure food, is filled with the knowledge of the essence of all

(Contd. from page 390)

(a) Brahmaṇā: Through Brahman, i.e. the Vedas. Gāyatri (Mahīdhara); knower of the Vedas.

This verse describes the king's duties towards his subject (Dayānanda). Mahīdhara states that Adhvaryu reverently approaches the libation-cups of milk and Surā and recites eight verses, illustrative of separation, selection and rejection, with special reference to the Soma drink by Namuci, which though it had mixed with his blood was recovered in a pure state.

This interpretation of Mahīdhara is wrong. There is no interna or any authentic evidence to support this forged explanation. For it logical interpretation one has to give credit to Raī Dayānanda.

things, is endowed with sweet, true and just conduct and acquires the means of attaining salvation. God ordains that a king, holding the reins of administration, should govern the people in the manner given above and he should eat the nectar-like juice with his food. A king should so act that the maximum happiness be ensured to the people. (YV. XIX.75)

- (64) "May the 'Daivi-Apaḥ' (celestial water or the All-illuminating God), our helpers, be sweet for us to drink; and flow with health and vigour to us." (YV. XXXVI.12)
- (65) "By what means (of worship) may He, who is ever augmenting, who is wonderful and who is our friend, be gracious to us; by what most effective deeds." (YV. XXVII.39)
- (66) "O Mortals! (Men!) you are born (lit. were born) (daily) making light (Ketu) where there is no light and form where there is no form, with the Dawns." (YV. XXIX.37)
- (64) "शन्तों देवोर् मिर्च्युऽमापों मवन्तु पीतये । शंयोर् मिर्मन्तु नः ॥" (YV. XIX.75)
 - (a) Devih: From the root Div (to shine and sport). (Waters) belonging to bright regions.
 - (b) Apah: Waters. From the root Ap (to pervade). It means God as well, who pervades this universe. (Dayananda).
- (65) "कर्या निरच् तडमा । श्लेव दूती सुदार्नृष्टुः सर्खा । कर्या शचिष्ठया वृता ॥" (YV. XXVII.39)

This seems to be a popular stanza; it occurs in RV. IV.31.1; twice in SV. I.169; 232; once in YV. XXVIII.39 and once in AV. XX. 124.1.

- (a) Kaya: By what method of worship (Dayananda)? By what means?
- (b) Śacisthayā: In the form of righteous deed ("Sat-Karma").
 (Dayānanda)

 Most effective rite (Sāyaṇa),

 Mighty company (Griffith).
- (66) "केतुँ कृष्वन्नेकेतवे पेशों मर्घ्याऽम्रश्रेशसे । समुषद्भिरजायया: ॥" (YV. XXIX. 37) Also occurs in RV. I.6,3, (Contd.)

EXPLANATION

The word Apas is derived from the root 'Ap' 'to pervade'. It is always used in plural number and feminine gender.* The word Devi is formed from the root Div 'to sport' &c., May the All-pervading, All-illuminating Lord, who is bestower of happiness upon all, grant us joy and well being so that we may be able to obtain the desired delight and fullest happiness to our hearts' content. May that Omnipresent and All-glorious Lord be gracious to us and may He shower upon us happiness from all sides.

(YV. XXXVI.12)

The following evidence from the Vedas indicates that 'Apah' means God:—

(67) "Who out of many, tell me, is that Skambha, in whom men recognise Apah, Brahma, and in whom they know the worlds and their enclosures, and also in whom are existence and non existence."
(AV. X.7.10)

Dayānanda has quoted this and other verses, which are nine in number and which are used by the Paurānikas in the worship of nine planets which according to them exercise influence on human beings and bring good luck or miseries to them. Dayānanda has successfully proved here that these verses contain no reference—direct or indirect—to any planet. For instance 'Śani' (Saturn) is addressed by the verse YV. XXXVI. 12 where no name of Śani appears. It is quite clear from the meanings given above.

The last verse is addressed to the Sun, with whom Agni is identified here (in YV.). In the Rgveda, the Devatā of this verse is Indra. Indra is here identified with the Sun, whose morning rays may be said to renovate (reanimate) those who have been dead in sleep through the night. There is some difficulty in the construction; for "Martyāḥ" (i.e. Mortals) is plural with "Ajāyathāḥ" in the second person, singular of the first preterite. Sāyaṇa is of opinion that the want of concord is a Vaidika licence, and that the plural substantive "Martyāḥ" has been put for the singular 'Marya'.

- * Please see क्षीरतरिङ्गणी (V. 7).
- (67) 'यर्त्र लोकांश्च कोशांश्चायो ब्रह्म जनां विदु:। असंच्च यत्र सच्चान्त: स्कूम्भं तं ब्रैहि कत्म: स्विदेव सः ॥'' (AV. X.7.10)

EXPLANATION

The learned understand (Viduh) that Apah is the name of Brahman, in whom they know that all the regions and treasures (Loka and Kośas), the non-existence and existence, i.e. the perishable effect (the worlds) and the imperishable the (original) cause, find abode. O Learned man! we request you to let us know, who that mainstay of the universe among all the objects is. You should know that as the Lord of the universe, who is the indweller ruler of all, sustains the (all) Souls &c, and resides within all.

May the Supreme Lord endowed with wondrous might and bliss (Citrah), the augmentor of happiness (Sadā-vṛdha), be our friend and be manifest to us through the righteous (Sacisthaya) worship and through an assembly (Sabha) whose members are (known) for their good deeds in the highest degree and by righteous merits and are adorned with finest qualities. May the Lord of the universe graciously bring always to us succour and protect us. May we also worship Him with genuine love and devotion. (YV. XXVI.29)

O Mortals! O Men! God has provided you with knowledge (Ketu) and happiness yielding riches (Peŝas) to the extent of the world-empire for destroying ignorance (A-Ketu) and poverty (A-Peŝas), through the means of your association with the wise people who yearn (Uṣad) for the Supreme Lord and who obey His will.

(YV. XXIX.37)

- Q. Are all men (without any distinction of caste and creed) authorised to study the Vedas and other scriptures or are they not?
 - A. All men are authorised (to study the Vedas), because the Vedas being the word of God, are for the benefit of the whole humanity and because they reveal the true knowledge. We understand that whatever has been created by God is for the use of all. The following evidence supports this contention:—
 - (1) "I, to all the people, may address this salutary speech—to Brāhmanas and princes, Śūdra and Vaisya, to one of our owr kin and to the stranger. May I bear to Devas and guerdongiver. May this my hope be fulfilled. Be that my portion."

(YV. XXVI,2

EXPLANATION

The purpose of this stanza is as follows:-

r

ae

Here God ordains that all men should study and teach the Veds to all.

As I have proclaimed this salutary word, i.e. the Vedas, the &&c.,—for the benefit of all men and creatures, so all the learned me should teach these four Vedas to all men. If someone here were to se that the word "Dvija" (i.e. twice-born—i.e. Brāhmaṇa) has continuity the word "Jana" and thus the twice-born alone are authorised to studied and teach the Vedas, it would not be tenable, because it runs counter the meaning of the second half (of the verse). Having anticipated the question, "Who are authorised to study or to listen to the Vedas?" it said that these four Vedas should be taught and recited by all (to including) a Brāhmaṇa, a Prince, a Merchant, a Śūdra, an Ati-Śūdra, in Antyaja and to one's own kin and dependents, e.g. son and servant. As (God), without any favour or prejudice, administer good to all and the am dear to all the learned and generous persons who give away their entire belongings in charity; so all of you O Wise men! keeping in view the universal benefit and kind deeds to all, should proclaim the Vedic words to all. You should behave in the manner so that this my desire may be accomplished. By pursuing this path, your desire for the happiness you may have in your heart will be fulfilled. As I possess all desired bliss, so will you have all happiness—the object of your desires—. I give this blessing; rest assured. As I have revealed the Vedic knowledge for the benefit of all, so you all should also benefit by this. Let then not be any distinction there. My activity is free from prejudice and partiality and pertains to the doing of that which is pleasant to all. I can consequently be pleased if you act in accordance with that spirit alone.

This alone is the right explanation of this stanza because in the next verse "Grant us O Brhaspati etc." (YV. XXVI.3) only the meaning of God is taken.*

(YV. XXVI.2)

Moreover, the Varnas (e.g. Brahmana &c.) and the four stages of human life (Varnas) are determined by their (respective) characteristics, actions and (general) conduct (and not by birth). Here Manu says:—

(1) "A Śūdra becomes a Brāhmaņa and a Brāhmaņa, a Śūdra. Similarly, a son of a Kṣatriya and that of a Vaisya should be considered." (MS. X.65)

EXPLANATION

A Śūdra attains the status of a Brāhmaṇa and enjoys the privileges of a Brāhmaṇa, if he possesses the qualities of the latter, e.g., full knowledge and learning and a chaste conduct &c. In the same way a Brāhmaṇa goes down to the status of a Śūdra, if he has demerits of the latter, e.g. impure conduct, unrighteous practice, dullness of intellect, stupidity, dependence, the service of others, &c. The same (rule) is applicable to a person born of a Kṣatriya or of a Vaiśya. The idea is that a person attains that Varṇa whose characteristics one possesses. (MS. X.65)

[•] वृद्ध्यतेऽत्राति यद्ध्यं (YV. XXVI.3). This verse has already been translated and explained under the topic of "Authoritativeness or otherwise of Books", on page 390.

^{(1) &#}x27;'शूद्रो ब्राह्मणतामेति ब्राह्मणश्चैति शूद्रताम् । क्षत्रियाज्जातमेवन्तु विद्यात् वैश्यात्तथैव च ॥'' (MS. X.65)

The similar things have been stated in the aphorisms of Apastamba:-

(2) "By practising the righteous deeds a man of low Varņa attains the status of the higher and the higher Varņa, when (his) Jāti is changed. A man of a higher Varņa goes down to a lower and a lower Varņa with the change of Varņa by practising unrighteous deeds."

(APB. II.5.10,11)

EXPLANATION

By the truthful and righteous conduct, a Śūdra fully acquires (the status of) a Vaiśya, a Kṣatriya and a Brāhmaṇa (by degrees), i.e. he assumes all rights thereof. The phrase 'on change of caste' denotes that he is entitled to all functions, rights and modes of life of those (higher) Varnas. Similarly, a man (or woman) belonging to the highest order of the caste, i.e. Brāhmaṇa, by acting contrary to Dharma falls to the status of the lower caste, i.e. the Kṣatriya, Vaiśya and Śūdra. The phrase 'on change of caste' is here also to be interpreted as above. This means that the righteous conduct is the only determining factor to achieve the higher order of the caste. Similarly, the unrighteous conduct brings a man to the lower status.

Wherever, such expressions as 'a Śūdra should not be taught and is not permitted to hear (the Vedas) read out to him' are found, they mean that as a Śūdra is bereft of intelligence and is incapable of learning, remembering and thinking upon what he has read, it is useless and of no avail to teach him and cause him to learn (the Vedas or any other book).

THE METHOD OF STUDYING AND TEACHING THE VEDAS

In the very beginning of the study (a student) should be given a lesson on how to pronounce the letters in accordance with the science of Orthoepy $(Siks\bar{a})$ so that he may have a (correct) knowledge of (various) places and efforts of articulation together with their accents. In this way he will know precisely the method of pronouncing vowels and consonants. For instance, the letter 'P' must be pronounced with both the lips conjoined. The lips are its place of articulation and the (mutual) contact (of the lips) is the Prayatna (effort). The great thinker Patañjali, the author of the Mahābhāṣya says:—

(i) "A mispronounced or wrongly used word, being defective either in accent or in letter does not express the desired sense. This thunder-bolt of (defective) speech destroys the Sacrificer as the compound 'Indra-Satru' killed (Vrtra) because of wrong accent." (MB. I.1.1)

EXPLANATION

The letters are not distinctly audible and the words disappear to be elegant unless they are pronounced with due regard to Sthana (i.e. the place of articulation) and Prayatna (i.e. the articulative efforts). As a singer were to sing without adhering to the due regard to the tone such as $\int_{ad}j_a$, &c., he would be to blame. Similarly it is essential in the Vedic recitation, the accent and the letters should be pronounced with due regard to the Sthanas (i.e. places of articulation) and Prayatnas (i.e. articulative efforts); otherwise the mispronounced words may bring afflictions and disaster. If a man were to pronounce a word violating (the law of articulation), it would be his own fault and he is to be condemned. "Thou hast used the words wrongly." This improper use of words does not convey the desired meanings, i.e. Sakala as $akala$ and $Sakrt$ as $Sakrt$. Here the word *Sakala$ means 'whole' and $Sakala$ means 'a part'. sakrt denotes the sense of 'once' and $Sakrt$ that of ^{(1) &}quot;तुष्ट: शब्द: स्वरतो वर्णतो वा मिश्याप्रयुक्तो न तमर्थमाह । स वाग्वच्रो यजमानं हिनिह्त यथेन्द्रशत्रु: स्वरतोऽपराधात् ॥'' (MB. I.1.1)

^{*} Cf. : "यद्यपि बहुनाधीषे तथापि पठ पुत्र व्याकरणम् । स्वजन: श्वजनो मामृत् सकलं शकलं सकृत् शकृत् ॥"

'ordure'. It one were to pronounce 'S' as 'S' and 'S' as 'S', it would not convey the real meaning. This wrong speech becomes a thunderbolt, as if it were, to would destroy the real meaning. This injures the speaker as well as the Sacrificer or his master, i.e. deprives him of the meaning he desired to express. For instance, the compound 'Indra-Satru' denotes the reverse meaning if pronounced with wrong accent. Indra means solar region and Meghas (i.e. clouds) are its enemies, as if it were. If it be taken as a Tat puruşa compound, the accent would be on the final syllable and if it be taken as a Bahuvrihi compo und, the accent would be on the first syllable of the compound. It is a shpere of the poetic figure by name Tulyayogita according to which 'the clouds' and 'the sun' have been described. Thus (by a change of accent) it denotes two contrary meanings. In a Tat puruşa compound, the last member is predominant while in a Bahuvrīhi compound the chief thing is the external substance. Hence, he who wants to express the meaning of the Sun, should pronounce it with the accent on the last syllable and take it as a Tat puruşa. But he who desires it to express the clouds, should pronounce it with the accent on the first syllable and take it a Bahuvrihi. The man, who does it otherwise, is only to be censured. Consequently, the accents and the letters are to be pronounced rightly and precisely. (MB. I.1.1)

The instruction should also be imparted regarding the mode of speech, hearing, sitting, walking, rising, eating, reading, thinking and interpreting, &c. The supreme benefit is derived if a thing is read with a knowledge of its sense. But in comparison to a man who does not study or read at all; even he is to be preferred who recites without understanding its import. He who reads and understands the relative position of words and their imports is certainly superior (to a mere reader). And he, who having studied the Vedas and understood their imports, acquires meritorious qualities and conduct and thereby does good to all, is the best of all. The following are the pieces of evidence:—

- (2) "All the Devas take their repose upon the Most high, the Imperishable (Akşara) text of the Veda; but what will he, who knows not This, do with the Vedas? But they, who do know That, are perfect." (RV. I.164.39)
- (2) ''ऋ वो अक्षरें पर्मे व्योमृन् यहिंमन् देवा श्रिध विश्वे निपेदुः। यस्तन्त वेद किमूचा केरिष्यिति य इत्तद् विदुस्त हुमे समासते ॥'' (RV. I.164.39) (Contd.)

This verse looks to be very simple but some controversies have enveloped it. Griffith translates it:—

"Upon what syllable of holy praise-song, as it were, their highest heaven, the gods repose them,—
Who knows not this what will he do with praise-song!
But they who know it will sit here assembled."

According to him the syllable is the Praṇava, the mystical sacred syllable 'Om'. The translator means to say that all the praise songs (Ras) refer to and eulogise 'Om'. But the sense of query, found in interrogative interpretation, is without foundation. There is no word in the text denoting interrogation.

By the word 'Rcas' here, according to the Scholiast, is to be understood as all the Vedas; different meanings are, however, ascribed to both; this word, and the word Akṣaram by other commentators. Yāska writes various meanings of this word (N. XIII.10):—

- (a) कतमत्तदेवाक्षरम् । भ्रोमित्येषा वागिति शाकपूणिः ।
- (b) एतद्ध वा एतदक्षरं यत् सर्वा त्रयीं विद्यां प्रति—इति च ब्राह्मणम् ।
- (c) 'ब्रादित्य' इति पुत्रः शाकपूणे: ।

In the sense of the sun, the word Deva means 'solar rays'. Cf. : रश्मयोऽत्र देवा उच्यन्ते ।

Yāska (N. XIII.10) has given these three interpretations of the word 'Akṣara' here according to Etymologists. But in the 'Adhyatma' sense he says:—

''शरीरमत ऋगुच्यते यदनेनार्चंन्ति । प्रत्यूच: सर्वाणीन्द्रियाणि । तस्य यद् प्रविनाशि धर्म तदक्षरं भवति । इन्द्रियाण्यत्र देवा उच्यन्ते ।।'' (N. XIII.12)

The etymological explanation of this word is:

''अक्षरं = न क्षरति, न क्षीयते वा अक्षयो भवति । वाचोऽक्ष इति वा ॥'' (N. XIII.12)

But our author says that the word Reas, i.e. all the four Vedas, rest in the Supreme Soul, the imperishable one. I am, therefore, inclined to translate this verse as follows:—

"All Vedic statements (Reas) have their denotation in the most high (Parame), Imperishable (Akşara), Omnipresent God (Vyoman), (Contd.)

- (3) "He, who having read the Vedas does not know their meaning, is only a carrier of burden and is a (dead) post. He, who knows the import, enjoys all bliss and attains salvation (Nakam) with all sins purged off." (N. I.18)
- (4) "The recitation without understanding is only a (parrot) reading. A dry fuel, placed at the fireless place, does not get flames." (N. I.18)
- (5) "One (man) indeed seeing Speech has not seen her; another (man) hearing her has never heard her; but to another she delivers her person as a loving wife, well-attired presents herself to her husband."

 (RV. X.71.4)
- (6) "They call a man laggard, dull in friendship: they never urge him on to deeds of valour. He wanders on in profitless illusion: the Speech he heard yields neither fruit nor blossom." (RV. X.71.5)

(Contd.)

EXPLANATION

The (above-mentioned) verses censure reading without understanding the sense.

In the Brahman, who is imperishable (Akṣara), the highest (Parame) and omnipresent like Akaśa, are established the four Vedas. Here the word Rk denotes all the four Vedas, the Rg &c., in whom are placed all the Devas, i.e. the learned, the organs of action and cognition, all the globes, the sun &c. Brahman, i.e. God, is the only repose and shelter of all the (created) beings. What will he, who does not understand Him, and does not follow His will and obey His ordinance pertaining to universal benefit, do with the Rcas, i.e. the Vedas which he has read? He will never enjoy the (sweet) fruit of the knowledge derived from the imports of the Vedas. But they who know that Brahman, secure the fruit called Dharma (i.e. righteousness), Artha (i.e. riches), Kāma (i.e. desires) and Mokṣa (i.e. salvation). Hence, it is essential that the Vedas should be intelligently studied. (RV. I.164.39)

The man, who has simply read the Vedas and having read them does not understand their sense, and the man, who having understood (the sense of) the Vedas does not act in accordance with the teaching of the Vedas, is like the wooden post and is only the bearer of the burden, i.e. he is to be regarded as a lifeless dead log. As a man or an animal carrying the burden does relish it, i.e. clarified butter, sugar, musk, saffron &c., which being borne by him, are enjoyed by some other fortunate person; so a man who recites (a book) without knowing its import is like a (porter) who simply bears the burden. The man who reads intelligently knows the relation between the Vedic words and their meaning and acts righteously in accordance with the Vedic teaching becomes purged of all sins by virtue of knowledge and attains complete bliss even before death and leaving the human body secures the station in Brahman called Mokşa, i.e. Salvation which is absolutely free from all pains. (N. 1.18)

The fruit and flowers of the Speech, according to Yaska, are :—

(N. 1.20)

A man, who reads the Vedas without knowing their import and simply reads them, gets no illumination. Even a dry fuel, placed at a fireless place does not catch fire and produces no heat and light, so the mere reading without understanding it does not produce the light of knowledge.

(N. 1.18)

One man sees the Speech, i.e. he reads words yet he does not see it; i.e. he does not understand its meaning. The particle 'U' denotes speculation here. Yet another man pronounces the words yet he does not hear them, i.e. does not understand their sense. As the words, uttered and heard by these men, remain unknown to them, so reading without comprehending the sense of words is of no avail. In this manner, this hemistich narrates the characteristics of the ignorant. But to a man, who studies the Vedas with the (full) knowledge of their meaning, Speech, i.e. knowledge, reveals her secret Self, i.e. forms in various ways, as a loving wife attired in beautiful garments displays her person to her husband. In this way, to a man who reads the Vedas with an intelligent grasp of words, the knowledge reveals her person, i.e. her real form.

(RV. X.71.4)

The man, who is master of learning, who is expert in the art of creating friendly feelings amongst all (human) beings with his conduct (Sakhye); who through his righteous conduct has obtained salvation and communion with God and who (strives to) bestow the supreme bliss upon all, is called the friend of all. None dares to injure or harm such a learned man in any walk of life or transaction because he does good to all. No criticism or adverse interrogations or (unfriendly) behaviour from his rivals and foes can harm (or dishearten) a man who studies the Vedas with full cognition of their meaning, because he is endowed with true knowledge and good characteristics and because he possesses a desire-yielding (Kama-dhuk) speech containing true knowledge. Thus, the first hemistich of the verse eulogises the learned and the second hemistich describes the characteristics of the ignorant. An ignorant man, who uses (lit. hears) words which are devoid of (flowers and fruits in the form of) devotional actions, knowledge of the science of conduct, righteousness and knowledge of God, roams about in this world, accompanied with his deceptively illusive, meaningless, uninstructive and dubious speech. Such a man never accomplishes during the whole span of his life any good, either to his own self or to others. Hence, that study alone is the best, which precedes the cognition of its meaning.

(RV. X,71.5)

For the fuller understanding of the Vedic interpretation one should read the grammatical treatises, the Astadhyāyī and the Mahābhāṣysa; then the Vedāngas (i.e. the auxiliary sciences of the Vedas), the Nighantu (i.e. the Vedic lexicography), the Nirukta (i.e. Etymology), the prosody and the Jyotişa (i.e. astronomy); then the six sub-auxiliary sciences called the six Śāstras, viz., Mīmāmsā, Vaiśeṣika, Nyāya, Yoga, Sāmkhya and Vedānta and finally having studied the Brāhmaṇas, the Aitareya, the Śatapatha, the Sāma and the Gopatha, one should undertake the study of the Vedas; or else a layman should learn the meaning of the Vedas through the interpretations done by the scholars who have read all these abovementioned works.

It has been stated that "none can know the Supreme Being unless one knows the Vedas." According to this dictum, a man, who is ignorant of the teachings of the Vedas, is not competent to know the Supreme Lord, Dharma (i.e. the righteousness) and all the sciences, because the Vedas alone are the original sources of all the sciences. Without knowing the Vedas, none can acquire true knowledge. Whatever knowledge of the true sciences existed, exists and will be known in the books or human minds on the earth has its origin in the Vedas; for, all the exact and real knowledge has been enshrined in them by the Lord. The light of truth, wherever and in whatever form that has been shown, has sprung from the Vedas. ϕ

All men, therefore, should strive to understand the import of the Vedas.

CLEARING DOUBTS AGAINST PROJECTED BHĀŞYA

- Q. Are you going to write an (absolutely) new Bhāṣya (i.e. commen tary) or do you mean to reveal (through it) what was alread stated (and what now has become obsolete) by the ancient gree commentators? In the later case, it would not be acceptable as it would be to grind what has already been powdere (Piṣṭapeṣaṇa).
- A. I have to bring to light only what was written by the ancier scholars (Ācāryas), i.e. by the learned man (called Devas) of grea antiquity, for instance, the Aitareya and the Satapatha etc (being commentaries on the Vedas) written by the Rsis, beginnin with Brahmā and ending with Yājñavalkya, Vātsyāyana an Jaimini; the Vedic interpretations in the form of the auxiliary works (Angas of the Vedas) written by Pāṇini, Pataṇjali, Yāska and other great sages; the six Śāstras called the sub-limbs (Upāngas) of the Vedas, composed by Jaimini and others; the books styled as the Upa-Vedas and the works entitled as the branches (i.e recensions) of the Vedas.

The true interpretation (of the Vedas) will be based on their collective evidence. Nothing new will find place here which may be arbitrary and unauthentic.

- Q. What purpose will it serve?
- A. The commentaries composed by Rāvaṇa,* Uvaṭṭa, Sāyaṇa, Mahī dhara and others are contrary to the real import of (the Vedas) The partial interpretations written by English men, Germans and other Europeans, on the line of the above-mentioned (oriental scholars) in their respective languages and also the translations written or being written by the Indians following (the style) of the above-mentioned writers into Modern Indian languages are full of erroneous meanings. (the faulty) translations, when their mistakes and errors will be fully exposed.

For the economy of space, only a few defects and blemishes will be pointed out here by way of specimen, according to the maxim of the 'cooking-pot and boiled rice'.* For instance, Savana, not understanding the deep import of the Vedas, has stated that all the Vedas pertain to the ritual aspect. This is wrong. Because they are the home of all sciences. It has already been briefly established. One can clearly infer from that that his contention is baseless. Moreover, the interpretation of the verse, "Indram Mitram etc." (RV. I.164.46) (already explained) is mistaken. According to him the word 'Indra' is a noun, qualified by the words 'Mitra &c.'. But in reality all epithets, e.g. 'Indra' &c., qualify the noun 'Agni' which being associated with all other adjectives qualifies the eternal Brahman. According to the rule a substantive is united again and again with all adjectives respectively but adjectives are not repeated likewise (which qualify it). In this way, where there are a hundred or thousand adjectives which qualify a substantive, only the substantive is repeated again and again and adjectives are stated only once. Hence, the word Agni, in this verse, being a substantive has been spoken twice by God. Sayana, the great commentator, did not know it and consequently he fell in the error. The author of the Nirukta also has taken the word 'Agni' as substantive :

(1) "The wise describe this Agni, the one great universal Soul, in various ways as Mitra (i.e. the Friend of all) and Varuna (i.e. the Holiest) etc." (N. VII.18)

Agni (i.e. the Adorable One) is the name of the One (ultimate) Reality, i.e. the Supreme Being. Thus it may be borne in mind that the words Agni &c. are the (different) names of God.

Moreover (Sayana says that) God alone is invoked (everywhere) as a priest of a king keeps the interests of his master (always in view) in all his actions. But (contrary to this he adds that) in the

[•] The maxim of "the cooking-pot and the boiled rice" (स्याजी-पुलाक-म्याय): In a cooking pot all the grains being equally moistened by the heated water and when one grain is found to be well cooked, the same may be inferred with regard to the other grains. So the maxim is read when the condition of the whole classs is inferred from that of a part.

^{(1) &}quot;इममेवारिन महान्तमात्मानमेकमात्मानं बहुधा मेधाविनो वदन्तीन्द्रं मित्रं वरण-मित्यावि ॥" (N. VII.18)

forepart of a sacrifice, God is represented by Agni, which has been kindled in the Vedi. It is self-contradictory; because if God alone is invoked by all names, why does he take Agni in the sense of the terrestrial fire, which has been kindled for sacrifice. (He ought to have taken the word Agni in the sense of God). Thus this statement is erroneous. If someone says that there is no contradiction because although Acarya Sayana invokes Indra &c., yet they are simply the various forms under which God has manifested Himself. (To meet this objection) we say that if God is expressed by all names, e.g. Indra &c., it is wrong (to maintain that) God assumes various forms, e.g. Indra &c., because in (the AV. XIX. 11.3) and in (the YV. XL.8) He is described as "Unborn and Changeless" and as "Encompassing all, bright and formless etc." respectively.* This clearly establishes that God never assumes forms and takes birth. There are many such errors in the commentary of Sayana, the great commentator. They will be indicated in our commentary in the respective verses.

Similarly (another) commentator, Mahīdhara, in his commentary by name 'Vedadīpa' (i.e. a light on the Vedas) has grossly misinterpreted the Vedas and has seriously calumniated them. A few faults and mistakes by way of specimen are pointed out here:—

गुणानौ त्वा गुणपिति[®]हवामहे श्रियाणौ त्वा श्रियपिति[®]हवामहे निश्वीनां त्वी । निश्चिपति[®]हवामहे वसो मम । म्नाहमंजानि गर्भेद्यमा त्वमंजासि गर्भेद्यम् ॥ १ ॥ (YV. XXIII.19)

Mahidhara's Interpretation

In his commentary on the above-cited stanza, he says: "In this stanza, the word 'Gaṇa-pati' should be taken in the sense of 'a horse'. Thus the chief queen, the wife of the (royal) Sacrificer, lying with the horse, in the sacrificial hall, in the presence of all priests, says, "O Horse! I take semen which would make me pregnant from thee and thou pourst unto me thy semen etc."

But the real interpretation of this verse would be given below. (The relevant evidence on which the interpretation will be based is produced here first):—

- (1) "Ganānām Tvā Gan patim Havāmahe etc. "Brāhmaṇas pat yam (i.e. the lordship of the Vedas) lies in Brahman (i.e. Supreme Being). Brahman verily is Brhaspati (i.e. the Lord of the Great). He is treated by Brahman (i.e. the Vedas). He is called Pratha as well as Sa-Pratha." (AB. I.21)

 (SB, XIII, 2.11, 14-17)

The central idea of Mahīdhara's translation of this verse is given above. The whole cannot be produced here as it is too obscene. Moreover, the following nine stanzas are also not reproducible even in the semi-obscurity of a learned language. Hence, the translation of the subsequent verses according to the commentary of Mahīdhara would not be given here. Only his words will be reproduced.

- (1) "गणानां स्वा गणपति हवामहे इति बाह्यणस्पत्यं, ब्रह्म वै बृहस्पतिः । ब्रह्मणैवैनं तब्भिषण्यति । प्रथश्च यस्य सप्रथश्च नामेति ॥" (AB. I.21) princely power is Asva and Hiranya (i.e. glory) is a form of princely power. Ksatra (i.e. glory of the monarchy) strengthens the ruling power. Subjects prosper only by their own prosperity."

(SB. XIII.2.11.15-17)

"Thee, we invoke, the great Lord of Ganas'. The three (5) queens and other ladies walk round it. They conceal it from her on this account or others are concealed from it. Then they begin the performance of the revolving round ceremony. Thrice, they walk round; or there are three regions; with these regions, they make it revolve; thrice they again walk round. It makes six; because there are six seasons. They make it revolve (six times) as if it were with seasons. The vital airs leave them who perform the revolving ceremony in the Yajña. Nine times they walk round; as there are nine vital airs. He retains vital airs in him. Vital airs do not leave them. 'May I know (Ajani) the Garbhadha (i.e. the impregnator, i.e. God); you also should know the Garbhadha'. Subjects are animals. Garbha contains in it subjects, i.e. animals." (SB. XIII.2.2.4-5)

(Under the light of the above-mentioned pieces of evidence the right interpretation of the Mantra would be as follows):—

TRUE INTERPRETATION

I have given above the literal translation of this passage which is very obscure. Dayananda's explanation of this extract may be read later on in the text.

objects; of all that is dear and much desired (by us), e.g. beloved friends and relations and Salvation etc.; and of all the treasures and precious objects, e.g. knowledge, gems &c. The word 'Vaso' is used in vocative case and is from Vasu which means Supreme Lord as He pervades this whole universe or as the whole universe abides in Him. May we by Thy grace know Thee who has encompassed all the globes and other effects by Thy power as if it were they are in Thy womb as a mother holds a child in her womb. Thou keepest the Prakrti and atoms etc. in Thy womb. There is no one else than Thou who can retain them as such. Thou alone knowest fully all these.

(YV. XXIII.19)

Similarly, the word Ganapati has been explained in the Aitareya and the Śatapatha as follows:—

"The word Brāhmaṇaspatya denotes God who is Lord (Pati) of Brahman (i.e. the Veda). It is said that Brahman verily is Bṛhaspati. A learned preceptor of truth teaches the Vedas to mankind or to the sacrificer and thus he cures them of all diseases (of ignorance). He desires himself to be a physician (Bhiṣajyatt). God is called both Pratha as well as Sa-pratha. He is Pratha because He is all-pervading and Sapratha because He co-exists with Prakṛti, Ākāśa, &c. and His might which is spread (Prath) far and wide."

God, the Lord of creatures, is verily called Jamadagni according to the following evidence:—

(6) "Jamadagnis are so called because of many (Prajamita) fires or because of kindled fires." (N. VII.24)

All these luminous objects, e.g. solar globes etc., shine with His power only. With these effects, e.g. the sun, &c., and by the laws which they adhere to, God is known as their origin and as an object of worship. Hence, He is called Jamadagni.

Thus God being Jamadagni, is verily an Aśva-Medha. This is the first explanation. Secondly, an empire or princely power is (like) a horse and the subjects are like other animals. As other animals, e.g. sheep etc., are inferior in strength and speed to a horse, so the subjects are weaker than the royal state assembly. The glory and dignity of a state lies in riches, gold and in administration of justice. (SB. XIII.2.11.14-17)

As in the (above citation) allegorically the relation between the princely power and subjects and their duty towards each other are described,

^{(6) &}quot;जमक्न्नय: प्रजमिताग्नय: प्रज्वलिताग्नयो वा ॥" so the relation between soul and God as that of a servant and his master is also denoted. No man by virtue of his own power alone can easily obtain blissful heaven, i.e. God. He is known through His grace alone.

"Aśya (a horse) is also a name of God."* (SB. XIII.3.5.)

i.e. "God is called Asva because He pervades the whole universe" (from the root As 'to pervade').

According to it, Asva is a synonym of God. Moreover, (Rastram Va etc.) the kingdom is called Asva-Medha. The kingly power brings glory to his Rastra (country) and it redounds to the glory of the ruling power. It causes the people to abide by his will. Hence the kingdom is called by the name of Asva-Medha; or, the princely power is called by the name of Asva Medha. Wealth (and majesty) are its essence. By this princely power endowed with glorious wealth only the kingship is strengthened and not the subjects. Subjects become prosperous by the liberty (allowed to them). Hence, where there is an absolute monarchy, the subjects are oppressed. Consequently, the administrative power should be vested in the people.

(SB. XIII.2.11.15-17)

(Gananam etc.). Let the women also for the protection and strengthening of the empire perform the sacrifice of knowledge, i.e. teaching and training of the children. If they show negligence (Apanhava, i.e. concealment) in making efforts for the achievement of success, the learned ought to remove their this (negligence). Persons instigating women to deviate (from the path of duty) should be penalised and kept at an arm's length. Thus they should thrice be provided protection in every respect. Through the daily instructions, children should be made physically and spiritually strong. The persons who know God, Who keeps all things in His womb (Garbhadham), never lack vital airs, power and prowess. Hence a man should always desire to know God, who is Garbhadha, i.e. the holder of all things in His womb. It is to be interpreted as: God's power is the origin of all things. He, who surpasses in knowledge all subjects who are termed as animals, firmly believes that all subjects reside in the all-pervading God.

(SB. XIII.2,2.4-5)

We have, in this way, briefly described the (correct) import of the above Mantra (YV. XXIII.19).

It is, therefore, quite clear that the interpretation of Mahīdhara is quite contrary to the right meaning given by us.

^{* &}quot;ग्रश्वो यत ईश्वरों वा ग्रश्व: ॥" (SB. XIII.3.5)

(The Second Mantra is as follows) :-

"ता उमी चृतुरे: पृद: संप्रसारयाव स्वृगें छोके । प्रोणुवायां वर्षा वाजी रेतोधा रेती वधात ॥ २ ॥"

(YV. XXIII,20)

Mahidhara's interpretation

"श्रश्वशिश्तमुपस्ये कुरते वृषा वाजीति । महिषी स्वयमेवाश्वशिश्तमाकृष्य स्वयोनी स्यापयित ॥"

TRUE INTERPRETATION

(For the true interpretation of this verse, the following evidence from the Satapatha be taken into consideration):—

(7) "Let us both (i.e. king and the subjects) spread that four Padas (i.e. Dharma, Artha, Kāma & Mokṣa) and propagate them so that we two may achieve the blissful Heaven (i.e. Mokṣa). We should fill all the living beings with happiness. The (country) is really a heaven where Paśus (i.e. subjects) are made literate. Hence it is said (in the above verse) that the mighty (Vajin) Vṛṣā (i.e. one who showers knowledge) may impart (Retas) strength (in us) as he is Retodhā (Abode of strength). It refers to both." (SB. XIII.2.2.5)

(According to this evidence) the true interpretation of the above-cited verse is):—

May we both, the king and the people, achieve the four objects viz, righteousness, riches, desire and emancipation in co-ordination with each other in order to establish perpetual happiness in the beautiful and lovable universe for imparting pleasures to all beings. That country is Heaven where men of brutal inclinations (Pasus) who unrighteously misappropriate the property and belongings of others, are reformed through the medium of precepts, teaching and punishments. Both, i.e. the king and the people should, therefore, strive to procure mutual happiness by assisting and supporting the learned and the wise who may freely spread knowledge and other virtues and acquire from them knowledge and valour ceaselessly. The word V_{rsa} means a preceptor showering knowledge (upon the masses) and who is also called Vajin, i.e. a source of strength. This is the purport of this Mantra. (YV. XXIII.20)

^{(7) &#}x27;'ता उमी चतुर: पव: सम्प्रसारयावेति 'मिथुनस्यैवावरुध्ये'। 'स्वर्गे लोके प्रोणुं-वायाम्' इत्येष व स्वर्गो लोको यत्र पशून् संज्ञपयन्ति । तस्मादेवमाह 'वृषा वाजी रेतोषा रेतो बघातु' इति मिथुनस्यैवावरुध्ये ॥'' (SB. XIII.2.2.5)

Mahidhara's Interpretation

TRUE INTERPRETATION

(The true interpretation of this verse is based on the followevidence from the Satapatha):—

(8) "Yakā-sakau Śakuntikā. Here subjects are verily Śakun (i.e. small birds). 'Halag-iti-vañcati', i.e. (a king) ve deceives his subjects for Rāṣṭṛa (i.e. kingdom). 'Ā H Gabhe Paso Nigalgaliti Dhāraketi': Subjects verily are ca Gabha, and Rāṣṭṛa (a king or kingdom) is Paśa. A king ve destroys his subjects. Hence, the slayer of subjects is a Rā (i.e. a king)." (SB. XIII.2.

EXPLANATION

As in the presence of a hawk a smaller female bird is weak, simil the subjects (Vit) are insignificant before a monarch. (\bar{A} Halagiti a Kings doubtlessly for the happiness of the state officials always deceive suppress) the masses. (\bar{A} Hanti etc.) The subjects are called Gabha (to grasped) and regal power or kingdom is called Pasa (to be touched). kingdom is touched (i.e. influenced) by the subjects. A king inwa torments and ruins the subjects in all matters. Wherever the ruling po is vested in One individual, the masses are torpedoed. Hence, a monshould not be acknowledged as Head of the State ($R\bar{a}j\bar{a}$). Only a President responsible to the Sabhā (Parliament) who is virtuous, endowed with good qualities and learned, should be accepted as King.

Mahīdhara's evil interpretation stands no comparison to this true explanation (of this verse).

"माता च ते पिता च तेऽयं वृक्षस्यं रोहत:। प्रतिलामीति ते पिता गुभे मुन्टिसंत⁹सयत्॥ ४॥ (YV. XXIII.24)

Mahidhara's Interpretation

''ब्रह्मा महिषीमाह—महिषि, हये हये महिषि, ते तव माता, च पुनस्ते तव पिता, यदा वृश्वस्य वृक्षकस्य काष्ठमयस्य मञ्चकस्याग्रमुपरिमागं रोहतः स्रारोहतः, तदा ते पिता गभे भगे (मुिष्ट) मुष्टिच्तुल्यं लिङ्गमतंसयत् तंसयित-प्रक्षिपित । एवं तवीत्पत्तिः इत्यश्लीलम् । लिङ्गमुत्थानेनालंकरोति वा तव भोगेन स्निह्मामीति वदन्नेषं तबोत्पत्तिः ।।''

CORRECT INTERPRETATION

(The Satapatha interprets it as follows):-

(9) "Mata ca te Pita ca te. Here this (earth) is mother and that (upper region) is father. He is brought to the world of happiness by them. Agram Vrk sasya Rohatah. Here Śrī (i.e. glorious riches) is the top (i.e. the head) of the state. It is the Śrī that makes him the head of the state. Pratilamīti te Pita Gabhe Muştimatam-sayat. Subjects are verily Gabhas (i.e. the yielder of wealth). Raṣṭra (i.e. monarchy) is like a fist. The monarch torments the masses. Hence, a king is called the murderer of masses."

TRUE INTERPRETATION

(The following true interpretation is based on the above-quoted evidence):—

O man! this earth and knowledge are like thy mother, because the former on account of her gifts in the form of medicinal herbs and other numberless substances and the latter by causing the birth of scientific

(SB. XIII.2,3,7)

^{(9) &}quot;माता च ते पिता च ते इति । इयं वै मातासौ पिताभ्यामेवैनं स्वर्गं लोकं गमयत्यग्रं वृक्षस्य रोहत: इति । श्री: वै राष्ट्रस्याग्रम् । श्रियमेवैन^{१९}राष्ट्रस्याग्रं गमयति । 'प्रतिलामीति ते पिता गभे मुष्टिमत^{१९}सयत्' । इति । विड् वै गभो, राष्ट्रं मुख्टी, राष्ट्रमेवाविश्य झाहन्ति । तस्माद्राष्ट्री विशं घातुक: ॥''

wisdom in thee, deserve all respect. That shining firmament, the light, the learned and God are like thy fathers; because they protect (Pita, \sqrt{Pa} 'to protect') thee and are the cause of all thy activities and pleasant gifts. A wise man makes a soul achieve the world of bliss—the heaven—by these means. The $Sr\bar{\imath}$ (i.e. glory), i.e. learning and riches in the form of virtues, jewels &c., is the topmost (i.e. the head) feature of the $R\bar{a}$ stra. Through this glory a man obtains fame. This is the foremost aspect or happiness of a $R\bar{a}$ stra. The subjects are termed as Gabha (i.e. the womb), because they are the sources of all prosperities. The $R\bar{a}$ ja-karma (i.e. the act of Government) is called Musti (i.e. a fist); because as a man catches money in his fist so a single absolute monarch holds out in his hands unjustly the entire best and most precious riches from his subjects for his personal pleasures. The king is called the $Gh\bar{a}tuka$ (i.e. the murderer) of the masses because he pierces them out by his deeply internal tricks.

The interpretation given by Mahidhara is quite opposed to this exact rendering. Hence, his explanation should not be accepted.

"अध्वित्तामुन्छ्रापय गिरो मार एहर्रान्तव । प्रथास्य मध्यमेधता एश्वीते वार्ते पुनिन्नव" ॥ ६ ॥ (YV. XXIII.26) Mahidhara's Interpretation

"यत् यवा, ग्रस्या-परिवृक्ताया; कृष्टु ह्रस्वं स्यूलं च, शिश्नमुपातसत् उपगच्छत् योनि प्रतिगच्छेत्, तं स उपक्षये तवा मुष्कौ वृषणौ इत एव झस्याः योनेरुपरि एजतः कम्पेते । लिङ्गस्य स्यूलस्वात् योनेरल्पस्वात् वृषणौ बहिस्तिष्ठतः इत्यर्थः । तत्र दृष्टान्तमाह—गोशफे जलपूर्णे गोखुरे शकुलौ मत्स्याविव । यथा उवकपूर्णो गोः पदे मत्स्यौ कम्पेते" ।

The real interpretation of these above-cited two verses is the following extract from the Satapatha:—

(10) "Urdhvam Enām-Ucchrapaya. By this Śrī (i.e. glory) is meant. Raṣṭra (i.e. the good Government) is Aśva-Medha. The good government improves the riches (i.e. the economic condition) of the state and thus for him (i.e. king) it brings glory. Girau Bharam Haran Iva i.e. Śrī, i.e. glory, is the dignity of the state. The (good) government brings to him glory. He establishes the state in glory of riches. Atha Asyai Madhyam Edhatam iti. Śrī is the centre (i.e. mainstay) of the empire. The prosperous food (condition) brings glory into the state. Śīte Vate Punan Iva, i.e. the maintenance of the achievements (Kṣema) is verily Śīta (i.e. coolness, i.e. the strength) of the empire. He brings Kṣema to the empire."

(SB. XIII.2.3.1-4)

TRUE INTERPRETATION

O man! raise the glory of the empire to the highest pitch by serving it to the best of your capacity. Raştra (i.e. the good government) is the Asva-medha sacrifice. A government attains the highest glory when it is run by a parliament. This act (of a government) is as hard as to take a heavy burden uphill to the peak of a mountain. What is meant by the heavy burden? To this question it is stated here that glory (Sri) is the burden of the empire. They (people) should make the state incomparably glorious by means of the parliamentary system of administration. In this way the masses make the empire glorious raised aloft. "What is the centre of the state?" To this question it is said here that glory is the centre (or middle portion or stomach) of the state. By good parliamentary system of government the state becomes mighty and prosperous on account of easy food situation, comforts and enjoyments. The protection of the state is called Sita. A good parliament should protect the state. (YV. XXIII.29)

(SB. XIII. 2.3.1-4)

The other verse cited above (from YV. XXIII, 28) has not been translated by our author here. We, therefore, give below an English rendering of the commentary upon this verse from his Yajurveda Bhāṣya to show the real meaning of this Mantra according to our author:—

"When a king, who himself has no grain of guilt and defects, personally supervises and remains vigilant about all the acts, small and great, of the masses, the thieves and the officials and other selfish men, who are harmful to the national prosperity like rats, remain peacelessly restless like two fish struggling in a water-filled hole created by the foot of a cow".

Mahīdhara's interpretation is opposed to this real one also.

"यब्देबासों ल्लामंगुं प्र विष्टीमिन्माविषु: । सुबक्ता देविश्यते नारी सुत्यस्यांक्षिमुवो यथा" ।। द ।। (YV.XXII.26)

Mahidhara's Interpretation

"(यत्) यदा (देवासः) देवाः बीव्यन्ति क्रीडिन्ति, देवाः होत्रादयः ऋत्विजो (ललामगुं) लिङ्गं (प्र ग्राविशः) योनौ प्रवेशयन्ति । ललामेति सुखनाम । ललामं मुखं गच्छति प्राप्नोति ललामगुः शिरनः । यद्वा ललामं पुण्डूं गच्छति ललामगुः लिङ्गम्, योनि प्रविश्वदुत्थितं पुण्ड्राकारं भवतीत्यर्थः । कीदृशं ललामगुं-(विष्टीमिनं) शिरनस्य योनिप्रदेशे क्लेबनं भवती-स्पर्थः । यदा देवाः शिरनक्षीडिनो भवन्ति ललामगुं योनौ प्रवेशयन्ति तदा (नारी) (सक्ष्मा) ढरुणा उरुभ्यां (देदिरयते) निदिश्यते, ग्रत्यन्तं लक्ष्यते । भोगसमये सर्वस्य नार्यङ्गस्य नरेण भ्याप्तत्वात् उरुमात्रं लक्ष्यते । इयं नारीतीत्यर्थः ।"

TRUE INTERPRETATION

As the Devas (i.e. the wise) having achieved the true knowledge through direct perception acquire (lit. enter) the permanent pleasure endowed with sympathetic notions, so the subjects also are filled with happiness by their company and counsel. As a woman conceals her lower parts (Sakthna) with garments, so the learned cover the masses with all bliss.

"युद्धं रिणो यब मित् न पुर्व्दं पृशु मन्यते । शूजा यदयेजारुः न पोर्षाय धनायति" ।। ९ ।। (YV. XXIII.30)

(The following citation from the Satapatha gives a clue to the right interpretation given as under):—

(11) "'That the deer eats barley'. Here the subjects are barley.

Raştra (i.e. a king) is deer. Masses become eatables for the (selfish) king. Hence, a king devours subjects."

"'Na Puşiam Pasu Manyate', i.e. therefore, a king does not strengthen the Pasus (i.e. the animals, i.e. the masses). Sūdra Ycdarya-Jara na Poṣāya Dhanāyati, i e. hence he does not anoint a son of a Vaisya (i.e. a trader)". (SB. XIII.2.3.8)

TRUE INTERPRETATION

The subjects are like barley. The absolute monarch in the kingdom is a deer as he takes away the best things. As a deer having taken away the vegetables from the field becomes stout and happy, so the absolute monarch takes care of his own pleasures and happiness. Hence he for his own personal happiness and selfish motive regards his subjects as his meals. As a meat-eater having found a well-nourished animal desires to eat its fiesh and never thinks of its welfare or life so an absolute monarch remains always perturbed with fear of any of his subjects, growing more powerful than he and with this thought in view he remains reluctant to protect the masses. As a low born (Sūdra) woman co-habits with her paramour of the Vaiśya family, her husband does not feel strong and delighted, so the masses do not become prosperous and strong when they are governed by a single individual monarch. Hence, a timid-natured son of a Vaiśya woman and a stupid son of a Śūdra woman should never be installed as kings. They should not be made the head of the state.

The interpretation of Mahidhara is absolutely opposed to this interpretation offered by the Satapatha.

O Learned President of the council (of the state) 1 O Thee, the fulfiller of all desires (Vṛṣan, lit. the rainer of all desires), spread the light of knowledge, happiness and justice (Añji) over these subjects. Make him cast his head down who being a lustful debauch plays havoc with the prosperity or chastity of others and put him into prison (Yaḥ Strīṇam Jīva-Bhojanaḥ). Similarly award a severe punishment to her who among women may be (Ut-Sakthi) adulteress. Punish miscreants who are called Jīva-Bhojana of women because they live upon women and destroy the lives of others.

All men will regard this much criticism sufficient to condemn the whole of the Vedadīpa*, the so called commentary written by Mahīdhara.

^{*} The too much obscene and vulgar interpretation given by Mahīdhara in his Vedadīpa commentary has been rightly condemned by our great author but he has not criticised and condemned the similar interpretation of those very verses offered in the Appendix (Parisista) of the Satapatha Brahmana, under the topic 'श्रिश्राच्ये' परिशिष्ट भवति" (SB.XIII.5.2). He has only referred to that right interpretation which is contained in the actual body of the book. This clearly indicates that Rsī Dayānanda does not accept the "Appendix" portion as authentic, which according to him appears to be later interpolation. established by the fact firstly that the obscene interpolation falls only in the Parisista and not in the main body of the book and secondly this interpretation is contrary to what has already been stated. out of context and self-contradictory. The obscene Viniyogas contained in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtras regarding these verses are merely based on the interpolated part of Satapatha, and ignore the main text. Hence, those cannot be accepted as genuine. The original correct Viniyogas appear to have been replaced by these interpolated obscene ones.

I shall bring to light other errors of Mahidhara too at the proper places in my contemplated commentary. If such false (and erroneous) approach is the fate of the commentaries written by the Indian (scholars), e. g. Sayana, Mahidhara &c., what would be the state of miserable condition and false position of the Europeans who followed them and interpreted the Vedas in their The intelligent can easily assess the value of those own languages. translations written in English or in Modern Indian languages by Indians who followed the Europeans. The Aryans should attach least importance to such commentaries because by putting reliance on them the true interpretation (of the Vedas) would suffer and the misinterpretations and errors would come in vogue. None should, therefore, regard these interpretations as true. That the Vedas contain all sciences and nothing is false in them would be evidently clear to all men when this (attempted) complete commentary of the four Vedas is printed, published and placed before the intelligentsia. By doing so, all men will understand that no knowledge is equal to the Divine knowledge contained in the Vedas.

A BRIEF DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES

In (the projected) commentary of the Vedas we shall refer to the ritual side (Karmakanda) only to the extent as is inferable directly from the import of the (textual) words. We shall, however, not provide a detailed account of the ritual acts which are to be performed in a variety of Yajñas, beginning with the Agnihotra upto the Asya-Medha, in accordance with the Mantras which are applicable to the ritual portion also. The reason is that the application of the Mantras to the various parts of rituals. in detail, has already been described in the books (on Rituals), e.g. the Aitareya and the Satapatha, the Purvamimāmsā, Srautasutras, &c. The repetition of the same in our commentary will mar our work with the blemish of tautological repetition amounting to the grinding of the already powdered thing-the fault which disfigures the books composed by the non-seers. Only so much application of the Mantras to the Rituals is to be recognised and specified as has the authority of the Vedas themselves; or is supported by other cognate evidence; or is inferable from the import of the Mantras and is contained in the above-named books. Similarly we shall refer to the worship portion also only to the extent as would be compatible with the context and the actual interpretation of the text; because the same has been described in detail by Patanjali in his Yogasastra. The same treatment will be awarded to the (spiritual) knowledge portion as it has been fully explained in the Sainkhya, the Vedanta, Upanisads, &c. The knowledge of these three portions, if achieved with efficiency, leads to the utilitarian purposes. This is called the Vijnanakānda (i.e. the philosophical portion). The detailed exposition of these four portions can be found in the respective explanatory works written in accordance with the Vedas. But the same should be accepted if it is found on examination to be consistent and in agreement with the Vedas for there can be no branches in the absence of their roots. The proper knowledge of accents (i.e. Udatta etc.), articulation and pronunciation of the Vedic words should be acquired from the study of the auxiliary works of the Vedas, viz. grammar &c. The same has precisely and correctly been dealt with in the books and for this reason we shall not harp on the same string here also. The definition of metres should be studied from the aphorism of Pingala, the work on prosody. We shall give the Svara of every Mantra, according to the (following) aphorism of Pingala because now-a-days the tradition of chanting the Mantras in accordance with the particular tune (Svara) in accompaniment with the musical instruments is no longer in vogue:—

(1) "The Svaras are Şadja, Rşabha, Gandhara, Madhyama, Pañcama, Dhaivata and Nişada." (PL. III.94)

Similarly, the special sciences such as Medical &c., should be learnt from the works on Ayurveda (i.e. the science of life) which are regarded as the Upa-Vedas. All these special sciences shall be referred to in the commentary on the Vedic text frequently. Thus the knowledge gained from the study of the real Vedic interpretation based on strong and cogent reasons will surely ward off all doubts of all men.

We shall give the meaning of each word of the Vedic verses in Sanskrit as well as in Prakrit (i.e. Hindi)* and shall supplement the same with relevant evidence. We shall cite the grammatical authority also wherever it is deemed necessary to do so. It will rule out all the false modern commentaries which are opposed to the real import of the Vedas and also to the ancient interpretations. All men, on beholding the true interpretations of the Vedas, will love them dearly and greatly. A disastrous mischief has been created by the commentaries of Acarya Sayana &c., which they composed in accordance with their unrestricted self-interest and the trend of current public opinion, with a view to securing renown. Europeans, too, following their foot-prints have fallen into the same errors about the Vedas. Through God's grace when our commentary, based on the authority of the Vedic commentaries, e.g. the Aitareya, the Satapatha &c., written by the Arya Munis (i.e. the thinkers), Maha Munis, Rsis (i.e. the inspired observers) and Mahā Rsis will come to a successful finish, a genuine happiness will enlighten all men. Wherever a stanza is capable of denoting two meanings, i.e. spiritual and secular (material) through the figure of speech, called Paronomasia, in accordance with the authority, we shall give both of them. But nowhere, in any interpretation of any verse, will a reference to God be absolutely absent, because He pervades every portion of this universe and is the efficient cause of this effect—the world. For God, i.e. the cause, is always associated with effect. Where the secular interpretation alone is possible, there this also must be borne in mind that all the substances, the earth &c., exist in the order in which they have been destined by God. In the same way when a verse expresses only a spiritual import, the secular significance is also justified through the co-relation of cause and effect.

^{(1) &}quot;स्वरा: षड्जऋषमगान्धारमध्यमपञ्चमधैवतनिषादा: ।" (PL. III.94)

^{*} Swāmī Dayānanda wrote only the Sanskrit version of this book. Hindi rendering was done by Panditas engaged by him for this purpose. It is clear from the correspondence of our author. The Sanskrit text only is authentic and not the Hindi version which is at variance with Sanskrit and often contrary to it.

A FEW QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

- Q. Why are the Vedas divided into four parts?
- A. With a view to imparting knowledge of various sciences.
- Q. What are those (sciences)?
- A. The science of music (including accent and articulation) is of three types. The science of music has three distinct notes: (1) a short or quick, (2) an intermediate and (3) a long one or slow. The articulation or pronunciation (of a sound) is again of three varieties, i.e. a short, a long and an extra long. To pronounce a long vowel it takes double the time of that which is required in pronouncing a short vowel and thrice as much time is spent to pronounce an extra long vowel as is needed in pronouncing a short vowel. That is why one and the same Mantra is repeated in the texts of four Vedas. Moreover (lit. for instance), by the Rg verses they eulogise, by Yajur verses they sacrifices and by the Saman verses they sing. The qualities and properties of objects have been defined and brought to light in the Reveda. In the Yajurveda are enjoined the various ways of practical and utilitarian application of the substances of the known qualities to the various arts and activities. In the Samaveda, a discriminate thought to be put forward in order to realise the mutual relation between knowledge and action so that the final aim may be The Atharvaveda gives final and touches to the science of the final results of knowledge imparted in the three Vedas. Thus the preservation and development of the sciences (known from the said three Vedas) are the objects of the Atharvaveda. These are the few reasons for the division of the Vedas into four parts.
- Q. What is the purpose of creating four Samhitas (collections)?
- A. The purpose of creating Samhitas is to arrange Mantras pertaining to particular sciences in (particular) order according to contextual reference and their relation with the preceding and succeeding stanzas so that the sciences described in them may be easy to grasp.

- Q. What for have the Vedas been divided into Astakas, Mandalas, Adhyāyas, Sūktas, Šatakas, Kāndas, Vargas, Dašatis, Trikas, Prapāthakas and Anuvākas?
- A. For the obvious reason so that the Vedas may be easily and conveniently studied and taught, and that the verses may be readily calculated and that the context of each topic may easily be understood.
- Q. Why are the Rgveda, Yajurveda, Samaveda and the Atharvaveda respectively regarded as the first, the second, the third and the fourth?
- A. There can be no clear understanding and liking for an object, unless and until a direct knowledge of the relation between a substance and its qualities is achieved. Without this, there can be no attempt and without (an intelligent) attempt there can be no happiness. The Rgveda deserves to be counted as the first Veda as it deals with this (abovementioned) subject. After knowing the qualities (from the Rgveda) of objects. they are brought into practical use and all round benefit is derived from them. This subject of doing good to the whole universe is dealt with in the Yajurveda. Hence it is counted as the second in order. The Samaveda discusses the questions as to how far the knowledge, action and worship portions can be improved and what is their ultimate achievement. Hence it is counted as the third. As the Atharvaveda teaches to preserve and supplement the knowledge described in the other three Vedas, it is counted as the fourth one. The order of enumeration of the four Vedas as the Rg, Yajur, Sama and Atharva is based on the fact that their subjects are interrelated in the same order, i.e. the one following depends on the one preceding it. The subject, e.g. the knowledge of the qualities of substances, their application for practical purposes, spiritual knowledge and their development and preservation respectively belong to the four Vedas. Their titles are also significant. The word Rg is from the root Rk 'to praise' (or define); the word Yajur is from the root Yaj 'to revere the learned', 'to associate with them' and to make a gift; the word Sama is derived from the root Sam

'to propitiate' or from the root So 'to finalise a thing'; the word Atharva is taken from the root Tharv 'to waver' (in mind) with negative 'A' in the beginning. Thus it means absence of doubts. This word is explained in the Nirukta as follows:—

(1) "The root 'Tharv' means to waver or move about. Its negation is A—tharva." (N. XI.18)

Thus the Vedas are counted in this (particular) order in accordance with the meanings of the roots from which their names are accomplished.

- Q. Why are Rsi, Devata, Metre and Svara indicated over every verse?
- A. The names of the Seers (Rsis) by whom the real import of the verse was discovered subsequently to the revelation of the Vedas by God are indicated over the verses because the Seers have brought it to light through the meditation and favour of God and have taken specific pain and effort for this purpose. Names of such Seers deserve mention over the verses in order to perpetuate their memory. This assertion is supported by the following evidence from the Nirukta:—
- (2) "He, who only hears the speech (without knowing its meaning) enjoys no fruit or flower. For him speech yields no fruit or flower or sparingly yields fruit and flowers. The meaning is ^{(1) &}quot;थर्वतिश्चरतिकर्मा। तत्प्रतिषेधः" ॥ (N. XI.19)

^{(2) &}quot;यो वाचं श्रुतवान् भवत्यकलामपुष्पामिति । श्रफलाऽस्मा श्रपुष्पा वाग् भवतीति वा । किञ्चित् पुष्पफला इति वा । श्रयं वाचः पुष्पफलमाह । याजदैवते पुष्पफले । देवताम्यात्मे वा ॥ साक्षात् कृतधर्माण ऋषयो बभूवः । तेऽवरेम्यो-ऽसाक्षात् कृतधर्मेम्य उपदेशेन मन्त्रान् सम्प्रादः । उपदेशाय ग्लायन्तोऽवरे विल्मप्रहणायेमं ग्रन्यं समाम्नासिषः । वेदं च वेदाङ्गानि च । विल्मं मिल्मं मासनिमिति वा । एतावन्तः समानकर्माणो धातवः । धानुवंधातेः । एतावन्त्यस्य सत्त्वस्य मामध्यानि । एतावतामर्यानामिवमभिधानम् । नैधष्टुकमिदं देवतानाम् । प्राधान्येनेदिमिति । तद् यद् ग्रन्यदैवते मन्त्रे निपतित नैधष्टुकं तत्" । (N. 1.20)

the flower and fruit of the speech or the Yajia and the Devat are respectively flower and fruit or the knowledge of Devat and Atman (soul).

There were Seers who had direct perception c Dharma (by intuition). They transmitted the Mantras to th others (i.e. descendants) to whom Dharma did not manifest itself by oral tradition. Others declining in oral instruction composed this book for detailed grasp and the Vedas and th Vedāngas. The word Bilma means a detailed examination or knowledge.

These roots are of identical meaning. The word Dhāt (i.e. the root) is from the root Dhā 'to support'. So man names express this (one) substance. So many meanings ar expressed by this (one) noun. This name of Devatā i Naighanţuka (i.e. incidental) and this is the principal. Incidental is that epithet which occurs in a Mantra related to som other Devatā."

(N. I.20)

EXPLANATION

The man who hears or reads (the Vedas) without knowing th significance gets no fruit.

- Q. What is the fruit of Speech?
- The end of speech is knowledge and the performance of actio according to the knowledge. Those who having come to know this, practise accordingly, attain (the rank of) the Seers (Rsis and they have direct vision of Dharma (by intuition), i.e those who fully attained the knowledge of all sciences exactly and precisely became Rsis (i.e. the Seers). They imparte the Vedas by oral instruction to other (human beings) who have no intuitive knowledge of the Vedas. (Thus) they taught b reciting the Mantras. What is it for? It was to propagat the Vedic teachings continuously. With a view to imparting knowledge of the Vedic theme to those who declined and failed to receive oral instructions, the Rsis compiled the Nighantu and the Nirukta so that all men might be able to achleve a correct knowledge of the Vedas along with thei auxiliary sciences. Thus they were fully trained. Nighantu (is a book) containing a number of lists of words Here the meaning of those roots which have identical signi ficance is revealed. So many names denote this particula

(cne) meaning, and so many meanings are expressed by this one epithet. That is to say that the Nighantu contains explanation of synonyms as well as of homonyms. The subject-matter of a Mantra is its Devata, i.e. where a Mantra specifically explains and defines a thing or things, there the same thing denoted by the Mantra should be taken as Devata. There are also incidental explanations in a Mantra, i.e. where a reference occurs in a Mantra to a substance not expressly stated therein.

Hence it should be clearly understood that no human being is the author of the Mantras. Thus the Rsis whose names appear over the Mantras are only those who discovered and revealed their imports. Similarly, the subject-matter dealt with in a Mantra is styled as its Devatā. For this reason Devatā is indicated over a Mantra. The names of the metres, i.e. Gāyatrī &c., are written for the purpose of indicating the particular metre in which the Mantra has been composed. The names of Svaras are also written (over the Mantras) for helping the singing of the Mantras in accompaniment of musical instruments.

- Q. Why are the words Agni, Vayu, Indra, Asvi, Sarasvatī &c. read in the Vedas in a particular order?
- A. These words are read in a particular sequence to denote the inter-dependence and inter-contact of the sciences and also to suggest the primary and essential and the secondary and incidental position of each (individual) science. instance, the word Agni expresses two senses, i. e. God and material fire. This word implies the qualities of God, e.g. knowledge and pervasiveness &c. of God. The material fire is created by God and is of imperatively primary importance and advantage in mechanics &c. and, therefore, it is assigned the foremost and the first place in the order of enumeration. The word Vayu signifies the attributes of God, e.g. the All-sustainer and the Possessor of limitless power and might. As in the physical and mechanical sciences, air is seen helping fire and as it provides support to all embodied beings (Marta) and is co-related with them, the word Vayu is taken in the sense of air. In the same way as God is the mainstay, even of air we take it to signify Him also. The word Indra denotes the qualities of supreme gloriousness of God, and as all human beings derive mighty power with the help of air, this word also means air. In the mechanics, water, fire, air, metals and light are essential for knowing the theory and practice of moving cars, they being the direct and indirect causes thereof. The word Aśvin has been used in the Vedas to denote these things after Agni and Vāyu. Similarly the word Sarasvatī in the Vedas expresses the qualities of God, e.g. His mastership of infinite knowledge, the instruction regarding the relation between the words and their imports through the medium of the Vedas and it also means the entire sphere and scope of speech. For these reasons, the words Agni, Vāyu, Indra, Aśvin and Sarasvatī have been arranged in a particular order in the Vedas. In this way all men should understand the significance of words and that of their specific use in the Vedas.

- Q. In the beginning of the Vedas, the words Agni, Vāyu &c. are used. From the convention these words in the Vedas, should be taken in the sense of physical objects. (They cannot refer to God) as the word Īśvara (i.e. God) has not been used in the Vedas in the beginning.
- A. The great sage Patanjali, the author of the Mahabhasya, explaining the aphorism of Lan (of Aştadhyayı) says, "The particular significance (of words) should be inferred from the explanations and thus there remain no obscurity and doubts." According to this maxim all doubts are removed: because in Vedas, the Vedangas, and the Brahmanas, the word Agni has been explained to mean both-God as well as fire. Even the use of the word 'Isvara' (i.e. God) (in the beginning) is too weak to remove all doubts without the help of a commentary. The word Isvara means God and a powerful king and it may also be proper noun denoting certain individual. Doubt would have still remained as to what is meant here (by the word Isvara) out of these three senses. This doubt would be cleared off by the commentary which would show with reference to context that here it means God or a king, or an individual. Similarly here the word Agni may mean both God as well as fire and there can be no doubt about it. Otherwise, it would be absolutely impossible to commit to writing the entire knowledge even in billions of verses and thousands of books. For this reason, God, keeping in view that by using the word Agui

&c. in the dual sense of spiritual and physical objects, it would be possible to economise the number of words and to employ books of smaller size, has used the words Agni &c. It will be possible for all men to grasp all sciences by devoting shorter time and comparatively lesser efforts to the act of learning and teaching. The Most Merciful Lord has imparted knowledge and its aims in easy words. Again, the meanings of words Agni &c. which are in vogue in the world also refer to God's glory because all these manifestations stand testimony to the fact that God exists. We have referred to some of the sciences contained in the Vedas in this introduction. Now, we shall (proceed to) write the regular commentary on all Mantras. Now we shall explain properly a particular science referred to in a particular verse during the course of our commentary as the occasion arises.

SOME PECULIARITIES OF THE VEDIC WORDS

The author of the Nirukta describes briefly the (following) specific rules pertaining to Vedic words:—

(1) "These Reas (i.e. verses) are three-fold: (1) Parokṣa-Kṛtas (i.e. referring to objects not sense-cognised), (2) Pratyakṣa-Kṛtas (i.e. referring to sense-cognised objects), and (3) Adhyā-tmikīs (i.e. self invocations or pertaining to the Self). Out of these, Parokṣa-Kṛtas are associated with nouns in all cases and with verbs only in the Third Person. The Pratyakṣa-Kṛtas contain (verbs) used in the Second Person and the pronoun 'thou' (Tvam). Moreover, (sometimes) the invokers or praisers are perceptible and the objects of praise are imperceptible. Again the Adhyātmikīs are associated with (verbs) in the First Person and the pronoun 'Aham' (i.e. I).

EXPLANATION

The above-mentioned principle is applicable throughout the Vedas. That is to say that all Mantras denote meanings of three types. Some describe objects which cannot be cognised by the sense-organs. Others deal with the sense-cognisable objects while still others refer to the Self. In the Mantras of the first category, the Third Person is used, in the second, the Second Person and in the third, the First Person. But there are again two discriminatory rules regarding the use of the Second Person, viz, where there are perceptible objects, there the Second Person is used, and where objects of praise are imperceptible and the praisers are perceptible, there also the Second Person is used. The idea is that grammatically all the Persons, e.g. the First, the Second and the Third, are used in a regular way. Out of these, with reference to the inanimate objects only, the Third Person is used and with reference to the animate objects, the Second and the First Persons are also used. This is a general rule, applicable to all words found in the Vedas as well as in the current Sanskrit. But in Vedic language, the Second Person is used when inanimate objects are Pratyakşa. The purpose is to treat inanimate objects as Pratyakşa for the sake of emphasizing their utility. Not understanding this rule the Vedic commentators, Acarya Sayana &c., and their followers, the European secholars who have rendered the Vedas in their own languages erroneously, interpreted them as to say that the Vedas enjoin the worship of inanimate objects.

^{(1) &}quot;तास्त्रिविद्या ऋवः परोक्षकृताः प्रत्यक्षकृता प्राध्यात्मिवयश्व । तत्र परोक्षकृताः सर्वामिः नामविष्यक्तिमः युज्यन्ते प्रथमपुरुषंश्चाख्यातस्य । प्रथ प्रत्यक्षकृता मध्यमपुरुषप्रयोगाः स्विमिति चैतेन सर्वनाम्ना । प्रथापि प्रत्यक्षकृताः स्तोतारो भवन्ति, परोक्षकृतानि स्तोतब्यानि । प्रथाध्यात्मिक्य उत्तमपुरुषयोगा प्रहमिति चैतेन सर्वनाम्ना' । (N. VII.1.2)

As the Svaras (accents) play an important role in the interpretation of the Vedas, we briefly deal with the same here. These Svaras are of two types and each one of them is again divided into seven categories, such as Udatta, Şadja &c. Now we shall write their definitions which have been taken from Patanjali, the author of Mahabhasya (I.2.29):—

- (1) "The Svaras (i.e. vowels) are those which shine (from $\sqrt{Raj}$ 'to shine') by themselves (i.e. which are pronounced with no help from other letters. Ayama (i.e. restraint on vocal organs), Darunya (i.e. harshness) and Anuta (i.e. smallness or subtleness) render the sound (Svara) louder. Here Ayama means the restraint over (vocal) organs. Harshness of sound is called Dārunya and the smallness of throat means the contract or closing of throat. These (three) make the sound louder. Anvavasarga (i.e. relaxation), Mārdava (i.e. the softness) and Urutā (i.e. expansion) make the sound low. Out of these Anvavasarga means relaxation in (vocal) organs; Mārdava refers to softness and elegance of sound; and Urutā comprises in the expansion of throat. These make the sound lower. In speaking we pronounce the Svaras (i.e. the sounds or vowels) in three ways, viz. either as Udatta (high) or as Anudatta (i.e. low) or as Udatta-Anudatta (i.e. mixed). For instance, as a (thing) having white colour is called white and one having a black colour is called black and the third one possessing the characteristics of both—white and black—is called Kalmaşa (i.e. the variegated, or mixture of black and white) or Sāranga (i.e. spotted). Similarly a Svarna which has the quality of Udatta is called Udatta; that having the quality of Anudātta, Anudātta and that which possesses both the qualities—Udatta as well as Anudātta—is called Svarita (i.e. a mixed tone lying between the high and the low). These become seven when the suffix 'Tarap' is added to them indicating that they are raised to a higher or softened down to a lower accent as (1) Udatta, (2) Udātta-Tara, (3) Anudātta,

(4) Anudātta-Tara, (5) Svarita, (6) Svarita-Udātta and

(7) Eka-Śruti (i.e. monotony or neutral accentless tone)."

(MB. I.2)

This (extract) is a commentary on the aphorism:—

(2) "Uccaih-Udattah" "(i.e. a louderly pronounced accent is called Udatta)" (P. 1.2.29)

The (musical) Svaras (i.e. tunes) are also seven as enumerated in (the following aphorism) from the Pingala Sutra:—

(3) "Şadja, Rşabha, Gandhara, Madhyama, Pañcama, Dhaivata (and) Nişada." (PL. III.64)

Definitions and scope of (these Svaras) should be grasped from the books on Musical Science. They cannot be cited here for the fear of increasing the bulk of the book.

Moreover, there are a few general grammatical rules which are applicable to all the four Vedas. They are enumerated here:

(1) At (i.e the long A) and Aic (i.e. Ai and Au) are called Vrddhi. (P. I.1.1)

Here the author of the Mababhasya says :-

(2) "In the Vedas, in the nominal bases, the action of both Bha and Pada is also available. For instance, in Sa Suṣṭu-bha Sa Rkvata Ganena, the letter Ch (of Rkvatā) is converted into K because of its being a Pada; but the letter K is not converted into G because of its being Bha." (MB)

The action of both Bha and Pada takes place in the same word in the Vedas alone and not in the (current) Sanskrit.

(3) Adesa (i.e. a substitute) is treated just like the Sthanin (i.e. the original letter) but not in the case of Al (i.e. one letter).

(P. I.1.56)

Here the author of the Mahabhasya says:

(4) "The uses of Pratipadikas (i.e. nouns) (in the Vedas) depend on the particular meaning. No importance is attached to (a specific) case-ending. That case-ending is adopted whichever is thought to be rational."

According to this, 'sense is predominantly important and not the case-ending'. It is to be borne in mind.

- (1) "वृद्धिरार्वच् ॥" (P. I.1.1)
- (2) ''उमयसंज्ञान्यिप छन्दांसि दृश्यन्ते । तद्यथा स सुष्टुभा स ऋक्वता गणेन । पदत्वात् कुत्वम्, भत्वात् जश्त्वं न मवति ॥'' (MB.)
- (3) "स्थानिववादेशोऽनित्वधौ ॥" (P. I.1.56)
- (4) "प्रातिपदिकनिर्देशाश्चार्थतन्त्रा मवन्ति । न काञ्चित् प्राधान्येन विभक्तिमाश्रयन्ति । यां यां विभक्तिमाश्रयितुं बुद्धिरुपजायते सा सा प्राश्रयितव्या ॥"

(4A) "The negation and the Vikal pa (i e. the optional position) are called Vibhaşa." (P. I.1.44)

The Mahābhāşya remarks here :--

(5) "Words are used for expressing thought." (P. I.1.44)

These rules should be equally applied to the Vedic words as well as to the words of common language.

- (6) "A word which is significant and is not a Dhātu (i.e. a root) and a suffix is called Prātipadika." (P. I.2.45)
- (7) "There are many words which have identical meaning. For instance, Indra, Sakra, Puruhūta, Purandara, Kandu, Kostha, Kusūla. (These are synonyms). Moreover, one word may have many meanings, such as Akṣāḥ, Pādaḥ, Māṣōḥ." (MB)

This rule has also general application. For example, there are many words in the Vedas, e.g. Agni &c., which have more than one meaning and many others which have only one meaning.

(8) "These (i.e. prefixes) precede the root." (P. I.4.80)

To this the Mahabhyaşya adds-

(9) "In the Vedas they (i.e. prefixes) succeed or are placed at a distance as in 'प्रायातमुपनिष्कृतम्" (the prefix Upa succeeds the verb Ayatam) and in 'उप प्रयोभिरागतम् ।' (the prefix Upa precedes the verb and is placed at a distance also).

According to this rule all the words styled as Upasargas and Gati are placed before or after or at a distance from the verbs.

^{(9) &}quot;श्चन्दिस परव्यविहतवचनं च । प्रायातमुपनिष्कृतम् । उप प्रयोगिरागतम् ॥" (MB.)

(10) "(The possessive case) is frequently used in the sense of the Dative." (P. II.3.62)

The Mahabhasya adds to this-

(11) "The Dative in the sense of the genitive should also be stated. (In the former case) the example is "Ya Kharvene Pibati Tasyai Kharvo Jayate Tisro Ratrih" (T.S. II.5.1). Here Tasyai (i.e. for her—Dative case) is used in the sense of Tasyah (i.e. of her—Genitive case). Similarly in other cases also."

This indicates that the Dative and Genitive are used inter-change ably. The author of the Mahābhāṣya considering the Brāhmaṇas as the Vedas has cited examples here from the Brāhmaṇas; otherwise, the use of the word Chandas in the aphorism would be meaningless, because the word Brāhmaṇa is already in continuity here from the preceding aphorism.

(12) "The root Ad is often changed into Ghasl in the Vedas."
(P. II.4.39)

According to this (rule) the root Ad is converted into Ghasl optionally, e.g. Ghastam Nunam (YV. XXI.43), Sagdhiśca Me (YV. XVIII.9). But in Attam Adya Madhyato Meda Udbhrtam, the change does not take place.

(13) "Sap is often deleted in the Vedas in roots Ad &c."

(P. II, 4.73)

In the Vedas, the suffix Sap is frequently elided, e.g. $V_{r}tram$ Hanati (RV. VIII.89.3) (in place of Hanti) and Hanti Sayate (in place of Sete). It is found in other roots also, e.g. Tradhvam No Devah (RV. II.29.6) (instead of Trayadhvam).

(14) "In the Vedas 'Sap' is often changed into 'Slu' (i.e. elided)."
(P. II.4.76)

^{(10) &#}x27;'चतुर्थ्यं बहुलं छन्दिस ॥'' (P. II.3.62)

^{(11) &#}x27;'वष्ठपर्थे चतुर्थी वस्तन्था। या खर्बेण पिवति तस्यै खर्बो जायते तिस्रो राजीरिति। तस्या इति प्राप्ते ॥'' (TS. II.5.1)

^{(13) &}quot;बहुतं छन्बसि ॥" (P. II.4.73)

^{(14) &#}x27;'बहुलं छन्दिस ॥'' (P. II.4.76)

For instance, बाति त्रियाणि (RV. IV.8.3) and धाति त्रियाणि (Here the Sap is elided). This rule is applicable to other roots also, e.g. पुणी विविध्य (RV, VII.16.11); जनिमा विविद्यत.

> (15) "In the Subjunctive mood (Let), Sip is placed (between the root and the suffix) optionally." (P. III.1,34)

Under this rule the suffix Sip often becomes Nit in the Vedas (i.e. it has Vrddhi), e.g. सविता धर्म साविषत प्रण आर्यंषि तारिषत (RV. 1,25,18). This peculiarity concerns only the subjunctive mood.

> (16) "In the Vedas both the suffixes Sanac as well as Sayac are found." (P. III.1.84)

This is to say that Sayac is generally found in (the Vedas), i.e. if succeeded by Hi, e.g. मही श्रस्कभायत, यो श्रस्कभायत, उद् गभायत, उन्मयायत । This rule is applicable peculiarly to verbs in the Imperative mood, second person, singular number only.

- (17) "There is frequency of variance (with reference to the Vikarana suffixes)." (P. III.1.85)
- (18) "The author of the (treatise) desires to sanction 'variation' (Vyatyaya) with reference to the following, viz. nominal and verbal terminations, letters, gender, person, tense, consonants, vowels, accent, agent (Krt) and the sign of the frequentatives (Yananta); and the sanction of all these variances is accomplished by the word Bahulam (i.e. frequent) included in the aphorism." (Siddhanta Kaumudī)

According to this authority, this deviation is confined to the Vikaranas (i.e. suffixes), nominal and verbal terminations, letters, gender, person, tense, the two forms (called Atmanepada and Parasmaipada) of verbs, accent, agent and Yan, i.e. the sign of frequentative.

Their examples follow in the respective order:

"Dhuri Dakṣiṇāyāḥ' (RV. I.164.9) (for Dakṣiṇāyām); 'Caṣalam Ye Aśva-yūpāya Takṣati' (RV. I.162.6) (for Takṣanti); 'Triṣṭubhaujah Subhitam Ugra Vīram' (for Sudhitam); 'Madhoḥ Tṛptā Iva Āsate' (for Madhunaḥ); 'Adha Sa Vīraiḥ Daśabhiḥ Viyūyaḥ' (RV. VII.104.15) (for Viyūyat); 'Śvo-Agnīn Ādhasyamanena Śvaḥ Somena Yakṣyamanena' (for Ādhatā and Yaṣṭā respectively); 'Brahmacāriṇam Icchate' (AV. XI.5.17) (for Icchati); 'Pratīpam Anyaḥ Ūrmir-Yudhyati' (for Yudhyate).'

Here Adhata and Yasta are in the future tense, third person, singular umber. Here, in place of Tast, Sya is used.

(19) "The suffix Kvip is optionally added to the root Han if preceded by a word in the Vedas." (P. III.2.88)

By this rule Kvip suffix is frequently used in the Vedas, e.g. Matrha, Matrghatah.

(20) "The past perfect tense (Lit) is used in the sense of the past indefinite in the Vedas." (P. II.2,105)

According to this rule Lit is used in the Vedas to denote the simple past, e.g. Aham Dyava Prthivi Atatana.

- (21) "In the Vedas, Kanac is optionally used in the Lit (i.e. past perfect)." (P. III.2.106)
 e.g. श्रांन चिवयान: ।। (T.S.V. 2.3.6) श्रहं सूर्यमुभयतो ददशं । In this rule the repetition of the word Lit, which as a matter of course is to be understood from the preceding aphorism, indicates that Kanac is used even in the
 - (22) "In the Vedas Kvasu suffix is added optionally in case of Lit." (P. III.2.107)

(23) "The suffix U is added to the roots, after the suffix Kya in the sense of "habit" etc. in an agent in the Vedas." (P. III.2.170)

According to this aphorism in the Vedas, U is added to the roots after the suffix Kya to indicate habit in an agent, e.g. Mitrayuh, Sansvedayuh, Sumnayuh. "A word endowed with an attached indicatory syllable is also included where (the same word) dis-attached from the indicatory syllable is accepted."* (MB)

According to this rule the suffix Kyac, Kyan and Kyas (i.e. Kya with attached syllables) are also generally included here (i.e. the suffix U is added to those words also which take these suffixes).

(24) "The affixes Kṛtya and Lyuṭ are added to all roots and in all senses (even not enumerated here before)." (P. III.3.113)

In the Mahabhaşya it is stated :-

(25) "Only Krt and Lyut or all Krt affixes are optional" ought to have been stated here. The purpose is (to form the words), e.g. Pāda-Hāraka &c. (even in the sense of instrumental cases as Pādābhyām Hriyate).

According to this, all Krt affixes are added to all roots in all cases. This rule is applicable in the Vedas as well as in the common language.

(26) "The suffix Yuc is added to all roots, having the sense of Gatt (i.e. to go) preceded by the words lṣat and others in the Vedas."

(P. III.3.129)

According to this the suffix Yuc is added to the roots in the sense of motion preceded by words Isat &c, (i.e. Isat, Dur, Su) denoting the sense of Krecha (i.e. difficulty) and Akrecha (i.e. convenience) in the Vedas, e.g. Supa-Sadanah Agnth.

(27) "The suffix Yuc is found added to other roots also in the Vedas." (P. III.3.130)

^{*} निरनुबन्धकप्रहणे सानुबन्धकस्यापिग्रहणम् ॥" (MB.)

^{(27) &}quot;प्रन्येक्योऽपि दुश्यते ॥" (P. III.3.130)

The addition of the suffix Yuc is found in case of other roo also, e.g. Suvedanam Akrnod Brahmane Gam or Sudohanam Akrno Brahmane Gam.

(28) "In the Vedas the affixes Lun, Lan and Lit (ordinarily denoting the three forms of the past tense) are optionally added a signify all the tenses." (P. III.4.)

In the Vedas the affixes denoting the three types of the past tens viz. aorist, imperfect and perfect, are optionally added to the roots imply all the tenses. For instance, aorist : ग्रहं तेश्योऽकरं नमः (YV. XVI.8); imperfect : ग्राग्निमद्य होतारमवृणीतायं यजमान: । (Asvalayan SS. III.6.16); Perfect : प्रदा ममार ।। (RV. X.55.8)

(29) "In the Vedas the affix Let is optionally used in the sense Lin." (P. III.4.

In the Vedas, subjunctive mood (Let) is used where optative benedictive is used in common language to denote command or the relation between the cause and effect, e.g. Jivati Śaradaḥ Śata (RV. X.85.39) &c.

(30) "Let is used to signify a contract or suspicion also."

(P. III.4.

In the Vedas subjunctive (Let) is used to denote a contract suspicion, e.g. Aham Eva Pasanam Ise (contract); Net Jihmayanto Naraka Patama (RV. Khila. X.106.1) (Suspicion). There is danger of falling calamity on account of evil conduct.

(31) "At or At is added to Let."

(P. 111.4.9

In the Vedic subjunctive (Let), At or At is added.

(32) "A of Let is changed into At."

(P. III.4.9

In the Vedas A is converted into Ai in the subjunctive dual numb of the root in Atmanepada, e.g. Mantrayaite, Mantrayaithe.

^{(28) &}quot;छन्दित लुङ् लङ् लिट: ॥" (P. III.4.6)

^{(31) &}quot;ਜੇਵੀऽडाटी ॥" (P. III.4.94)

^{(32) &}quot;मात ऐ ॥" (P. III.4.95)

(33) "The E of Let is changed into Ai optionally elsewhere." (P. III.4.96)

Except the scope of Atah Ai (i.e. the preceding rule) E of the subjunctive mood is converted into Ai optionally, e.g. Aham Eva Pasūnām Isai or Ise.

(34) "The I of the conjugational terminations is optionally elided in Let, Parasmai pada." (P. III.4.97)

In the subjunctive of the Parasmaipada, I in the conjugational terminations is optionally elided, e.g. Tarati, Tarati; Tarat, Tarat; Tarişati; Tarişati; Tarişat; Tarişat; Tarişati; Tarişati; Tarişat; Tarişat; Tarişati; Tarişati, Tarişati; Tarişati, Tarişat

(35) "S of the first person in Let is optionally elided." (P. III.4.98)

The letter S of the first person in the subjunctive mood is optionally elided, e.g. Karavava or Karavavah; Karavam or Karavamah.

(36) "The affixes Se, Sen &c. (enumerated here) are added to the roots in the Vedas in the sense of Tumun (i.e. the infinitive)."

(P. III.4.9)

These fifteen affixes are added to all roots in the sense of the infinitive (Tumun) in the Vedas alone. They are: Se, Sen, Ase, Asen, Kse, Kasen, Adhyai, Adhyain, Kadhyai, Kadhyain, Śadhyain, Śadhyain, Tavai, Tavan and Tavan. According to K_{I} affixes which end in M, E, O, Ai and Au, are treated as Avyayas (i.e. indeclinables)', all the words formed by adding these 15 affixes are regarded as indeclinables. In these affixes (enumerated above) the letter N is attached for the purpose of accent; the letter K to indicate that Guna and $V_I ddhi$ are prohibited here; the letter N also for the said purpose and the letter S to make Sit (i.e. Sits are open to Guna etc.). The examples are:—

^{(33) &}quot;वैतोऽन्यत्र ॥" (P. III.4.96)

Se ; Vakşe Rāyaḥ; Sen : Tavameşe Rathanam (RV. 1.66.3); As & Asen : Kratve Dakṣāya Jīvase (AV. VI 19.2); Kse & Kasen : Śriyase Adhyai & Adhyain : Karmaṇi-Upācaradhyai; Kadhyai : Indrāgnī Āhuva dhyai; Kadhyain : Śriyadhyai; Śadhyai & Śadhyain : Fibadhyai, Sah Mādayadhyai; here because of being Śit, it causes the change of Pa intePib; Tavai : Somamindrāya Pātavai; Taven : Daśame Māsi Sūtave Taven : Svardeveşu Gantave.

(37) "The affixes Namul and Kamul are added to the roots followed by the root Śak (i e. to be able) in the sense of Tumun."

(P. III, 4.12

When a root is succeeded by the root Sak, it takes the affixes Namu and Kamul in the Vedas in the sense of the infinitive. In these affixes, the letters N, K and L are included respectively to introduce Vrddhi; to prohibit Guna and Vrddhi and for the purpose of accent respectively, e.g. Agnim Val Deva Vibhajam Nāśaknuvam (in the sense of Vibhaktum).

(38) "The affixes Tosun and Kasun are added to the root preceded by the word Isvara." (P. 111.4.13)

The affixes Tosun and Kasun are added to the roots preceded by th word Isvara in the Vedas in the sense of the infinitive, e.g. Tosun: Isvar Abhicaritoh; Kasun: Isvaro Vilikhah (for Vicaritum and Vilekhitum).

(39) "The affixes Taval, Ken, Kenya and Tvan are added to the roots in the sense of Krtya (i.e. abstract idea or the object of an action)."

(P. III.4.14

The Kṛtya affixes mainly denote the abstract idea or the object of a action; they also express Arha (i.e. to be able) and other meanings. In thi sense in the Vedas the affixes Tavai, Ken, Kenya and Tvan are used, e.g. Tavai: Paridhātavai; Ken: Nāvagahe; Kenya: Didṛkṣenyaḥ, Śuśrūṣenyaḥ Tvan: Kartvam haviḥ (AV. I.43).

(40) "The feminine suffix Nis is always added to a Bahuvril compound, ending in An and its Pun ultimate is elided in proper noun and in the Vedas." (P. IV.1.25)

^{(37) &#}x27;'शकि णमुल्कमुली ॥'' (P. III.4.12)

^{(38) &}quot;ईश्वरे तोसुन कसुनौ ॥" (P. III.4.13)

^{(39) &#}x27;'कृत्यार्थे तबैकेन केन्यरवन: ॥''. (P. III.4.14)

^{(40) &#}x27;नित्यं संज्ञाधन्दसी: ॥'' (P. IV.1.29)

In a proper noun or in the Vedas, a Bahuvrīhi compound ending in An with its Pun-ultimate elided takes the suffix sto form a feminine gender always, e.g. Gauh Pañcadāmnī, Ekadāmnī.

(41) "The suffix siq is always added to the words Bahu &c. to denote feminine gender." (P. IV.1.46)

To the words Bahu &c., in the Vedas, the affix कीष् is added to express feminine gender, e.g. Bahvīşu Hitvā Prapiban.

(42) "The affix Yat is added to the word in the locative case in the sense of to be (Bhava) in the Vedas." (P. IV.4.110)

The affix Yat is added in the Vedas to a Pratipadika in the locative case in the sense of 'what stays there' (Bhava). It is an exception to the general rule according to which the affixes An and Gha are added. They are also added if and when such words are found, e.g. (Yat) Medhyaya Ca, Vidyutyaya Ca Namah. (YV. XVI.38)

We do not cite here all the rules (Aphorisms) on the addition of the affixes to the roots to denote meanings in the Vedas which are enumerated after this aphorism up to the end of the Pāda (i.e. section). These rules will be cited at the proper places, where the examples of those rules are found in the Vedic verses.

(43) "The affix Vini is added optionally in the Vedas in the sense of the affix Matup." (P. V.2.122)

In the Vedas the affix Vini is added optionally to all the Prātipadikas (i.e. nouns) in the sense of abundance &c. (Bhumā etc.). The meanings (referred here as) Bhūmā &c. (i.e. abundance &c.) are enumerated as under in the commentary of the following aphorism by the author of the Mahā-bhāṣya:—

(44) "The affix Matup is added in the sense of possessive and locative cases." (P. V.2.94)

The affix Matup is added in the following seven senses in the Vedas as well as in the spoken language:—

^{(41) &}quot;नित्यं छन्दिस ॥" (P. IV.1.46)

^{(42) &}quot;मबे छन्वसि ॥" (P. IV.4.110)

^{(43) &}quot;बहुलं छन्दिस ॥" (P. V.2.122)

^{(44) &#}x27;'तवस्थास्त्यस्मिन्नित मतुप् ॥" (P. V.2.94)

(45) "Abundance, censure, praise, inseparable relation, excellence, connection and the desire of stating an existing quality. The affixes Matup and others are used in these senses." (MB)

There are a number of supplementary rules governing the particular roots and the particular suffixes referred to in this aphorism. They will be explained at the relevant places.

(46) "The affix Tac is added to the compound ending in An or As optionally in the Vedas." (P. V.4.103)

It is to be stated that in the Vedas the addition of Tac after a compound ending in An or As is optional; e.g. An: Brahma-Samam or Brahma Sama; As: Deva-Cchandasam or Deva-Cchandah.

In the (following aphorism) it has been stated (in the Mahabhasya) that the Dhatus (roots) have a variety of meanings also:—

(47) "The first letter of the Ekaca (i.e. a root having one vowel) or the second letter of the Ajadi (i.e. a root beginning with a vowel) is duplicated if they are succeeded by the affixes San or Yan (মন্ or যছ)."

(P. VI.1.9)

"Roots have a number of meanings also. For instance, the root Vap means to sow ordinarily, but it also denotes the sense "to cut", e.g. $Kesan\ Vapatl$ (i.e. he cuts hair); the root Id means to eulogise but it is used to signify 'to impel and to request also, e.g. Agnir-va ito $Vrstim\ Ide$, $Maruto\ Amutaścyāvayanti$; the root Kr expresses 'to bring non-existent

(45) "भूमनिन्दाप्रशंसासु नित्ययोगेऽतिशायने । संसर्गेऽस्ति विवक्षायां भवन्ति मतुवादय: ॥" (MB)

The following are their examples—

- (a) Abundance : Goman, Pavaman.
- (b) Censure : Kakudma-Vartinī Kanyā.
- (c) Praise : Rupavan.
- (d) Constant Relation : Kşīriņo Vrksah.
- (e) Excellence : Udarini Kanyā.
- (f) Contact: Dandin, Chatrin. Here this contact is restricted as Vṛṭṭi-Niyāmaka. Hence the phrase Puruṣī Daṇḍaḥ cannot be regularised.
- (46) ''ग्रनसन्तान्नपुंसकाच्छन्दिस ॥'' (P. V.4.103)
- (47) ''सन्यकोः ॥'' (P VI.1.9)

into existent' but it is used in the sense of 'rubbing' also, e.g. Pṛṣṭham Kuru, Pādau Kuru (i.e. rub the back or feet); 'throwing', e.g. Kaṭe Kuru, Ghaṭe Kuru, Aśmānam Itaḥ Kuru, i.e. place on mat, place in the pitcher or throw out this piece of stone this side "* (MB)

This citation from the Mahābhāṣya indicates that the roots have also the meanings other than those enumerated in the (list of Roots) Dhatu Pāṭha. The above-mentioned three roots have been cited by way of illustration alone.

(48) "The affix Si is elided optionally in the Vedas." (P. VI.1.70)

In the Vedas the case termination Si is optionally elided in the neuter gender, e.g. Viśva Bhuvanānī in place of Viśvani Bhuvanāni.

(49) "The root $H\bar{u}$ gets Samprasarana (i.e. vocalisation of the semi-vowels) in the Vedas optionally." (P. VI.1.34)

According to this aphorism in the Vedas all these roots get optional Samprasāraņa even in the case, where it is not ordinarily available, e.g. Hūmahe &c.

(50) "The letters I, U, R & L at the end of the case-ending remain unchanged optionally and are also shortened, if they are followed by dissimilar vowel." (P. VI.1.127)

According to this rule in the Vedas, the words, e.g. Işa and Akşa, retain their original forms optionally, e.g. Işa, Akşa, Imīre. In such cases, this retention of the original from ordinarily is not possible.

(51) "In the Devatā-Dvandva compound the affix Anan is added before the second member." (P. VI.3.26)

^{* &}quot;बह्वर्था प्रिप धातवो भवन्ति । तद् यथा — विष: प्रिकरणे दृष्ट: छेदनेऽपि च वर्त्तते — केशान् वपित । ईडि: स्तुतिचोदनायाञ्चासु दृष्ट: ईरणेऽपि च वर्त्तते । ग्रिग्निवा इतो वृष्टिमीडे । मरुतोऽमुतश्च्यावयन्ति । करोति: श्रयमभूतप्रादुर्भावे दृष्ट: । निर्मली-करणे चापि वर्त्तते — पृष्टं कुरु — पादौ कुरु । उन्मृदानेति गम्यते । निक्षेपणेऽपि वर्त्तते । कटे कुरु, ग्रहमानमित: कुरु — स्थापथेति गम्यते ॥" (MB)

^{(48) &}quot;शेश्छन्दिस बहुलम् ॥" (P. VI-1.70)

^{(49) &}quot;बहुलं छन्दिस ॥" (P. VI.1.34)

^{(50) &#}x27;'इकोऽसवर्णे शाकल्यस्य हस्वश्च ॥'' (P. VI.1.127)

^{(51) &#}x27;'देवताह्नन्हें च ॥" (P. VI.3.26)

In the dual compounds of the Devatās, the affix Anan is added to the final letter of the first member on account of its being sta (i.e. an affix where sis elided), e.g. Sūryā Candramasau, (RV. X.903) Indra Vrhaspatī. There are two supplementary rules:—

- (52) "In the Devatā-Dvandva compound where the word Vayu occurs at either place, Anan is not added, e.g. Agnivāyū, Vayvagnī." (Vārtika) (MB)
- (53) "This rule is applicable also in case of Brahma Prajapati &c., e.g. Brahma-Prajapatī, Śiva-Vaisravanau, Skanda-Višākhau." (Vārtika) (MB)

In these examples the addition of Anan was possible under the general rule but the same is prohibited by these two Vartikas (sub-rules). This is an invariable exception.

- (54) "In the Vedas the affix Rut is added optionally." (P. VII.1.8)

 According to this rule Rut is added to the affix Jha in the Atmanepada, e.g. Deva Aduhra.
 - (55) "In the Vedas the suffix Bhis is changed optionally into Ais."
 (P. VII.1.10)

According to this rule Ais is substituted for Bhis in the Vedas, e.g. Devebhih Manuse Jane (RV. VI 16.1.) (for Devaih).

(56) "The Sups (i.e. the case-endings) are replaced optionally by Su, Luk (i.e. elision), Pūrvasavarņa, Ā, Āt, Śe, Ya, Da, Dya, Yac and Al."

(P. VII.1.39)

This means that the irregular case-endings mentioned in this rule are substituted for the regular case-endings and irregular verbal terminations for regular verbal terminations.

(57) "The affixes Iyac, Diyac and I are to be included here."
(Vārtika, MB)

- (52) ''देवताद्वन्द्वे चोभयत्र वायो: प्रतिषेध: ॥'' (Vartika MB)
- (53) "ब्रह्मप्रजापत्यादीनां च ॥" (Vārtika MB)
- (54) ''बहुलं छन्दिस ॥'' (P. VII.1.8)
- (55) "बहुलं छन्दिस ॥" (P. VII.1.10)
- (56) 'सूपां सुलुक्पूर्वसवर्णाच्छ्रेयाड्यायाजाल: ।।" (P. VII.1.39)
- (57) "इयाडियाजीकाराणामुवसंख्यानम् ॥" (Vartika, MB)

For example :-

Iyac: Darviya Pari [man (for Daruna);

Diyac: Sumitriya Na Āpaḥ, Sukşetriyā, Sugatriya (for Sumitrinaḥ, Sukşetrinah, Sugatrinah);

- 1 : Drtim Na Śuşkam Sarasī Śayanam (RV. VII.103.2) (here I for Ni).
- (58) "An, Ayac, Ayar are also to be included in this list."

(Vartika, MB)

For example:-

An : Prabahava (for Bahuna);

Ayac: Svapnaya (for Svapnena);

Ayar: Sa Naḥ Sindhum Iva Navayā (for Nava).

In the Vedic words these 16 affixes mentioned above (56, 57, 58) take the place of the regular case-endings. There are other irregular verbal terminations which take the place of the regular verbal terminations under a separate rule.

For example:

Su : Rjavah Santu Panthah (in place of Panthanah);

Luk: Parame Vyoman (RV. I.164.39) (for Vyomni);

Pūrvasavarņa: Dhītī, Matī (for Dhītyā, Matyā);

At : Ubha Yantara (for Ubhau Yantarau);

Śe; Na Yuşme Vājabandhavah (RV. VIII.68.19) (for Yūyam);

Yā ! Uruyā (for Urunā);

Da: Nabha Prthivyah (YV. XI.76) (for Nabhau);

Dya: Anuştya (for Anuştubha);

Yac: Sadhuya (for Sadhu);

Al : Vasanta Yajet (for Vasante);

(59) "The (case-ending) Jas is replaced by Asuk after a noun ending in A."

(P. VII.1.50)

By this rule Asuk is substituted for Jas, i.e. the sign of the nominative case in plural number, e.g. Viśve Devasah (RV. I.3.7) (for Viśve Devah); Datvyasah (for Datvyah) and so on.

^{(58) &#}x27;'ब्राङ्याजयारां चोपसंख्यानम् ॥'' (Vārtika, MB)

^{(59) &#}x27;'म्राज्जसेरसुक् ॥'' (P. VII.1.50)

- (60) "In the Vedas, the addition of It is frequent." (P. VII.3.97) Wherever It is added in the Vedas, it is done so by this rule.
- (61) "The affix /t is to be added to Abhyasa (i.e. the reduplicated form of the root) in the Vedas variously." (P. VII.4.78)

By this rule It is added to the reduplicated form of a root followed by Slu frequently in the Vedas.

(62) The Ma of Matup is changed into Va in the Vedas, when it is preceded by a noun ending in I or Ra." (P. VIII.2.15)

By this rule the Ma of Matup is converted into Va even when it is not regularised by ordinary rule, e.g. Revan etc.

- (63) "The R of the root Krp is changed into L." (P. VIII.2.18)
- (63A) "The R of the root Krp is changed into L optionally in the nouns in the Vedas." (Vārtika, MB), e.g. Kapitaka, Kapiraka, &c.
- (64) "S is elided if followed by a suffix beginning with Dh."
 (P. VIII.2.25)

According to the following rule all letters are optionally elided in the Vedas. It is an Aprāpta-Vibhāṣā:—

* "Letters are elided in the Vedas optionally." (MB)

E.g. Işkarttāram Adhvara (for Nişkarttāram). Thus "the roots beginning with D are changed into Dh.

(P. VIII.2.32)

(65) "The H of the roots H_T and Grah is changed into Bh in the Vedas." (Vārtika, MB)

- (60) "बहुलं छन्दिस ॥" (P. VII.3.97)
- (61) "बहुलं छन्विस ॥" (P VII.4.78)
- (62) "छन्वसीर: ॥" (P. VIII.2.15)
- (63) "कृपो रो ल: ॥" (P. VIII.2.18)
- (63A) ''संज्ञाखन्दसोर्वा कपिलकादीनामिति वक्तव्यम् ॥'' (Vartika, MB)
 - (64) "धि च ॥" (P. VIII,2.25)
 - * ''छन्दिस वर्णलोपो वा यथेष्कर्त्तारमध्वरे ॥'' (MB)
 - अल बावेर्धातोर्घः । (P. VIII.2.32)
 - (65) "तुप्रहोर्भश्छन्दसि ।" (Vartika MB)

It ought to be said here that the H of the roots H_r and Grah becomes Bh in the Vedas, e.g. Gardabhena Sambharati (for Sanharati); Grbhnati for Grhnati.

- (66) "The Ru is substituted for the final of Matup and Vasu in the vocative case in the Vedas." (P. VIII.3.1)
- E.g. Gomah, Harlvah, Midhvah.
- (67) "Visargas followed by Sar (i.e. S, S, S) are changed optionally."
 (P. VIII.3.36)
- (68) The Visargas are optionally elided if followed by letters Sar (i.e. S, S, S) which are again followed by letters Khar (Kh, Ph, Ch, Th, Th, C, T, T, K, P, S, S, S)." (Vartika, MB)

It is optional to retain Visargas before a sibilant, e.g. $V_T k s a$ Sthatarah or $V_T k s a h$ Sthatarah. For the same reason we find in the Vedas usages like Vayava Stha (Y. V.I.I). This is, therefore, a general rule applicable everywhere.

(69) "The Unadis (i.e. affixes enumerated in the list called Unadis beginning with Un) are manifold (Bahulaka)."

(P. III.3.1)

The author of the Mahābhāşya remarks upon this aphorism as below :—

(70) "What is the significance of (the word) "manifold" (Bāhulaka) here? Manifoldness is due to the fact that only a few roots have found place (there), i.e. the Unadi affixes are enjoined to be added only to the small number of roots and not to all. The enumeration of these words is only partial, i.e. most of them have been enumerated here but this is not all. Moreover. the actions have not been sanctioned in all these cases: hence it was said so, i.e. the list of actions enjoined (i.) the Unadi) is not complete and exhaustive. All the actions could not be defined here. Now, what is the reason for enumerating only a small number of roots to which Unadi affixes are added? Why have not all the roots been included? Moreover, why is the enumeration partial and not exhaustive? Besides, how can we account for a limited sanction of the limited actions? Why all the actions have not been defined here? (It was done so) so that the Naigamas (i.e. the Vedic words) and the Rudhas (i.e. the conventional) words may be regularised, i.e. the purpose is to properly regularise (the formation of) Vedic and non-Vedic words which are based on convention only. The author of the Nirukta says that all nouns are derived from verbs. According to the etymologists all nouns have etymological derivations. It is also (the verdict) of a grammarian, the son of Sakata, i.e. one of the grammarians Sake tayana also holds the view that all nouns are derivative. But what explanation can be offered in case where no specific (etymological) significance is possible? The word, the

^{(66) &}quot;मतुबसो रु: सम्बुद्धौ छन्वसि ॥" (P. VIII.3.1)

With the help of the root, suffix can be inferred and with the help of the affix, a root can be guessed out. In the nouns (the first parts) are roots and the subsequent ones are suffixes. Their mutual relation can be guessed out from the effects. This is the procedure regarding the Unadis."

(MB)

EXPLANATION

The word "manifoldeness" means that in the Unadi-Patha (i.e. a list of affixes beginning with the affix U_n) the affixes are enjoined to be added to a very thin number of roots. The word "manifold option" includes all roots, even those to which no affix has been assigned or added to. Similarly all the affixes could not be enumerated here and certainly there are other affixes also. The use of a few Unadi affixes only has been illustrated with reference to a few of the roots and not with reference to all of them. Only a few of the affixes (and the roots) have been recorded for economy (of space) and all of them have not been included. Other affixes (i.e. affixes not mentioned here) have also been (approved and) sanctioned by the word "manifold option", e.g. Phid, Phiddau. The use of the word 'optional' indicates that the actions sanctioned by the aphorisms sometimes do not take place while those not sanctioned by them do also take place. For instance, in the word Danda, the letter Da belonging to affix does not become It (i.e. thus it is not elided. Its are always elided). "Why are the other roots, affixes and the actions accepted rather than those sanctioned by aphorisms?" To this question our answer is that otherwise many Naigamas (i.e. Vedic words) and the Rudhis (i.e. words having conventional usage with obscure etymology) which are in vogue in common speech would not be regularised. The author of the Nirukta and one of the grammarians, named Sakatayana, declare that all nouns are derived from roots. In the phrase Sakatas ya Ca Tokam, the word Toka means 'a son', i.e. the son of Sakata (i.e. name of a Sage). The word Toka has been included in the list of synonyms, signifying 'a son'. In case where specific meaning is not very clear and where neither the root nor the affix is apparent, one should make a guess of the affix from the root and of the root from the affix (as the case may be). But this guess has its scope and is restricted. This guess is to be adopted (with reference to) nouns only, The rule about Unadi is that at first a guess should be made about roots and after that about the affixes. This guess should be such as would give the desired word formed from the due relation between the root, affix and actions.*

- * By citing the above-mentioned extract from the Mahabhasya Dayananda has proved beyond all doubts the following points
 - (a) The Vedic words form their own category.
 - (b) The Vedas have no Radhi (conventional meanings) words, which are found only in the spoken language.
 - (c) Many of the Vedic words and all the Rudhi words cannot be formed by general procedure laid down in grammars.

To strengthen this assertion we should take notice of the following:—

- (i) नगमरूढि भवं हि सुसाधु ।
- (ii) नैगमाश्च रूढिशब्दाश्च = प्रवैदिका:, ते सुष्टु साधव: कथं स्यु: ?

Dayānanda also believes that all words in the Vedas are Yaugikas, i.e. are derived from the roots. Cf:

"नाम च धातुजमाह निरुते व्यारकणे शकटस्य च तोकम्।"

The method of the Vedic interpretation advanced and followed by our author clearly shows the that he is the follower of the Nairukta (i.e. etymologist) school. The following citations will be read by our readers with profit in this connection:—

- (1) "नामान्याख्यातजानि इति शाकटायनो नैरुक्त समयरच ॥" (N. I.12)
- (2) ''तत् खल्वाहु ; कतिभ्यस्तु नाम जायते । सत्त्वानां वैदिकानां वा यव् वान्यदिह किञ्चन । (Contd.)

(BD., I.23-24, 26-27, 30-31)

No doubt that there were others also who did not hold this view. Gargya and some of the grammarians did not cherish this idea.

- Cf: (a) ''उणाबयोऽज्युत्पन्नानि प्रातिपदिकानि ॥''
 - (b) "न सर्वाण" इति गार्ग्यो वैयाकरणानां चैके ॥" (N. I.12)

A FEW FIGURES OF SPEECH

Now we shall describe briefly a few varieties of figures of speech. We shall at first proceed to explain an Alankara (figure of speech) called Upama (i.e. Simile). The Simile is fully expressed (i.e. Purna-Upama), when its four constituents, viz. the common property, the word expressing comparison, the object of comparison and the standard of comparison, are all fully expressed, e.g.

(1) "Be a source of gay gifts to us as a father to his son."

(RV. I.1.9)

The other variety of Upamā is Lupta-Upamā (i.e. Elliptical Simile) which is again divided into eight kinds, when any one or more of them be unexpressed (by words), viz. (1) Vacaka-Lupta (i.e. in which the word implying comparison is left unexpressed), e.g. Bhīma-Balī, i.e. brave like Bhīma. [Here the word Iva signifying comparison is left out.); (2) Dharma-Lupta (i.e. where the common property is unexpressed), e.g. Kamala-Netrah. (Here the word showing common quality, e.g. Sundara is omitted.); (3) Dharma-Vācaka-Luptā (i.e. where the common quality and the word denoting similarity are left out), e.g. Puruşa-Vyaghrah. (Here the words showing comparison and common property are omitted); (4) Vacaka-Upameya-Lupta (i.e. where the word indicating comparison and the object of comparison are elided), e.g. Vidyaya Panditayante. (Here the word expressing comparison and the object of comparison are not expressed); (5) Upamāna-Luptā (i.e. in which the standard of comparison is left out); (6) Vacaka-Upamana-Lupta (i.e. where the word showing comparison and the standard of comparison are unexpressed); (7) Dharma-Upamāna-Luptā (i.e. in which common property and standard of comparison unexpressed); (8) Dharma-Upamana-Vacaka-Lupta (i.e. in which three elements, viz. common property, standard of comparison and the word indicating comparison are elided), e.g. Kaka-Taliyo Guru-Śişya-Samagamah (i.e. the meeting of the preceptor and the pupil is (unexpected) like that of a crow and palm fruit). Now the figure of speech called Rupaka (i.e. metaphor) is treated. It consists in the representation of the subject of ^{(1) &}quot;स न: पितेव सूनवेऽग्ने सुपायनो मव।" (RV. I.1.9)

description which (subject) is identified with another (i.e. a well-known standard). With reference to greater or lesser or equal degree of identification, it is of six types:

- (i) Adhika-Abheda-Rupaka [i.e. complete (or greater degree of) identification], e.g.:
 - (2) "He is verily the sun as he expels the darkness, i.e. He is complete in knowledge."
- (ii) Nyuna-Abheda-Rupaka (i.e. lesser degree of non-difference), e.g. :
 - (3) "He is verily Patañjali but is not the author of the Mahābhāşya."
- (iii) An-Ubhaya-Abheda-Rupaka (i.e. in which there is distinction without difference), e.g.:
 - (4) "The king (or God) protects the people resorting to impartiality."
- (iv) Adhika-Tad-Rupya (i.e. higher degree of identification), e g. :
 - (5) "No need of regal joys when bliss of knowledge is secured."
- (v) Nyūna-Tad-Rūpya-Rūpaka (i.e. deficient identification), e.g.:
 - (6) "This fair statesmanship brings all joys but it has no origin from the sun."
- (vi) An-Ubhaya-Tad-Rupya-Rupaka (i.e. identification which is neither complete nor incomplete), e.g.:
 - (7) "As the sun is covered by clouds, let this sun of knowledge shine."

The figure of speech called Śleṣa (i.e. Pun or Paronomasia) consists in using words which express more than one meaning. It has three kinds, viz.: (1) Prakṛta-Aneka-Viṣaya; (2) Aprakṛta-Aneka-Viṣaya; and (3) Prakṛta-Aprakṛta-Aneka-Viṣaya. The example of the Prakṛta-Aneka-Viṣaya (i.e. where all the meanings expressed are applicable in the context), is: Nava-Kambalo

^{(2) &}quot;ग्रयं हि सविता साक्षात् येन व्वान्तं विनाश्यते ।" ॥ १ ॥

^{(3) &#}x27;'ग्रयं पतञ्जलि: साक्षात् भाष्यस्य कृतिना विना ।'' ॥ २ ॥

^{(4) &#}x27;'ईश: प्रजामवत्यद्य स्वीकृत्य समनोतिताम् ।'' ॥ ३ ॥

^{(5) &}quot;विद्यानन्दे हि सम्प्राप्ते राज्यानन्देन कि तदा।" ॥ ४॥

^{(6) &}quot;साध्वीयं सुखदा नीतिरसूर्यप्रमवा मता।" ॥ ४ ॥

^{(7) &#}x27;'म्रयं घनावृतात् सूर्यात् विद्यासूर्यो विभज्यते ।'' ॥ ६ ॥

Ayam Manuşyaḥ [i.e. this man has Nava (new or nine) blankets]. Here the word Nava expresses two meanings—new or nine; (and both the meanings are relevant in the context). (2) A-Prakṛta-Aneka Viṣaya (i.e. where only one meaning is applicable in the context), e.g. Śveto Dhavati. Here it may mean a white man runs or a white dog runs ((Śva Itaḥ) from this place. Alambusanam Yāta (MB. I) may mean either the carrier of straw is strong or the carrier of gourds, or e.g., Agnim Ide (RV. I.1.1), (where the word Agni may mean God or fire). The following is an example of Aprakṛta-viṣaya (in which only one meaning is applicable):—

"Harina Tvad Balam Tulyam Kṛtina Hita-Śaktinā." (It may mean either that your prowess is comparable to that of a highly powerful lion or that your prowess ir equal to that of the Omnipotent God, as the word Hari expresses both the meanings—God or lion). This is the example of (3) Prakṛta-Aprakṛta-Aneka-Viṣaya. (Another example of the same is) Uccaran Bhūri Yānāḍhyaḥ Śuśubhe Vāhinī-pattḥ. (Here Vāhīnīpnti may mean the lord of armies or the lord of rivers).

There is a large number of other figures of speech. All of them could not be mentioned here. They will be explained wherever they occur (in our commentary).

(In this connection the following verse from the Rgveda deserves notice):—

- (8) "Aditi is heaven; Aditi is the firmament (or the mid air); Aditi is mother, father and son; Aditi is all the gods; Aditi is the five classes of men; Aditi is all that has been born and shall be born).

 (RV. I.89.10)
- (8) 'श्रादितिचौरिदितिर्न्तिरिक्षमिदितिर्माता स पिता स पुतः । विश्वे देवा श्रदितिः पञ्च जन्। श्रदितिर्जातमिदितिः जनित्वम् ॥''

(RV. I.89.10)

This verse has been quoted by Yaska in the Nirukta (IV. 23) with the following remarks—

"ग्रदितेविम्तिमाचष्टे एतान्यदीनानीति वा।"

The meaning of the word Aditi according to Yaska is-

"श्रवितिर्दोना देवमाता ॥" (N. IV.22)

(Contd.)

In this stanza, the word Aditi is used in the sense of shining upper region etc. In the commentary we shall also take the word Aditi in the same senses. But as we shall not cite this verse everywhere, we have thought it proper to cite it here once for all.

(Contd. from page 457)

The word Aditi according to Griffith means 'infinite', i.e. Infinite Nature Aditi, literally meaning independent or indivisible, may here signify also either the earth or the mother of the gods, according to the Scholiast. According to Yaska, the hymn declares the might of Aditi (IV. 23 quoted above); or as Sayana, "Aditi is hymned as the same with the universe."

The word Pañca-Janāḥ may mean 'five classes of men'. The five orders of human society are said to be the four castes and the outcastes (cf. चत्वारो वर्णा: पञ्चमो निपाद:). It is also interpreted as 'five classes of beings, or gods, men, Gandharvas, Serpents and Pitaras or, as it occurs in the Nirukta (III. 8), Gandharvas, gods, Aśvins and Rākṣasas.

Cf: "गन्धर्वा: पितरो देवा श्रसुरा रक्षांसीत्येके चत्वारो वर्णा निषाद: पञ्चम इत्योपमन्यव: ।" (N. III.8)

ABBREVIATIONS USED IN THE COMMENTARY

Now we shall refer to the abbreviations which are to be used (by us in the commentary (Bhāṣya) on the Vedas. The following are the abbre viations for the sake of ready reference to the citations from the four Vedas, the six Sastras, the six Angas, the four Brahmanas and the Taittiriya Aranyaka. In R. I.1.1, R will stand for the Rgveda, the first numera for the Mandala, the second for the Sukta, and the third for the Mantra. In Ya. I.1 Ya stands for the Yajurveda, the first numeral for th Adhvava and the second for the Mantra. In Sama, Pu. I.1.1 Sama, will stand for Samaveda, Pu. for Purva-Arcika, the first numeral for the Prapathaka the second for the Dasatt and the third for the Mantra. In Sama, U. 1.1.1 Sama stands for the Samaveda, U for Uttara Arcika, the first numeral for th Prapathaka, and the second for the Mantra. In the Uttara Arcika of th Samaveda, there are no Dasatts, but each Prapathaka is divided into two halves, in each of which the numbering of the Mantras is complete. fore with regard to the Uttara Arcika of the Samaveda, the following abbreviations also will be used, viz.; Sama, U.I. Pn. 1, Sama U.I. U.I. 1, i. which Sama stands for the Samaveda, U.I. Pu, for Uttara Arcika, Purvardh (first half of the Prapathaka), and U.I. U. 1., for the Uttara Arcike Uttarardha (second half of the Prapathaka).

With reference to the Atharvaveda, in Atharva I.1.1., Atharva stand for the Atharvaveda, the first numeral for the Khanda, the second for the Varga, and the third for the Mantra.

Similarly, with reference to the first Brahmana, At stands for th Attareya, the first number for Pancika, the second for Kandika. In Sa I.1.1.1, Sa stands for Satapatha, the first numeral for Kanda, the second fo Prapathaka, the third for Brahmana, and the fourth for Kandika. Th Brahmanas of the Samaveda are numerous. Out of them the Brahman cited will be indicated by the abbreviations in our commentary where i may occur. One of them is Chandogya by name. In this case Cha. stand for Chandogya, the first numeral for Prapathaka, the second for Khanda and the third for Mantra. Similarly, Go. stands for the Gopatha Brahmana the first numeral for Prapathaka, and the second for Brahmana.

With reference to the Śāstras, in Mī. I.1.1., Mī. stands for Mīmānsā the first numeral for Adhyaya, the second for Pāda, and the third for the Sutra. In Vai. I.1.1., Vai. stands for Vaisesika, the first numeral for Adhyaya, the second for Ahnika, and the third for the Sutra. Nyā will stand for the Nyāya Śāstra. The other references are equal to the previous Śāstras. In Yo. I.1, Yo, stands for Yoga Śāstra, the first numeral for the Pada, and the second for the Sutra. In San. 1.1., San. stands for the Sankhya Śāstra, the first numeral for the Adhyaya, and the second for the Sūtra. In Ve. I.1.1., Ve. stands for Vedanta, the first numeral for the Adhyaya, the second for the Pada, and the third for the Sūtra.

Among the (six) Angas, the first is Grammar. In this case A. stands for the Aṣṭādhyāyī, the first numeral for Adhyāya, the second for Pāda, and the third for Sūtra. The quotations from the Mahābhāṣya will be indicated by means of the Sūtras of the Aṣṭādhyayī. In citing the commentary of the Mahābhāṣya on a Sūtra, we shall refer to the Sūtra itself. In the quotations from the Nighaṇṭu and the Nirukta, Nigh. will stand for the former and Nir. for the latter. Their divisions are similar; the first numeral stands for Adhyāya and the second for the Khaṇḍa. In Tai. I.1., Tai. stands for the Tāittirīya-Āraṇyaka, the first numeral for the Prapāṭḥāka, and the second for the Anuvāka.

These references are meant for finding out the sources of citations from the books so that it may be possible for a (curious) reader to consult the original with the help of these abbreviations. If we happen to quote from other works, we shall give the detailed references once and shall refer to them by means of abbreviations after that.

CONCLUDING REMARKS

- (1) "Now this concise Introduction (to our commentary on the Vedas) has been finished. It brings to light the purpose and purport of the Vedas in a comprehensive and lucid (style). It will yield all desires of and will cause honour (to those who will study it). It is a treasure-house of all unblemished methods (of interpretation) and is based on (series of) evidence from the authentic Scriptures. After this, I undertake the work of writing commentary (Bhāşya) on the Vedas which will be supported by genuine proofs with intelligent devotion to the Lord."
- (2) "Let the wise bear in mind the following order to be observed (by us) here, e.g. (1) Introductory Statement, (2) The Mantra, (3) The Pada-Text, (4) Word-meaning, (5) Prose order and

(6) Gist or purport."

(3) "O Lord, Creator (of the universe)! dispel all our troubles and calamities and bestow upon us only what is good."

(YV. XXX.3; KV. V 82.5)

Thus, this introduction to the Commentary on the four Vedas, the Rg Veda etc., by Parama Hansa-Parivrājaka-Ācārya Srī Svāmī Dayānanda Sarasvatī, ends which is adorned with Sanskṛta-Hindi languages and is based on valid proofs.

BIOGRAPHY OF SVAMI DAYANANDA

"God bestows upon the Sacrificer, a son, the best of the highest merits; of deep devotion; of an invincible spirit and the bringer of glory to his parents."*

(RV. V.25.5)*

Birth Place :

A separate state by name Saurastra has been created under the new Constitution of the Republic of India. It was formerly known as Kathiawar—Gujerat, during the British Rule in India. It lies at a short distance from the North-Western coast of the Indian Peninsula. The great Svāmī was born in A.D. 1824 (i.e. 1881 Vikrama Era) in the village Tankārā of the Morvi State in Kathiawar.

Parentage

Dayānanda's forefathers belonged to this State. His father, by name Karaśanajī Lālajī Tivārī, lived in a magnificent house in Jivapur street. He was a Brāhmaṇa, with a sub-caste Audīcya. His eldest son, Mūlajī, became known later on by the illustrious name of Dayānanda. Mūlajī had two brothers—Ballabhajī and another, whose name could not be traced out. One of his sisters died of cholera. Ballabhajī also left this mortal world two years after his marriage. The eldest sister Prema Baī was married to Mangalajī who became the heir of Karśanajī **

^{} This statement is based on the traditional records (Bahī Khātā) of Prabhā Śankara or Popaţa Rāwala who was the successor of Mangaljee.

⁽See, Harish Chandra—Dayananda Sarasvatī, p. 6). But according to Pandit Lekh Ram, Dayananda's father's name was Ambasankara and Karsanaji, the father of Mulaji was a big landlord and considered wealthy enough to engage in the business of money-lending. He was a Brahmana of the highest order, learned in the Vedic lore and held in great respect on that account. He secured the high rank of Jamadar or Jamedar, i.e. a Revenue Collector of the State. He was a worshipper of Siva and was much noted for his intense devotion and austerity. He was thoroughly orthodox and uncompromising in his religious beliefs and practices. Nothing could deter him from the strict observance of the religious rituals. He was firm and fearless. He could not tolerate even the slightest deviation from the letter of the Law as ordained in the scriptures. He was a man of resolve, strong faith and dour temper. His mother, on the other hand, was the embodiment of sweetness, gentleness and virtues. She was an uneducated, typical Indian lady, but possessed all the qualities of a virtuous mother and a very remarkable sense of efficient domestic management. Being a lady of generous heart, she was endowed with limitless sympathies and unending benevolence. Svami Davananda thus had the advantage of inheriting a strong will from his father and a benevolent mind from his mother.

Dawn of knowledge

It is on the authority of Dayananda himself that we know that his education commenced when Mulaji (he) was five years of age. When he was eight, he was invested with the sacred thread. From this time begins his life as a Brahmacarin, i.e. a celibate religious student.

Siva-Rātri: As the father was an extremely orthodox devotee of Siva, no wonder, that he intended Mūlajī or Mūlasankara to grow into a staunch Saivite. But the Fate had decreed otherwise.

Śiva was the god of the family. Siva-Rātri is one of such days when every Śiva-worshipper is expected to observe fast for about thirty-six hours or even more. Dayānanda was fourteen when his father insisted on his keeping the fast in the strictly orthodox way. The mother could not like it but had to agree when her son himself expressed his desire to his son was named as Mulasankara. (See Lekh Ram—महर्षि दयानन्द सरस्वती का जीवन-चरित, 'p. 20. Devendra Natha Mukhopādhyāya gives ''Dayārāma'' as his earlier name (See—महर्षि दयानन्द सरस्वती का जीवन-चरित—Appendix-I)—मूलजी or मूलगंकर is the generally accepted name of Dayānanda in his early life.

bow before his father's will. Who could have foreseen that Dayananda's father's insistence upon his son's earning religious virtues at the tender age of fourteen, by keeping fast on the sacred day of Siva Rātri, was to result in so tremendous a change in the mind of Dayananda as to turn him into a most virulent and successful opponent of image-worship of his age.

Outside the village, there was a temple of god Siva where all the devotees offered their worship and prayers before the idol of the god Siva. Every year this fast was observed by the people with full faith and devotion. As the fateful evening set in, the father and the son went to the temple outside the village where the rules concerning the worship were explained to Mūlajī in detail. He had to keep absolute fast and to stay awake the whole night repeating and chanting the Mantras and offering various prayers, before the image of Lord Siva.

The worship commenced with congregational prayer and songs. It was full of emotions and enthusiasm. Men and women from the village joined the mass prayer with hearts full of high aspirations and various desires. The first quarter of the night passed off very well. The entire congregation indicated high fervour and enthusiasm. A gradual dullness appeared to be approaching. The intense fervour began to fade in the second quarter of the night. But the devotees still kept on to the letter of Law. Midnight sleep was too strong to be resisted. The worshippers began to feel that nature was rather too cruel to be ignored. One by one the devotees lay prostrate on the floor, overpowered by irresistible sleep, Mulaji's father also could not stand the challenge of Nature. He was the first to succumb and the officiating priest followed suit. But Mülajī, the boy of fourteen, had a mind notto waver. He was resolved not to be beaten, Why should a determined heart ever imagine a defeat? He adopted all measures to ward off sleep and wonderfully succeeded. His hard earned victory, however, was crowned with success, though in quite a different way from the one aspired and expected by his father. He continued his vigil as others could not. The enthusiasm of others was skin-deep, that of Mulaji well sealed deep in his heart. Others showed lip-devotion; his was a hearty "What is sleep to deprive me of the boon?", murmured Mulaji. "The more difficult the ordeal, the higher must be the reward!"

He was mid-stream of his struggle, when there suddenly occurred a common and insignificant incident which changed the current of his life, It was quiet in the temple. There was no sound except the occasional noise of snoring. A rat came out of a hole. It crept on the holy body of Siva. Having satisfied itself that the image was harmless, it began to enjoy the dainty offerings, placed before by the devotees in token of their love for the Lord. The mischief of the mouse was too grave. pure-hearted and simple-minded boy of fourteen was amazed and perplexed at this strange sight. He had been told that Lord Siva was omnipotent omnipresent and omniscient: that the image possessed all glory and power: that it was God Himself and that it had the power of blessing and cursing mankind. What he saw, however, was quite contrary to these things. The image appeared to him a helpless inanimate object. It was too weak to protect itself from the mischief of a mouse. It set the boy thinking earnestly. The boy had a logical mind. The thought struck him like a thunderbolt. The helplessness of the image of Siva had shaken his faith. He could no longer offer homage to the image. He desired to get his doubts removed by his father but the father was asleep. He waited for sometime. But it was too heavy a burden to be borne by the young mind for a long time. He impatiently awakened his father and requested him to remove his doubts. The father was angry, both at being disturbed and at the audacity of the boy. But Mulaji was a boy not to be put off so lightly. He insisted for a reasonable and logical answer. Eventually he got an oft-repeated answer which a considerate and intelligent image worshipper has for this fateful question. He was told that the image was not the real god. It only represented him for the purpose of worship and, "He being worshipped through it, bestows all blessings upon the worshipper." His father's explanations could not satisfy him. The father also rebuked him for his habit of raising doubts and putting questions. He harshly snubbed him. The boy was silenced but not his soul. Mulaji asked permission to go home and the father reluctantly allowed him to leave with a strict warning that he should not break his fast before sun-rise.

The Revolt

But the brave heart of Mūlajī could not see reason in continuing the fast. He had finished with the image-worship and all its rituals. He ran home, broke the fast and went to sleep.

The fateful incident of the Siva Rātri created a ray of light in the young heart of Mūlajī. He resolved to find out and know the Supreme Reality—God—who is Omnipotent, Omniscient, and All Merciful. He fully realized that the image in the Siva's temple was not a real God.

Reality of Death

One day Mūlajī was at a musical symposium with his father. A servant came running to them with a sad news that Mūlajī's sister had fallen seriously ill. The father and the son hastened home. She had an attack of cholera. Physicians were sent for. The best efforts of the experts failed. The patient grew worse and died in a few hours. Mūlajī loved his sister very dearly. Everybody shed tears and lamented. But Mūlajī's eyes were fast fixed at his dear sister's dead body. He looked like a statue, motionless and unmoved. His eyes were dry and lips sealed. People thought that he had no heart. The death of a beloved sister set him on an enquiry into the nature of death. His grief for her loss was too deep for tears. It plunged him into meditation on death as distinguished from life. He left the room and threw himself in his bed and pondered on. "What is death," said he, "and what is life? Is there no escape from death?"

The young seeker was again busy with his studies. He was always thinking of the problems of life and death. But soon he was destined to witness what tended still more to intensify his desire to solve the perplexing mystery. He was nineteen when his beloved uncle who had all love for him had an attack of the disease which had separated him from his sister. It was of a virulent type and baffled all attempts of the physicians. When his uncle lay on his death-bed he was looking at Mūlajī with eyes full of love and tears. Mūlajī could not meet the pathetic gaze of his uncle. He burst into tears and his eyes became swollen with weeping. The end came at last and the house once again was plunged in mourning.

Mulaji could not understand the reality of human existence. He was gloomy and went about distracted, asking all his elders and youngers, and the learned Panditas and Sadhus with whom he came into contact, if they could tell him how death was to be conquered. The reply was unanimous that the practice of Yoga leading to communion with God could defeat death. Mūlaiī meditated over this reply and came to the conclusion that in order to learn Yoga, he must leave home. The worldly temptations after all are transient and death is the ultimate goal of life. He must seek the path of immortality. He ceased to take pleasure in the gay life. He found delight in being left alone. He sat for hours together in secluded corner of his house always brooding over the helplessness of man before death. The nature of aspiration which now filled Mulaji's heart was not long in becoming known to his father and mother. They were alarmed and began to contrive means for preventing their son from carrying out his resolve.

Flight from home

Mulaji's parents thought of a plan by which they decided on tying the lad down by the ties of marriage. All parents, all over the world and in all ages, have thought of marriage to be the best remedy to wean the young minds from the ascetic line of thought. The Buddha's parents and the mother of Svami Sankara tried the same weapon; so did the parents of Nanak. Buddha and Nanak, however, were gentler spirits than Mulaii. They could not resist the will of their elders. who consequently succeeded in their immediate object. But Mulaji resisted the plan tooth and nail and declined to be married. He was at that time a lad of nineteen and by the intervention of friends the marriage was postponed for a year. Mulair requested his parents to send him to Benares where he wanted to prosecute his studies. But the parents had sufficient reasons to suspect the working of their son's mind and not wishing him to lose for ever, refused to accept the request. He, however, was sent to a neighbouring village to prosecute his studies with a learned Pandita who resided there. In the course of his studies, Mulaji revealed his heart to the teacher and requested him to explain to him the ways and means of Samadhi (i.e. meditation) so that death might be conquered. He told him frankly that he (Mulaji) would renounce the world to explore the remedy by which a man could become immortal.

The teacher informed Mulaji's parents whereupon they recalled him home.

The parents now secretly made all preparations for his marriage. The day was fixed. The preparations went apace. The invitations were issued. There was happiness all around. All hearts were joyous except the little heart of the unlucky bird who was designed to be put in a golden cage. Mūlajī protested. His studies would be cut short. But none listened to him.

But the bird would not take to the cage. The parents had not fully understood the unyielding determination of their son. Within a week or so of the day fixed for his marriage, he fled from home. The father, in vain, pursued hard. In less than three days, Mūlajī was stripped of all the valuables he had on his person and the money which he had in his pocket. He became a mendicant, changed his name, assumed ochre-coloured garments and began to search for a real Guru (i.e. a spiritual preceptor) who could guide him into the way of solving the mystery of life and death so that he might be able to attain immortality.

Beeame a Brahmacarin

Mulajī met a Saint, named Lāla Bhakta, who gave him the name of Suddha Caitanya and placed him in the order of Brahmacārins.

Suddha Caitanya learnt that a fair was going to be held at Siddhapur. He was told that a number of Yogins would assemble there. It was a chance for him to learn the Truth. In the fair he happened to see a Vairagi who was his old acquaintance who persuaded him to return home. But Mulaji was not a boy to change his mind.

After a few days, as a result of this meeting, Suddha Caitanya was face to face with his father. His Sādhū's garments were forcibly torn off and his Tumba cast away and he was given a new dress. Suddha Caitanya now again became Mūlajī and was kept under strict guard of the police on his way back home. But once again he gave his guards the go-by. One night when he found his guards fast asleep, he escaped. Before morning he had put several miles between himself and his father whom he never saw again.

It was his final separation from home and all that the word implies. He felt all a son's sorrow for his mother who loved him so dearly, but he had before him a mission. He left home to make the entire world his home. He was leaving his kindred to give himself up to Humanity and the cause of truth.

From all that we know of him, he never regretted the step he had taken—the step which alone made it possible for him to serve his people, his country and his God as grandly as he did.

Search after Truth

For full fifteen years (from 1845 to 1860 A.D.), young Mulaji wandered, North, South, East and West, almost all over (undivided) India in pursuit of knowledge of Truth. During these wanderings he tapped the highest and purest sources of knowledge. He wandered from place to place in search of scholars, men of wisdom and penance of great religious merits. Whenever he came across a man of spiritual attainment and high scholarship, he stopped and sat at his feet. He studied Philosophy, the Vedas, Astronomy and all other works on various branches of learning in Sanskrit, with different teachers. It was during these years that he learnt the theory and practice of Yoga. There was hardly a place of Hindu pilgrimage throughout India which he did not visit. Famous centres of learning were also visited by hlm again and again. In search of spiritual teachers and Yogins he penetrated into the innermost recesses of the Himalayas, the Vindhyas and the Aravalis, the three important mountain ranges in our country. He crossed and crossed the valleys of the holiest of Indian rivers, the Ganga, the Yamuna and the Narmada, and climbed the highest accessible peaks of the hills, which are the sources of these rivers. Mulaji loved Nature and drank deeply from her inexhaustible sources.

Practised austerity

It was in these surroundings of pure ozone and sublime beauty that he practised Yoga. It was there in direct communion with Nature that he lifted his thoughts to God, contemplated and meditated on the deepest problems of life and death and spent hours, days and months in trance, enjoying the supreme bliss and highest contentment. It was there that he made the acquaintance of the best, the noblest and the purest saints and yogins who led a life of uninterrupted meditation and discipline, having subdued their senses to their intellect, their intellect to their souls. For days and months he ate nothing and spoke nothing and passed his time in constant meditation. Many a time, he followed the rivers, particularly Gangā and Narmadā, upto their sources, braved every danger and disciplined himself to a life of hardship and privation.

Initiated into Samnyasa

For some time after his flight from home he passed as a Brahmacārin but within a few years, he was formally initiated by Svāmī Pūrṇānanda into Saṁnyāsa (i.e. the highest stage of life) and was given the name of Dayānanda.

His thirst for knowledge

Dayānanda was not a man who accepted knowledge easily from any authority. He could accept only what was verified or demonstrated. An incident which happened during this period of his life may serve as an illustration. Once, when wandering in the valley of Gangā, he saw a corpse floating in the river. At that time he had some books with him, dealing with anatomy and physiology. The sight of the dead body at once suggested to him the idea of testing, by actual observation, the accuracy of the facts cited in these books. He got hold of the body, cut it open and examined it. Thereupon he found that what was taught in the books was not true. So into the river went the books alongwith the dead body.

Okhi Matha

Secondly, never for a moment did he falter or look away from the ideal which he had set before himself. One day when he could get nothing to eat for days together and was starving, he entered the premises of the well known 'Okhi Matha'. Being a handsome young man of good physique and prepossessing appearance, intelligent, well-read, clever and well-versed in scriptures, he attracted the admiration of the Mahanta who wished to make him his disciple and who offered to nominate him as his successor.

"Come, come, O young Samnyāsin", said the Mahanta, "live with us Become my disciple and partake of all the wealth we have. This rick estate will be yours after me. Live a life of comforts and enjoyments."

The prospect was indeed alluring. Dayananda had been on the borderland of life and death due to long starvation. The Mahanta made a good use of his words and wealth. But the starvation could not dampen his enthusiasm for search after truth and knowledge. He calmly but boldly replied, "My father had more riches than you can give me, O Kind Mahanta. But I have scorned the worldly possessions and comforts. You little think of the pleasure that I am after and the treasure that I have come out in search of."

"What is your object, then ?" said the Mahanta surprisingly.

"Genuine Yoga and supreme bliss", came the reply.

The Mahanta looked at the calm and dignified face of Dayananda where the pangs of starvation were written in bold letters.

Such instances are many. He refused everywhere saying that his goal was different and that he was not seeking wealth and power.

Search for a true Guru

During this period he met crowds of Sadhus and Panditas. Some attracted him and others repelled him. He met a few for whom he entertained the highest respect and at whose feet he sat for long in a spirit of perfect reverence and true homage, but he did not come across a person who came up to his ideal of a Guru. In his wanderings through the beautiful and noble land of his—land of the loftiest, the purest ethics, and noblest traditions, land of the Vedas and the Upanisads, land of Kapila and Vyāsa, land of Rāma and Kīsna, land of Kumārila and Sankara—he found everything upside down. Even the repositories of the sacred lore of Aryas, the representatives of Manu and Yajñavalkya, were steeped in ignorance and superstitions. He found that in that land of eternal sunshine, physical, intellectual and spiritual, everything was shrouded in the pitch darkness of ignorance. Even the best, the purest and the loftiest among men were only moonlike. The sun had set, perhaps never to rise again. It made his heart bleed to observe that a land once distinguished for its freshness and vigour of intellect and force of mind should be so stale, shallow and feeble in its creative intellect. Dayananda was a born rebel and could not accept what was not genuine. He wished to conquer death by conquering ignorance and superstition. His heart was gloomy but bold. He wanted to have a Guru or guide. He searched every corner of the Himalayas with eternal snows and cloud-masked summits. He had conversed with Ganga and Alakananda; he had penetrated the dense and impregnable interiors of the forests; he had passed countless sleepless nights in deep anxiety of securing spiritual solace in the caves of the snowy mountains; he had enjoyed the embraces of the hardest of primeval rock and caresses of the swiftest streams: all these friends of his youth and companions of his wander-years had told him not to seek the peace of repose of an inactive life. They had inspired him with increasing activity. These wanderings had added to the purity, loftiness and strength of his soul.

At the feet of Virajananda

Dayananda was told at last that the blind monk Virajananda o Mathura was the man to satisfy his thirst for knowledge. He had drunl deep into the holy books. He could lead him on to the path of truth.

Svāmī Virajānanda was a Samnyāsin of the order to which Dayananda belonged. Dayananda had left his home because his parent loved him too much and wished to save him from a life of poverty, to whic he was determined to dedicate himself in the pursuit of what they con sidered to be only a fantasy; he had left his home at the compar tively advanced age of 21, by his own choice, to the great sorrow an disappointment of his parents. Poor Virajananda, on the other hand, wa a child of only eleven when circumstances turned him adrift on the worl without any one to care for him. He had lost his parents and was a orphan. His brothers were kind to him but the biting tongue and th cruel temper of one brother's wife proved too strong even for the child a eleven. What added to the sadness of his orphanhood was the fact that h was totally blind, having lost his sight at the age of five due to a virule attack of smallpox. He was too courageous, however, in spite of h blindness and his orphanhood, to submit to the tyranny of his brother's wif He left his brothers' house with a heart full of sorrow. The death of h parents had deprived him of the ties and associations which make home: attractive and sweet. All that was left to him now was his own soul, his ow mind, and his will to make the best of them by his own exertions. C leaving his brothers' house he went to Haridvara, on the bank of the Gang one of the most beautiful spots in Northern India. This is one of t most sacred places and a favourite resort of Sadhus, Samnyasins as Panditas. Virajananda came to Haridvara never to return home. In a fe years he learnt all that the best and the most learned in Haridvara cou teach him. He was an apt pupil and was gifted with a wonderful memor to whose power his blindness had added considerably. The reputation and esteem which he gained by his scholarship and character were so hi as to induce a Samnyasin of high ability and profound austerity to adn him into the highest order of his class, in spite of his blindness. Later life Virajananda migrated to Mathura, another holy place famous as $ birth place of Lord Kṛṣṇa, one of the greatest and wisest of Aryan heroes who have been accorded the honours of Divinity. It was here that Dayananda met him.

Virajānanda was a great Yogin. He took pride in ancient Vedic teaching. He scorned image-worship. He could not tolerate superstitions and intellectual darkness prevailing in the Hindu society. His soul was full of purity and greatness of the past. By ceaseless labour and constant concentration of mind, he had acquired a mastery of Sanskrit language and literature and of all the intellectual treasure therein. Three ruling chiefs of Rajasthan, at different times, became his pupils. One of them continued his studies for full three years, but when one day he absented himself without information, the Svāmī left him without notice and returned to Mathura.

This was the man with whom Dayananda completed his education and who charged him with the duty of inaugurating a mission to purge Hinduism of all the evils that had found admittance into it.

Dayananda had been studying for over thirty years already and what he now required was only a finishing touch at the hand of a master soul. For two years and a half he served the blind monk, showed him the highest respect and love, and learnt all that Virajananda had to teach.

Devotion to teacher

Virajānanda was a man of hot temper and sometimes treated his pupil very harshly. Once he actually inflicted corporal punishment on Svāmi Dayānanda; yet the latter was quite submissive and calm. The Guru one day found a small heap of dirt in the corner of a room which had been cleaned by the pupil Dayānanda. The anger of the teacher knew no bound. Mercilessly he beat Dayānanda with a stick in his hand. The pupil accepted this punishment with reverence and at the end implored his teacher to pardon him and said, "My body is very hard, while your hands are soft and delicate. I request you, for the trouble I had given to your tender hands, to forgive me." Saying this the pupil bowed his head and shed tears at the feet of his Guru.

The anger and the wrath of the teacher could not dampen the spirit of the Seeker of truth. He duly finished the course prescribed for him. Then Virajānanda told him that he had nothing more for him, and that he must now enter the world as an independent teacher.

Goro daksiņā

The day of leave-taking has been a memorable occasion for both the pupil as well as the teacher in India from times immemorial. Education was entirely free in ancient India. Both princes and the poor sat together in earning knowledge. Kṛṣṇa and Sudāmā, Droṇa and Drupada, and Karṇa and Arjuna, studied in the same Gurukula without distinction. It was on the parting day that the pupils had to offer, according to their means, something to the benevolent teacher. This practice is called Guru Dakṣiṇā.

It was on that day that Dandî Virajānanda demanded the customary fee called Dakṣiṇā (i.e. reward). Virajānanda fully knew that Dayānanda had nothing of worldly value to offer him, nor did he himself care for any such gift. What he asked of his pupil was a pledge to devote his life to the dissemination of truth, to the waging of incessant warfare against the falsehoods of the prevailing Hinduism and to establish the right method of education, as was in vogue in pre-Buddhistic times.

This pledge Dayananda gave willingly, and with a solemn joy. And never was any human pledge kept more loyally and faithfully.

Fight for truth

Beginning of the Public life

The first few years of Dayananda's public life were more or less years of preparation for the stupendous struggle to which he had pledged himself. In these years he visited some of the most important towns in India but most of his time was spent on the banks of the Ganga and its vicinity. Wherever he went, he preached and taught. Everywhere his outspoken views, his bold utterances, his novel exposition of the Arvan culture and religion and his profound learning attracted hundreds and thousands of his countrymen to his discourses. He was unrivalled in the Vedic interpretation and scientific exposition of the scriptural truth. Many came to cross swords with him but staved to admire and follow. He issued challenges, far and wide, and held numerous discussions with high and low, students and scholars, and Sadhus and Panditas. He spoke in Sanskrit, since Sanskrit was the language of the learned, and also because the language of upper India not being his mother tongue, he felt a certain amount of diffidence in using the latter for purpose of discourse and discussion. Wherever he went he made a commotion in Indian society. The Hindu theologians, with their myriad followers, whose deepest and most vital interests were so adversely touched by his teachings, were up in arms. They not only abused and threatened him, but even more than once conspired to kill him. During the first five years no fewer than four or five attempts were made on his life. Yet there was a charm about his life, his ways and his manners, which secured for him friends and protectors. He never stooped to prosecute his persecutors.

Not came to imprison people

The great Svāmī was at Anupshahar. A Brāhmaņa presented him with a betel-leaf. The Svāmī could not disappoint a poor Brāhmaṇa and accepted the same. He chewed the betel-leaf and after a little while the Svāmī discovered the mischief as the betel contained poison. The Brāhmaṇa in order to know the result kept sitting there. Dayānanda did not speak a word and quietly hastened to the Gangā and performed Neoli Kriyā—a device of Yogis to wash the intestines. The poison was soon washed out by this action. But a crime, like murder, will out. Sayyad Mahmood, the Tehsildar of the town, who was his admirer, arrested the Brāhmaṇa and sent him to the lock-up. Being satisfied at the action taken against the offender, the kind Tehsildar came to the Svāmī and told him what he had done. But the Svāmī appeared to be distressed and asked the Tehsildar to set the man free. He said, "I have come to liberate humanity from bondage and not to imprison them." The officer was astonished at this reply and set the offending Brāhmaṇa free.

Popularity and personality

In orthodox circles he became famous in a very short time. High and low, rich and poor, from the princes of the highest states down to the coolie, all classes flocked to him, drank in his discourses and gazed at him with mingled awe, respect and admiration. In many places, the public discussions were presided over by the British officers of the highest rank in the districts, this being considered the most effective way of preserving order and preventing rioting and violence. For the first time since the days of Sankara, there had arisen a teacher of the highest order, a man worthy of the mantle of a prophet, a man who at least gave promise of being an Acarya and who shone among other teachers as a sun among the moon and stars.

It was indeed true that he was very learned but few could venture to face him in controversy; yet what surprised and at the same time attracted audience to him were his boldness, his courage, his defiance of conventions of theological controversy and his attacks on popular beliefs and practices. Never before had they seen and heard such a man. In a part of the country, hundreds of miles distant from his native province, the language of which he could not use with freedom and effect, to whose people he was a stranger, with no friends to fall back upon or to protect him in need, he went straight to his work and attacked some of the most cherished beliefs of the population with a scathing vehemence that itself, apart from the force of his arguments, struck terror in his opponents. He had dropped in their midst as a bolt from heaven, and threatened havoc to the beliefs they had held so unquestioningly. The worst, or perhaps the best, of it was that he spoke with so much authority and directness, with so much erudition and confidence, with so much cogency of reasoning and force of logic, that the very first onslaught brought the opponent to his knees. The expounders of popular religions and the repositories of Hindu faith were struck with the suddenness and rapidity of lightning. The attack was so sudden and so furious that fortress after fortress fell without the assailant being made to feel any the worse for his exploits. He swept the country, with something of the effect of a mighty sheet of water descending the hills and carrying every thing before it.

Importance of Kasi

The orthodox leaders appealed to Kāšī, the Rome of Hinduism. That was their last resort and hope and they had no doubt that there the invader would meet foes worthy of his steel and would be routed.

Dayananda, too, well knew that unless he subdued Kāśī and won a decisive battle there, all his victories so far achieved would be useless.

Kāśi Śāstrārtha

So, before the sixth year of his public career was over, he reached Kāśī, and, in his humble way, under the shade of a tree, started preaching and expressing his views on religion, philosophy and grammar. Soon after this a public discussion was announced. It was attended by thousands of people. On one side were 300 of the leading Hindu Panditas and Samnyāsins, on the other Dayānanda alone, with but a few admirers. The meeting was presided over by no less a personage than the Maharaja of Benares. At the close of the discussion both sides claimed victory; but what really happened may be gathered from the following account which was published in a Christian Missionary Journal, obviously written by a European Christian Missionary:—

An account by Christian Missionary

"A Hindu Reformer"*

"The fame of the reformer who lately put the whole city of Benares in commotion seems to have gone abroad. Some account, therefore, of him and his views, and the public disputation held with him, from one who was present at the disputation, and met and conversed with the reformer several times before and after that event, will perhaps not be uninteresting to the readers of the Intellegencer.

The name of the reformer is Dayananda Saraswati Swami. He is a native of some village in Guzrat; the name of the place he will not disclose to any one, from a fear that his father who declares him to be mad, will come and take him forcibly away, as he already once did on a previous occasion. He is a fine looking man, large but well proportioned; his face especially expressive of much intelligence. His outward appearance is that of a Sanyasi or religious beggar: almost entirely naked and besmeared with the sacred Bhasma (ashes of cow-dung). He speaks Sanskrit fluently, though not in very polished style, and in a few instances not quite correctly. He is a good reasoner and pretty fair in controversy, at least so far that he generally allows his opponent to state his case without interruption:

The spelling of this writer is preserved.

φ For example, he denied that the verbal root मन् 'to believe' may form the I pers. plu. pre. मनमहे, besides the forms मनुमहे and मन्यामहे।'

but extremely authoritative in all his positions He devoted himself entirely to the study of the Vedas from his eleventh year and thus he is more practically conversant with them than most if not all the great Pandits of Benaras who generally knew them only at second hand or even less. At any rate, and this is the most remarkable feature distinguishing him from other Pandits, he is an independent student of the Vedas and free from the trammels of traditional interpretation. standard commentary of the famous Sanacharva* is held of little account by him. It can be no wonder, therefore, that his Vedic studies, conducted in that spirit, led him to the conviction that almost the whole of the (comparatively) modern Hinduism is in entire and irreconcilable contradiction with the Vedas and the Hinduism of the Vedic times, about 2,000 Being of an active character, he determined not to keep his conviction to himself, but to impart it to his countrymen, and try to effect an entire reform in Hindu society. Briefly his object is to replace Hindu society exactly into the same state as it was about 2000 years ago. . . At least this is the fond dream of the reformer. But history never travels back in this manner Hence this reform must fail but he may prepare the way for another reform, He may possibly convince the Hindus that their modern Hinduism is altogether in opposition to the Vedas—a fact of which most of them are profoundly ignorant, and the few who know or suspect it find it convenient to shut their eyes to it. . . . They cannot go back to the Vedic state, that is dead and gone, and will never revive. Something more or less new must follow. We will hope it may be Christianity, but whatever it may be, any thing seems better than the present intellectually and morally monstrous idolatry and caste ''

"The date of his arrival in Benaras I do not know. It must have been in the beginning of October. I was then absent. I first saw him after my return in November. I went to see him in company with the Prince of Bhurtpore and one or two Pandits. The excitement then was at its height. The whole of the Brahmanic and educated population of Benaras seemed to flock to him. In the Verandah of a small house at the end of a large garden near the monkey tank, he was holding daily levees from early in the morning till late in the evening, for a continuous stream of peaple who came, eager to see and listen to dispute with the novel reformer. It does not appear, however, that the heads of the orthodox party or the Pandits of the greatest repute ever visited him. unless they did it secretly. The intensity of the excitement at last induced the Raja of Benaras, in concert with his court Pandits and other men of influence, to take some notice of the reformer and to arrange a public disputation between him and the orthodox party, in order to allay the excitement by a defeat of the reformer. . . . but I fear there was a determination from the beginning that they would win the day by any means, whether foul or fair. The disputation took place on the 17th November in the place where the reformer had taken up his abode. It lasted from about 3 to 7 o'clock p.m. The Raja himself was present and president. Even the great Vedantist, the head it seems of the orthodox party, Vishuddhananda Gaur Swami, who is said never to have left his dwellings before—of course an exaggeration—condescended to emerge for once from his place of meditation on the bank of the Ganges to assist with his learning the failing wits of the defenders of orthodoxy and to give additional authority to the anticipated defeat of the reformer—a clear proof that the reformer was thought to be a formidable enemy. All the most reputed Pandits were there and a large concourse of other people, learned and unlearned, but all of the respectable class. A detachment of policemen also were present who guarded the entrance to the garden against a dense crowd outside which in vain strove to get admittance; but they were also intended, I suspect, to protect the lonely reformer in case any act of violence should be attempted against him by enraged adversaries. But nothing of this kind occurred; all went off quietly, except that, at the last, when the assembly broke up, the orthodox party loudly jeered the poor reformer in token of their ill gotten victory. But whether gotten ill or well, their victory had certainly the result they desired. The change was very remarkable in the state of things before and after the disputation. As quickly as the excitement had arisen before, so quickly it subsided afterwards. Whereas, before multitudes flocked to see him, those who came afterwards might be counted easily. The reformer himself was practically excommunicated and any one who would visit him after his refutation was threatened with the same measure. Immediately after the disputation, a written defence was sent by the reformer to his opponents but I believe no notice was taken of it. Then an account of his doctrines was prepared by the reformer and printed about a month afterwards. At the same time also a public challenge to his opponents to answer his pamphlets was issued by him but again no notice was taken of it by the orthodox party. The reformer still remained till towards the end of January. Then he left Benaras to visit the Mela at Allahabad, and to try to influence the multitude assembled there. . . .

"The reformer is not unacquainted with Christianity. He has read the Gospel, though I do not think very carefully. I had some conversation with him about it. But at present his mind is too much occupied with his own plans of reformation to give any serious thought to the investigation of the claim of another religion."

Controversy in the Press

For a long time, a heated controversy was kept up in the Press, both Indian and Anglo-Indian, about the disputation. The matter was so important and of such great interest from the public point of view that even the pioneer, the leading semi-official Anglo-Indian paper of Allahabad, opened its columns to correspondence on the subject. The event was discussed throughout India and aroused enormous interest.

Views of the Hindu Patriot

It would be a matter of great interest for readers if we cite here a few lines from "The Hindu Patriot" (a contemporary journal) dated the 17th January, 1870:—

"The stronghold of Hindu idolatry and bigotry, which according to Hindu mythology stands on the trident of Siva, and is, therefore, not liable to the influence of earthquakes, has lately been shaken to its foundations by the appearance of a sage from Gujrat. The name of this great personage is Dayanand Saraswati. He has come with the avowed object of giving a death-blow to the Hindu system of worship. He considers the Vedas to be the only books worthy of regard, and styles the Puranas as cunningly devised fables, the inventions of some shrewd Brahmans in a later period for subservience of their selfish motives. The Vedas, says he, entirely ignore idol-worship and he challenges the Pandits and great men of Benaras to meet him in argument. Some time ago, the Maharaja of Ram Nagar held a meeting in which he invited the great Pandits and elite of Benaras. A curious and protracted logomachy took place between Dayananda Saraswati and the Pandits but the latter, notwithstanding their boasted learning and deep insight into the Shastras, met with a signal discomfiture. Finding it impossible to overcome the great man by a regular discussion, the Pandits resorted to the adoption of a sinister course to subserve their purpose. They made over to the sage an extract from the Puranas that savoured of the idolatry, saying that it is a text from the Vedas. The latter was pondering over it, when the host of the Pandits, headed by the Maharaja (of Benaras) himself, clapped their hands, signifying the defeat of the great Pandit in the religious warfare. Though mortified geatly at the unmanly conduct and bad treatment of the Maharaja, Dayananda Swami has not lost courage. He is still waging the religious contest with more earnestness than ever. Though alone, he stands undaunted in the midst of a host of opponents. He held the shield of Truth to protect him, and his banner of Victory waved in the air. The Pandit has lately published a pamphlet, entitled "The Satya Dharma Vichara" containing particulars of the religious contest above alluded to and has issued a circular calling on the Pandits of Benaras to show the part of the Vedas which sanction idol-worship. No one has ventured to make his appearance."

Mission of Dayananda

From this date may be counted the effective beginning of Dayananda's mission for a reformed Aryan Church, free from cant, from superstition and from popular error, and worthy of intelligence, genius, and culture of that historic people.

In Calcutta

From Benares Dayananda continued to march eastward and reached Calcutta, the then capital of India. The Brahmo Samaj accorded him a hearty welcome and some of its leading members conferred with him with a view to winning his co-operation for their movements but the Svāmī could not give up his faith in the infallibility of the Vedas and the doctrine of the transmigration of souls, the two cardinal principles which distinguish the Arya Samaj from the Brahmo Samaj. His visit to Calcutta, however, brought him into direct contact and intimate touch with the leaders of the English-educated community. Here he learned their points of view and benefited thereby. For instance, Babu Keshab Chandra Sen, the reputed leader of the Brahmo Samaj, suggested to him the supreme necessity of carrying on his propaganda in the language of the people—a practical suggestion that was readily and gratefully accepted by the Svāmī. It was put into operation at once. This single step made a mighty change in favour of his mission since it brought him into direct contact with the bulk of his countrymen-both educated and uneducated-who did not know Sanskrit and could not understand him except through translation and interpreters. In Calcutta, he made the acquaintance of Maharshi Debendranath Tagore.

Babu Keshab Chandra Sen's first meeting with the great Svamī will not be devoid of interest to the reader.

The Babu came and did not disclose his identity. There was a free talk between the two great reformers, when all of a sudden, the Babu let fly the query:—

"By the way, have you ever met B. Keshab Chandra?"

"Yes, and talked to him also."

"But he was out all these days."

"I have seen him nevertheless."

"How ?"

"I find him talking in your person,"

"How have you been able to recognise me?"

"Your noble appearance discloses your identity."

The Babu finally remarked :-

"How sad that a Vedic scholar like yourself should not know English, otherwise, I should have been very lucky in having you for a companion during my contemplated visit to England."

The Svami at once retorted :-

"It is no less sad that a learned reformer like the Babuji should try to revive a culture of which he knew so little and should talk to his people in a language of which they knew so little."

The above-mentioned interchange of words between the two great ones has a meaning of its own.

In Bombay

After spending another two years in the dissemination of his doctrines, Dayananda proceeded to Bombay, where eventually his mission was to take an organised shape.

Founding of the Arya Samāja

The idea of forming a society which should promote the Vedic religion took shape in Bombay. It was named as Ārya Samāja.

The first Arya Samāja was established in Bombay on April 30th, 1873, Here for the first time the rules and principles of the Arya Samāja were formulated.

Here again, as also at Poona, Dayananda came in close contact with the educated mind of the Hindu community, i. e. who took their education according to the system put into practice by British rulers.

At Lahore

But the next step in the evolution of the Arya Samā ja was not taken till two years later, in Lahore, the then capital of the (undivided) Punjab, a province in Northern India during British rule. Here the Samā ja took its final shape which it maintains at this day also. The principles were finally revised and the constitution re-framed and finalised. All the Arya Samā jas in India, or elsewhere, adhere to these principles.

The Principles of the Arya Samāja

The following are the ten principles which were finally settled in Lahore:—

- 1. God is the primary cause of all true knowledge and of every thing known by its means.
- 2. God is absolute Truth (Sat), absolute Intelligence (Cit.), and is all Bliss (Ananda). He is Incorporeal, Almighty, Just, Merciful, Unborn, Infinite, Unchangeable, Beginningless, Incomparable, the Support of all, All-pervading, Omniscient, Inward Controller of all, Undecaying, Imperishable, Immortal, Fearless, Eternal, Holy and the Creator of the Universe. To HIM ALONE worship is due.
- 3. The Vedas are the books of true knowledge. It is the paramount duty of every Arya to read or hear them read; to teach and read them to others.
- 4. One should always be ready to accept truth and to reject the untruth.
- 5. All actions must conform to Dharma, i. e. should be performed after a thorough discrimination between the right and the wrong.
- 6. The primary object of the Arya Samaja is to do good to the whole world, i.e. to promote physical, spiritual and social good of every sentient being.
- 7. All ought to be treated with love, justice and with due regard to their merits.
- 8. Ignorance (Avidya) must be dispelled and knowledge (Vidya) diffused.

- No one should be contented with his own good alone, but every one should regard his or her prosperity in the common good of all.
- 10. Personal good should be subordinated to the good of the society.

 But in strictly personal affairs every one may act with freedom.

Death

The remaining part of his life—from 1877 to October 1883—was spent by the Svāmī in preaching, teaching and writing books, including the Veda Bhāṣya, as well as in establishing and organising Ārya Samājas throughout India. The only part of the country which the great Svāmī could not reach was Madras.

Influence of his work done before his death

These six years in the life of Dayananda were full of ceaseless, multiple activities. He moved from one part of the country to the other without taking a few days' rest anywhere. In the Punjab, Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan and Gujrat he met with the greatest success. In these provinces a network of Arya Samajas had been established before his death.

Some of the noblest and highest in the land accepted his faith and became his disciples and pupils, for instance, the Maharana of Udaipur, the most ancient and the most respected of the Hindu princes, whose family has wielded the royal sceptre in an unbroken line of succession for over a thousand years. Never had this proud family bowed the knees to the mighty Muslim rulers. Even the great Akbar was unable to win their allegiance, although his son (himself born by a Hindu mother) eventually succeeded in making a temporary alliance with the head of the state.

Maharana Sajjan Singh studied Hindu law and Hindu jurisprudence with this great Svāmi and the company of the latter had for a time very chastening influence on the otherwise dissolute prince. What marvellous change did the company of the great reformer bring about in the life of the Maharana, can be inferred from the following remarks of Pandeya Mohan Lal Vishan Lal:—

"The Maharaja through the Upadesh of Svamiji was a completely regenerated man. When Dayananda was about to leave his State, His Highness presented him with an address written in his own hand saying, "Your stay here for eight months has been a matter of great joy and source of inspiration for me. I can never pay the debt I owe to you for the instruction I have been receiving at your hands. I would request you to stay here longer but I cannot arrogate to myself the privilege of monopolising you—a great teacher intended to do good to humanity. I, however, hope that you will come again and make me happy."

A similar address containing the same request at the end was also presented to him by the Raja of Shahpura.

During his stay at Shahpura, the Svāmī received invitation from his devoted disciple, the Raja of Masuda. Dayānanda accepted the invitation but postponed his visit for the present as he had a mind to visit Jodhpur first. When Raja Nahir Shah of Shahpura was apprised of Svāmī's intention to visit the state of Jodhpur, he tried to dissuade the Svāmī from the intended visit in the following words:—

"The Rajas of States feel pleasure in the enjoyment of the worldly desires. They love to surround themselves with all sorts of means for sensual enjoyments including the woman and wine. They do not tolerate any reform in this matter. Please take care to be a little mild and tactful in your denunciations of evils in the State you are going to."

A fearless reply

The dauntless Dayananda replied calmly:-

"I do not attempt to hew down the more thorny trees with a nail-cutter, I use the effective weapon."

The prince again requested the beloved Svami:-

"It is unsafe for you to go to Jodhpur on sacred mission. The people there are mean, uncultured and rude. You will preach at the cost of your precious life. They may not like what you have to say."

The Svami smilingly but firmly said, "They might as well use my fingers for candles and yet not deter me from the performance of my duty."

At Jodhpur

Not only the prince of Shahpura but the admirers at Ajmer also dissuaded him but Dayānanda being a fearless Saṃnyāsī resolved to visit the dreaded State—all the stranger—and on the 29th of May 1883 he was at Jodhpur. Rao Raja Jawan Singh received him on behalf of the Maharaja Jaswant Singh, who on account of throat trouble could not be present in person at the reception of the Syāmī. The Svāmī was accommodated in the bungalow of Faizulla Khan,

Jaswant Singh in his audience

The Veda-Prachara work was started in right earnest. The series of lectures were delivered daily before the enormously huge gatherings. The audience went on increasing by leaps and bounds. The whole city echoed with his sweet sayings. It attracted the Head of the State and he paid a visit to have a 'Darshana' of the charming Svāmī. Out of reverence, which Maharaja Jaswant Singh had in his mind for the great sage, he hesitated to occupy the chair which was offered to him. The Svāmī writes in a letter dated the 30th June that His Highness frequently paid visits and the members of royal family did attend his sermons.

A Rebuke

But it is alleged that Maharaja Jaswant Singh was a debauch. He was under the influence of an infamous concubine, named Nanhi Jan, who was also called "Nanhi Bhagtin". She swayed supreme in the administration, and corruption was the order of the day. Under the holy influence of the sage, the Maharaja showed signs of changing and the Svāmī became the revered visitor of the palace.

One day it so happened that the Svāmi entered the palace at an unexpected hour (as the great sage wanted to benefit the king more closely) when Nanhi Jan was with the Raja. Having come to know the arrival of the Svāmī at this juncture, the king was at his wits' end. He rashly ordered the removal of the woman. In hot haste the palanquin could not be kept balanced by the carriers; the prince himself gave his hand to keep it steady. The holy sage witnessed this. The Svāmī fearlessly rebuked the king, "A lion in the company of a bitch, Such associations would result in the birth of dogs. To what lowest depth have the Vedic traditions been degraded."

The Svamī retraced his steps.

The Maharaja was remorseful.

To the misfortune of both, but to the greater misfortune of the country, the Svāmī took strong exception to the Maharaja's living with a concubine—a Muslim woman.

Revenge

Nanhi Jan could not stand this rebuke and especially the reverence from the prince for the sage, which she found in store. Could she brook to lose her vantage ground, her high prestige and position? The Maharaja's reform meant a ruin for her. She contrived to have a subtle poison mixed in his food, thereby causing fatal illness.

It was the 20th September. The great sage as usual took milk from Dhaul Mishra—his cook—who was also called Jagannatha and went to bed. At midnight he experienced acute pain in his stomach. Vomiting had done him no good. He at once detected the foul play. The morning saw him still worse. The poison was so subtle that it could not be washed away by his Nioli Karma. In the morning he sent for his cook—Jagannātha.

Merciful to the murderer

As Jagannatha was sent for unexpectedly, he came with a throbbing heart. The Svāmī asked him:—

"Did you tamper with my evening meal?"

"No Sir, I know nothing about it."

"Don't deny what is apparent, O man; speak the truth. You are in danger now" said the Svami calmly and sternly.

"I am so sorry. Kindly pardon me. I was fool enough to poison, your milk."

With these words, Jagannatha fell prostrate at the feet of the kind sage.

The merciful Dayananda had many affections for Dhaul Mishra, the cook, who served him so lovingly. He had taught him (the cook) Sandhya (daily prayers) and the method of pranayama. Jagannatha, too, was very devoted to him. But the allurement of a few thousand silver coins turned him into a treacherous beast and he played with the life of his benevolent master. The great sage even at this point of life and death had all mercy for this deluded dreadful creature. He affectionately and smilingly said;—

"My life, I don't mind, O Jagannatha. My mission is still unfinished. Little do you know what harm you have done to the motherland. But I have nothing to blame you. It was His will."

The Svāmī got up and offered some money to the lamenting Jagannātha saying:—

"Jagannātha, you love money. Here it is. Make use of it. Flee before thy mischief sees the light of day. Fly to Nepal, otherwise you will have to face danger. Lose not a moment. Let nobody know what you have done."

Jagannatha was no more there in the morning.

The Maharaja, of course, had no hand in this criminal conspiracy and was genuinely stricken with grief when informed of the Svamī's malady. He did every thing to provide the best medical aid for him. But there was no relief.

Some scholars have sufficient reasons to believe that the Muslim Doctor Ali Mardan Khan who was a third rate hospital assistant and under whose care and treatment the Svāmī was left by the State had some hand in the conspiracy secretly—the fact which remained unknown to the State and the Svāmī. He amdinistered upon his patient poisonous medicines in extraordinarily heavy doses, i.e. four times excessive. Svāmī Dayananda himself and another doctor, Suraj Mal, who treated him earlier and remained with the Svāmī in Jodhpur, suspected some foul play in the treatment of Dr. Ali Mardan Khan.

Outside the state

The malady of the sage remained a sealed book for the people outside the Jodhpur State till the 12th October. On this day a disciple of the sage who was also a member of the Ajmer Arya Samāja read a news item in the Rajput Gazette. It moved the Arya Samāja world and L. Jeth Mal ran to Jodhpur. Here be sent telegraphic messages to all Arya Samājas.

The sad hours

How gloomy it was to find the precious life of the great sage being put under the treatment of a third class physician whose genuine sincerity was an object of doubt and suspicion.

At Ajmer

The great Svāmī was removed in a precarious condition to Mount Abu. The doctors and physicians did their best but of no avail. Then he was shifted to Ajmer, But to the dismay of the doctors, there was no relief and the Svāmī was at his death-bed now.

The shades of evening were closing fast. The Svāmī got himself shaved and desired Svāmī Atmananda and Gopāla Giri to be called for.

"What is your wish?"

"Only that you should recover."

"No. What is left of this mortal frame now?"

Then the Svāmī asked all the present to stand behind him. Guru Datta, the well-known agnostic, was amongst them. The Svāmī was in meditation. A strange light—the glow of vicinity to God—shone on his face. Then he opened his eyes and repeated three times the Gāyatrī Mantra and again closed his eyes. Suddenly the Svāmī opened his eyes again and said, "Lord! Thy will be done."

It was the dark night of Divālī—when the people throughout the country were busy in kindling the lights for illumination of their houses. A divine light at that time left this mortal home to embrace the Supreme Lord.

The last conversion

This sad event took place on the 30th October, 1883. Those who were present by the side of his death-bed were unanimous in testifying to the fact that he was perfectly calm at the time of his death, the exact time of which he had foretold several hours before. Guru Datta, the agnostic, was no longer an agnostic now. He was henceforth a believer in the Guru. And he lived and died in preaching Vedic mission according to his Guru's concept.
